 wife Chéng Hsiu knew that the king was delighted with the new woman, so she took extraordinary care of the newcomer, having her favorite kinds of clothing and wife serves a husband is by sensual pleasure, and to be jealous is their inborn nature. Here Chéng Hsiu knows how I delight in the newcomer, and exceeds even my own favor of her. This is the behavior of a filial son to a father, or a loyal minister to a ruler." When Chéng Hsiu knew that the king assumed she was not jealous, she went on to tell the newcomer, "The king has fal-

 So when you are with the king, be sure to cover your nose." When the newcomer was with the king, she accordingly covered her nose. The king asked Chéng Hsiu, "Why is it that when the newcomer sees me she covers her nose?" Chéng Hsiu said, "I could tell you."

 gave orders to cut off her nose, and refused to counter-

A savory for the cognoscenti: this graph and its variant 辨 are read ㄅㄢ̄ bāi in Mandarin. The only word to have that sound means “twist apart, separate.” That reading could be a regular development from Archaic Chinese puāt or puāt or pep or pep, to be put in set 142 or 229, except for one thing: none of the medieval rime books has a syl that could be intermediate between the two. We need not doubt the Chinese origin of bāi, but its Mandarin pronunciation must be recent, perhaps as an inter-dialectal locm. That graph may have 分 as primary phonetic or it may be dual-signific.

The Archaic reading d'wad comes from the 廣韻反切文彙 /d'wai, taking the phonetic 扮 as a scribal distortion of 挽 d'wāt. Ancient Chinese /d'wai: would yield Mandarin ㄅㄢ̄ zhūai. (The 反切 of 集韻, 柱買, which 康熙 unaccountably prefers to those of 廣韻, could make either ㄅㄢ̄ zhūai or ㄅㄢ̄ zhài.) A word wr 拽 meaning “drag” is the only one to have the sound zhūai in Mandarin. None of the medieval rime books gives 拽 a reading which by regular development from Ancient Chinese would yield anything like zhūai in any tone. The word itself is very likely Chinese in origin since plausible comparands can be found in Archaic, such as 撮 tsuāt “pull,” but neither pronouncing it zhūai nor writing it 拽 can be traced back even to Ancient, let alone Archaic. There is a word 欸 d'war/iū: “drag” whose regular Mandarin reading would be yào; one can imagine plausible doublets of it such as d'war that might yield zhūai.

And the graph 扮, besides readings associating it with phonetic 分, is given the reading /ɣ'wai: by 廣韻, unlikely for phonetic 分 but quite in order if that 扮 is a distortion of 扮. Or, as the 穴 of 欸 is a variant of 允 d'iūr, the 分 of 扮 might be a distortion of 穴 g'iwet.

This is an illustration, and far from a unique one, of what a mistaken notion it is to try to read old Chinese texts in sinological Pekinese hoping to get an understanding of them from “the meanings of the characters.”

魏：晉帝難於失信不許 The Chin emperor, objecting to the breach of faith, refused permission.

非：難 I Object. (essay title)

非：晉文公將與楚人戰召舅犯問之曰吾將與楚人戰彼眾我寡為之奈何舅犯曰臣聞之繁禮君子不厭忠信戰陣之間不厭詐偽君其詐之而已矣 The Cynosure Marquess of Chin was about to do battle with Ch'u. He summoned Chiu Fan and asked about it, "We are about to do battle with Ch'u. They are many and we are few. What can we do about that?" Chiu Fan said, "I have heard that in elaborate ceremony a courtier can never have too much integrity and reliability, but in maneuvering for position in battle, he can never have too much deceit and falsehood. Let YL deceive them, that's all there is to it."

非：文公辭舅犯因召雍季而問之曰我將與楚人戰彼眾我寡為之奈何雍季對曰焚林而田偷取多獸後必無獸以詐遇民偷取一時後必無復文公曰善辭雍季 The Cynosure Marquess dismissed Chiu Fan and summoned Yung Chi. He asked about it, "We are about to do battle with Ch'u. They are many and we are few. What can we do about that?" Yung Chi replied, "If you set fire to the forest and capture the animals you'll get lots of them but later there won't be any. If you deal deceptively with the populace, you'll win the day but you won't ever be able to do that again." The Cynosure Marquess said, "Good," and dismissed Yung Chi.

非：以舅犯之謀與楚人戰以敗之歸而行爵先雍季而後舅犯群臣曰城濮之事舅犯謀也夫用其言而後其身可乎文公曰此非君所知也夫舅犯言一時之權也雍季言萬世之利也仲尼聞之曰文公之霸也宜哉既知一時之權又知萬世之利 He used Chiu Fan's scheme to do battle with the Ch'u, and by means of it he won. Having returned, in toasting the victory he put Yung Chi first and Chiu Fan after. One of his court said, "The affair of Ch'eng P'u was Chiu Fan's plan. To adopt his plan but low-rate the man himself—can that be done?" The Cynosure Marquess said, "You don't know what you are talking about. Chiu Fan spoke of getting the advantage in a particular situation. Yung Chi spoke of the eternal benefit of posterity." Chung-ni's judgment on it was, "How appropriate that the Cynosure Marquess became overlord. Having perceived where the advantage lay in a particular situation, he also perceived the eternal benefit of posterity."

非：或曰雍季之對不當文公之問凡對問者有因問小大緩急而對也所問高大而對以卑狹則明主弗受也今文公問以少遇眾而對曰後必無復此非所以應也 In rebuttal, I say that Yung Chi's reply was not appropriate to the Cynosure Marquess's question. Always in replying to a question, one goes by its degree of importance and of urgency in replying. If what is asked is high and great and the reply is low and cramped, an intelligent ruler will not accept it. Here the Cynosure Marquess asked about opposing a large force with small one, and the reply was in terms of not being able to do it again. That is not the kind of answer that was called for.

非：且文公不知一時之權又不知萬世之利戰而勝則國安而身定兵強而威立雖有後復莫大於此萬世之利奚患不至戰而不勝則國亡兵弱身死息拔拂今日之死不及安暇待萬世之利待萬世之利在今日之勝今日之勝在詐於敵詐敵萬世之利而已故曰雍季之對不當文公之問 Also, the Cynosure Marquess failed to perceive where the advantage lay in a particular situation and moreover failed to perceive the eternal benefit of posterity. If he won that battle his state would be secure and his position firm, his army strong and his authority established. Regardless of whether it could be done again or not, that was the most important thing. And then how would that prevent the eternal benefit of posterity? But if he lost that battle his state would be imperiled, its army weakened, he himself dead, his name and progeny uprooted and swept away. If the chance of dying today were not a pressing matter, how would he have the leisure to wait for the eternal benefit of posterity? Waiting for the eternal benefit of posterity depends on today's victory, which depends on deceiving the enemy. Deceit is nothing other than the eternal benefit of posterity. Therefore I say Yung Chi's reply was not appropriate to the Cynosure Marquess's question.

非：且文公又不知舅犯之言舅犯所謂不厭詐偽者不謂詐其民請詐其敵也敵者所伐之國也後雖無復何傷哉 Furthermore, the Cynosure Marquess did not notice what Chiu Fan said. What Chiu Fan meant by "he can never have too much deceit and falsehood" was not deceiving the people; he was suggesting deceiving the enemy. The enemy is a state which one is attacking; even if it can't be done that way again, what harm would that do?

非：文公之所以先雍季者以其功耶則所以勝楚破軍者舅犯之謀也以其善言耶則雍季乃道其後之無復也此未有善言也舅犯則以兼之矣舅犯曰繁禮君子不厭忠信者忠所以愛其下也信所以不欺其民也夫既以愛而不欺矣言孰善於此然必曰出於詐偽者軍旅之計也舅犯前有善言後有戰勝故舅犯有二功而後論雍季無一焉而先賞文公之霸不亦宜乎仲尼不知善賞也 Was the Cynosure Marquess's reason for putting Yung Chi first his success? But the means of the smashing defeat of Ch'u was Chiu Fan's planning. Was it his good advice? But all he pointed out was that it could not be done again. There was no good advice there. Thus Chiu Fan wins on both counts. In Chiu Fan's remark that in elaborate ceremony a courtier can never have too much integrity and reliability, integrity is a way of caring for one's inferiors and reliability is a way of not cheating one's people. What advice is better than that? But where one must stoop to deceit and falsehood is in planning military maneuvers. Chiu Fan first gave good advice and then gave victory in battle but was ranked low. Yung Chi had neither but was rewarded first. Saying, "How appropriate that the Cynosure Marquess became overlord," Chung-ni couldn't judge skillful rewarding.

非：歷山之農者侵畔舜往耕焉期年則正河濱之漁者爭坻舜往漁焉期年而讓長東夷之陶者器苦窳舜往陶焉期年而器牢仲尼歎曰耕漁與陶非舜官也而舜往為之者所以救敗也舜其信仁乎乃躬藉處苦而民從之故曰聖人之德化乎 The farmers at Li-shan encroached on each other's field-boundaries. Shun went to farm among them and a year later the ditches and fields were all correct. The fishermen along the Yellow River bank quarreled over sandbars. Shun went to fish among them and a year later the younger ones gave way to the elders. The potters of Tung-yi made flimsy pots. Shun went to pot among them and a year later the pots would stand up to wear. Chung-ni sighed and said, "Farming, fishing and potting were not part of Shun's office. That even so he went to perform them was so as to retrieve a deteriorated situation. Was not Shun truly benevolent in that he himself farmed and lived in labor so that the people would follow him?"

Thus I say the power of the sage converts others." 非：或問儒者曰方此時也堯安在其人曰堯為天子然則仲尼之聖堯奈何聖人明察在上位將使天下無姦也今耕漁不爭陶器不窳舜又何德而化舜之救敗也則是堯有失也賢舜則去堯之明察聖堯則去舜之德化不可兩得也 In rebuttal I ask the Confucians where Yao was all this time. If they say Yao was emperor then what becomes of Chung-ni's calling Yao a sage? A sage sees all clearly, and in his high position should prevent any treachery in the world. So here when the fishermen and farmers stopped fighting and the pots were not flimsy any more, what had any power of Shun's to do with this conversion? But if it was Shun that retrieved a deteriorated situation, then that means Yao must have misperformed his function. If you praise Shun you rule out clear-sightedness in Yao; if you call Yao a sage, you rule out power to convert in Shun. It can't be had both ways.

b. fig. to prefer, to feel inclined to

This is a convenient place to mention an idiom that can be misunderstood by those who try to impose the structure of another language on CC, namely the putative causative use of stative verbs.
 Given a nuclear sentence like 山: 其木多棕 Its trees are mostly windmill palms.

 an English speaker needs to resist a strong tendency to see a pair of nouns, the first modified by a possessive pronoun, the second by an adjective, plunked down side by side as if to make an appositional sentence missing its final 也 (q), instead of subj-fac-obj. The negated form of such sentences is formed with the standard nuclear negative:

淮: 聖人不高山不廣河 For sages there are no high mountains nor broad rivers.

With statives that translate to English adjectives, as 多, 高 and 廣 in the examples above, a trick that often works is to translate the stative factor as "have + adjective", so 多 (q) becomes "have many". A fine example may be seen under 殊.

The same trick usually works for numbers:

荀: 蟹八跪而二螯 A crab has eight legs and two claws.
 which also get the standard nuclear negative:

史: 治世不一道 There is no single way to put the world in order.

左: 食不二味 His food did not have two tastes.

左: 不三月不至 If we don't have three months we won't get there.

This idiom is open, so far as I can tell, to any stative verb, including many for which that trick does not work, such as 皆, 果, 是, 非 and 必, and also to nouns in their very common, and in my view entirely regular, use as putative causative factors, as in this nuclear sentence:

呂: 鼠前而兔後 It has a front end like a rat and a rear end like a rabbit.

The stative verb 寧 seems a good choice as type word of this idiom. V. discussion of 海大魚 under 大.

左: 寧僭無濫與其失善寧其利淫 Better error than excess. Compared to mistreating the skillful it is better to reward the sloppy.

淮: 寧百刺以針無一刺以刀 Better a hundred stabs with a needle than one stab with a knife.

淮: 寧一引重無久持輕寧一月饑無一句餓
 Rather pull a heavy load once than carry a light one for a long time; rather go hungry for a month than starve for ten days.

史: 寧為雞口無為牛後 Better be a chicken's mouth than a cow's arse. [nr]

莊: 此龜者寧其死為留骨而貴乎寧其生而
 曳尾於塗中乎 Now do you suppose this turtle would of its own prefer to be highly honored dead preserved bones or to be alive dragging its tail in the mud?

史: 漢王方蒙矢石爭天下諸生寧能鬥乎
 When the king of Han was fighting for the world while arrows and stones came at him, would you gentlemen have then preferred that you be able to fight?

楚: 將啞訾[栗→]粟斯啞啞儒兒以事婦人乎 寧廉潔正直以自清乎 Should I flatter and dissemble, forced to act like a submissive dependent child to the consorts? Or would it be better for me to have a rigid integrity so as to keep myself unblemished?

liãr 2.11 ritual; formal behavior 4 禮 禮 禮
 The senses of this word share the notion of demonstrative behavior that, relying on established convention, illustrates feelings that are otherwise incommunicable. Such behavior is manifest throughout the vertebrata and arthropoda as instinct, but the ability to replace instinctive responses with learned ones that accord with explicit convention seems particularly human. The origin, nature and effects of 禮 are of deep interest as aspects of statecraft, and are widely discussed and intensely disputed in the classical period.
 The institution of court ritual at the beginning of the Han dynasty is described in 史記 in the biography of 叔孫通 qv.
 A conjecture worth entertaining is that the senses of this word derive from formerly distinct words whose pronunciation has merged. One such division might be along a line between formalized behavior toward other humans and ritualized behavior toward supernatural entities. The first would have had an l- initial as far back as I can trace (ie ca 5th C BC) and would have comparands in set 4 "splay", while the second would get its Ancient l- initial from an Archaic g- and would have comparands in set 44 "hope".
 孟: 禮之實節文斯二者是也 The content of ritual: to be a prescriptive pattern to these two is its proper role.
 史: 禮者因時世人情為之節文者也 What ritual is is a prescriptive pattern made to suit the human qualities of the customs of a particular era.
 史: 法古無過循禮無邪 If you take the ancients as model you will make no mistake; if you follow prescribed behavior you will never go wrong.
 史: 三代不同禮而王五伯不同法而霸 The three dynasties reigned with different rites; the five overlords led the world with different laws.

非: 儒以文亂法俠以武犯禁而人主兼禮之此所以亂也 Confucians disrupt the law with their humanism. Braves violate prohibitions with their swagger. Yet rulers treat all of them with courtesy. This is how disruption happens.
 論: 子曰殷因於夏禮所損益可知也周因於殷禮所損益可知也其或繼周者雖百世可知也 The master said, "Yin continued the rites of Hsia; what they subtracted and added can be known. Chou continued the rites of Yin; what they subtracted and added can be known. Whatever succeeds Chou can be known even after a hundred generations."
 莊: 性情不離安用禮樂 If our instinctive feelings had not become separated, to what would we apply ritual and music?
 禮: 體天地法四時則陰陽順人情故謂之禮 It manifests sky and earth, takes the four seasons as its model, gets its principle from yin and yang and accords with human feeling; thus we call it li.
 禮: 唯禽獸無禮故父子聚麀 It is just because animals lack li that sire and get share dams.
 荀: 禮之所以正國者譬之猶衡之於輕重也 The way ceremony regulates a state we may compare to the relation of a balance to weight.
 左: 初稅畝非禮也 For the first time acreage was taxed, contrary to usage.
 家: 男子十六精通女子十四而化是則可以生 [民→] 子矣而禮男子三十而有室女子二十而有夫也豈不晚哉 The male passes semen at sixteen and the female has puberty at fourteen. After that they can reproduce. But according to custom, the male is thirty before acquiring a family and the female twenty before having a husband. Isn't that very late?
 荀: 隆禮貴義者其國治賤禮賤義者其國亂 Where ritual is exalted and right conduct is honored, the state is ordered; where ritual is skimped and right conduct despised, the state is disordered.
 淮: 聖人制禮樂而不制於禮樂 Sages regulate ritual and music but are not regulated by ritual and music.
 國: 禮以紀政國之常也失常不立君所知也 That ritual is used to control the government is a regularity of statecraft. YL knows that if you lose control of the regularities you will not stand.
 漢: 夫游不失樂朝不失禮議不失計軌事之大者也 The most important things for keeping affairs going right are that in leisure you not let your enjoyment go awry, in court you not mishandle the ceremonial procedure and that in discussion you not lose grasp of what it is about.
 論: 道之以政齊之以刑民免而無恥道之以德齊之以禮有恥且格 If we guide the people by regulations and govern them by mutilating punishments, they will shamelessly weasel out of it. If we guide them by gaining their hearts and govern them by established custom, they will have a sense of shame and will be constrained.
 商: 法者所以愛民也禮者所以便事也是以聖人苟可以強國不法其故苟可以利民不循其禮 Precepts are by their nature what one uses to preserve the folk, and etiquette to facilitate business. The sage, should he happen to find a way to strengthen the state, does not take an applicable precedent as precept, nor does he follow the applicable etiquette should he happen across a way to profit the folk.

 淮:今世之為禮者恭敬而伎為義者布施而德
 In our time, ritual is contrived by acting pious and deferential but being stubbornly unaccommodating, while propriety is turned into the dispensing of largesse in the expectation of a quid pro quo.
 禮:夫禮之初始諸飲食其燔黍捭豚汗尊而

 其死也升屋而號告曰皋某復然後飯腥而直 孰故天望而地藏也體魄則降知氣在上故死 者北首生者南鄉皆從其初 Now when ritual first began, they started it in drinking and eating. When they parched millet and cooked pork at an open fire, tilted
 the jug and drank from cupped hands and flourished their drumsticks while beating drums, they were yet able to express their respect to the spirits. When the time came that one died, they mounted a roof and proclaimed loudly, "Awake, So-and-so, and return!" Not until then did they fill the mouth with uncooked meat and set out cooked food. Thus it was to the sky they looked while it was the earth that held the body. The corporeal animator then sank while the sentient vapor remained above. Thus a dead man's head points north while the living face south. All of this has been thus from its beginning. [This paragraph at first sight has many obscure words. Use of comparands can make them less obscure. Cf 燔 and 焚, 捭 and 曝, 汗 and 倭, 賁 and 桴, 土 and 擣, 皋 and 覺 or 直 and 措. These comparisons make it seem as if the author wrote a dialect having vowel qualities slightly different from CC koiné, and straightforwardly wrote as he spoke. Massive amounts of data will have to be analyzed to enable us to say anything specific about those vowel quality differences. V.

 帝患之 In the fifth year of Han, with the uniting of the world accomplished, the barons honored the king of Han as emperor at Ting-t'ao. Shu-sun Tung completed a set of formal appellations. The High Emperor did away with all the oppressive formalities of Ch'in and advocated simplicity and easiness. When his ministers drank they quarreled over merits, got drunk and sometimes shouted gibberish, and would draw their swords and hack pillars. The High Emperor was displeased at that.

 the emperor was getting more and more fed up with it.
 He made this proposal to the throne: "Confucians are not good for advancing and capturing, but are all right for holding and consolidating. I want to invite various scholars from Lu to initiate court procedures together with my students." The High Emperor said, "Can you make it without vexations?"

 為之 Shu-sun Tung said, "The five emperors had different music and the three kings did not have the same rites. Rites are things that make a prescriptive pattern for human feelings according to the spirit of the age. Thus, "What the rituals of Hsia, Yin and Chou successively subtracted and added can be known" means that they did not follow each other's pattern." I want to select bits from the old rites and the Ch'in procedures and assemble them intermingled." The emperor said, "I permit you to try that. Make them easy to manage. Make them proportionate to what I can do."

 Shu-sun Tung went as envoy to invite over thirty scholars from Lu. There were two scholars in Lu who would not go. They said, "You have served nearly ten rulers, sir, and in every case you used open flattery to get close to them and be honored by them. Now the world has barely been stabilized. The dead are not yet buried, the wounded not yet risen, yet you want to move on to initiating ritual and music. As to where ritual and music arise from, they can only be brought into action after a regime has built its moral influence for a century. I could not bear to to what you are doing. What you are doing does not fit with antiquity.
 I will not go. Go away, sir. Do not insult me." Shusun Tung laughed and said, "You are truly an ignorant scholar. You do not see that the times have changed."

 b. time by clepsydra 隋: 昔黃帝創觀漏水制器取則以分晝夜 In antiquity, Huang Ti initiated the observing of draining water. He specified apparatus for obtaining a standard, and by that he divided the day and the night.
 隋: 張平子既作銅渾天儀於密室中以漏水
 轉之與天皆合如符契也 After Chang Ping-tzü had built a brass turning sky orrery, he timed it with a clepsydra in a sealed room. Its rotation matched that of the sky like paired tallies.
 隋: 減夜五刻以益晝漏謂之昏旦 When we take five notches from the night and add them to the day's drainage we call that morning and evening twilight.
 衡: 皆在徙倚漏刻之間未必宿日有其思也 It

 At the spring and fall equinoxes, the sun emerges exactly at mao and enters at you, and the day measures fifty notches on the clepsydra. Now if sky turns like a parasol, the night ought to be double the day, but in fact it is also fifty notches. Why is that?

 stars of the southern dipper are the sky's ancestral temple. The position of premiers and prime ministers, it governs praising the competent and promoting officers and dispensing honors and emoluments. It also governs the resort to arms.
 b. reward of effort 戰: 魏公叔痤爲魏將而與韓趙戰澠北禽樂

 of Wei was a general of Wei and fought a battle with Hán and Chao north of the Kuai and took Yao Cha prisoner. The king of Wei was delighted. He went out beyond the city wall to greet the returning victor and endowed him with the emolument of one million ch'êng.
 孟: 夫仁政必自經界始經界不正井地不鈞 穀祿不平是故暴君汙吏必慢其經界經界既 正分田制祿可坐而定也 The administration of humane government must commence from field boundaries. If field boundaries are not exact then the well fields are not equal and the return of grain not equitable. For that reason, despotic rulers and corrupt officials will surely be careless about field boundaries.
 Once the boundaries have been put right, the division of fields and allotment of returns can be settled with no trouble.
 c. fortune, fate
 衡: 世俗見人節行高則曰賢哲如此何不貴 見人謀慮深則曰辯慧如此何不富貴有命

福祿不在賢哲與辯慧故曰富不可以籌策得貴不可以才能成智慮深而無財才能高而無官 The common man sees someone's highly disciplined conduct and says, "With skill like this, why hasn't he high rank?" He sees someone's deeply foresighted plans and says, "With intelligence like this, why isn't he rich?" Rank and wealth are destined. Luck and fortune do not depend on skill and intelligence. Thus we say, "You never get rich by stratagems nor gain high rank by talent." One's plans are far-reaching but one lacks capital; one's talent is high but one is out of office.

衡: 故官御同才其貴殊命治生鈞知其富異祿祿命有貧富知不能丰殺性命有貴賤才不能進退 Thus the service of men of equal talent may be destined to lead to unequal rank. The management of their lives by men of equal intelligence may be fated to yield wealth of varying amounts. Destined fortune can be either poverty or wealth; intelligence cannot augment or decrease it. Destined lifeline may be of high or low rank; talent cannot hasten or postpone it.

b. Han men not of imperial family ennobled for merit liatng'io'k'u ㄌㄧㄞˋ ㄋㄩㄥˋ ㄍㄨㄛˋ ㄍㄨㄛˋ man name 列禦寇 列御寇 列圍寇

This man has been identified with the Taoist adept 列子 qv. The 戰國策 anecdote points to his being of the 正名 school instead, and the 莊子 anecdote shows him as afraid to approach a cliff edge, hardly the attitude of a man who can ride the wind. The phrase 御寇 gives the impression of an official title or a sobriquet, perhaps based on the 戰國策 anecdote, rather than a personal name.

戰: 史疾為韓使楚楚王問曰客何方所循曰治列[子]圍寇之言曰何貴曰貴正王曰正亦可[以]為國乎曰可 Chi the scribe went to Ch'u as envoy for Hán. The king asked, "What discipline does our visitor follow?" "I concern myself with what has been said by Lieh Yü-kou." "What does he emphasize?" "Accuracy." "Can accuracy be a tool of government?" "Yes."

戰: 王曰楚國多盜正可以圍盜乎曰可曰以正圍盜奈何[曰]頃聞有鵲止於屋上者[曰]請問楚人謂此鳥何王曰謂之鵲曰謂之鳥可乎曰不可 The king said, "Ch'u is plagued by thieves. Can thievery be stopped by accuracy?" "Yes." "How can that be done?" A short while ago there was a magpie perched on the roof. May I inquire, what do Ch'u people call this bird? The king said, "We call it magpie." "Would it be all right to call it a crow?" "No." 戰: 曰今王之國有柱國令尹司馬典令其任官置吏必曰廉潔勝任今盜賊公行而弗能禁也此鳥不為鳥鵲不為鵲也 "To answer YM's question, you have a president, a prime minister, a marshal and an attorney general. When they assign an office and appoint an official they must say, 'He is honest and can fulfil its duties.'" Now you have thieves and robbers going about openly with none able to stop them. This is for a crow not to be regarded as a crow, nor a magpie a magpie.

莊: 列御寇為伯昏無人射引之[盈]→[盛]貫措杯水其肘上發之適矢復沓方矢復寓當是時猶象人也 Lieh Yü-kou gave Po-hun Wu-jen a demonstration of shooting. When he drew the string he took to its utmost. He balanced a cup of water on his elbow. As he shot them, just as each arrow hit in the same manner as its predecessor, at the same time its successor was emplaced in the same manner. All this time he was like a statue.

莊: 伯昏無人曰是射之射非不射之射也 PHWJ said, "This is shooting for shooting's sake; it isn't shooting when one wouldn't shoot.

莊: 嘗與汝登高山履危石臨百仞之淵若能射乎於是無人遂登高山履危石臨百仞之淵背遂巡足二分垂在外揖御寇而進之御寇伏地汗流至踵 Suppose we try this: I will climb a high mountain with you, we will stand on a precipice and we will look down into a thousand-foot chasm. Would you be able to shoot then?" Then Wu-jen climbed a high mountain, stood on a precipice and looked down into a thousand-foot chasm. He ran around backward. His feet overhung the edge by two inches. He bowed to Yü-kou and bade him come forward. Yü-kou dropped to the ground, sweat pouring down to his heels.

後：理國譬若琴瑟其不調者則解而更張 Ordering a state can be compared to tuning a lute: a string that won't tune is removed and replaced.

新：秦國失理天下大敗眾揜寡知欺愚勇劫懼壯凌衰 When the state of Ch'in lapsed into madness, the whole world fell into ruin: the many oppressed the few, the intelligent cheated the stupid, the brave intimidated the fearful, and the strong bullied the weak.

漢：人君不理則富賈游於市乘民之不給百倍其本矣 If the ruler does not impose order on this then merchants with stored goods will do as they please in the market, taking advantage of people's needs to multiply prices by a hundred times their original amount.

史：文理未明不可以并兼 If the policies of an administration have not been made consistently clear it may not set about annexation.

釋：水小波曰淪淪也小文相次有倫理也 Small waves on a river are called liwən; liwən "ripples" is liwən "relationship"; small patterns succeeding each other have a logical relationship.

人：蓋人物之本出乎性情性之理甚微而元非聖人之察其孰能究之哉 We find that the origin of human nature emerges from the nature of our emotions. The logic of our emotional nature is extremely recondite; except for a great genius, who could fathom it entirely?

呂：辨而不當論信而不當理勇而不當義[法→]決而不當務惑而乘驥也狂而操吳干將也 To speak persuasively but miss the point of the discussion, to be factually correct but for the wrong reasons, to be courageous but act wrongly, or to act decisively but not do what you set out to do is to drive Chi in the wrong direction. It is to wield Kan Chiang of Wu in madness.

後：夫理國之道舉本業而抑末利是以先帝禁人二業鋼商賈不得宦爲吏此所以抑并兼長廉恥也 As to how we keep a state in good order, we elevate the basic work and depress the profit from trade. Thus former emperors forbade having two lines of work and barred merchants and traders from being appointed to office. That was in order to suppress combination and promote frugality and modesty.

史：諸侯四方納貢職道里均矣 The barons and the surrounding peoples sent in tribute of goods and services. The application of the way was equitable.

b. 地理 principles of terrain management (cf 地勢 "features of local terrain")

A man was put to death by erroneous judgement. He had himself arrested on a capital charge. The marquess said, "There are high and low ranks among offices. There are heavy and light degrees among punishments. If one of your subordinates errs, it is no crime of yours." Li Li said, "YS is head of the office he occupies. I do not share my position with subordinates. If my salary were raised, I would not split the increase with subordinates. Now to kill a man erroneous judgement and pass on the guilt to subordinates is unheard of. I refuse your clemency." The marquess said, "If you consider yourself guilty, do you then also consider me guilty?" Li Li said, "Magistrates have a law: for mutilation by mistake, one is mutilated; for death by mistake, one dies. YL took YS to be able to notice details and resolve doubts; thus you made me a magistrate. Now through erroneous judgement I have killed a man. My crime deserves death." He persisted in refusing clemency and died by falling on his sword.

He lived in Ch'i with his horse whip held ready [ie ready to move again on short notice]. His countrymen vied to follow him. When the Cynosure King came to be Overlord of the West, judging disputes in Yü and Jui, they first received the command. Lü Wang and Po Yi came from the seaside to adhere to him. When the Martial King attacked Chòu, eight hundred barons met him at Mêng Chin without prearrangement. [八百 put caus fac + 諸侯 obj = nucl] They all said it would be fitting to attack Chòu. They went on to destroy Yin.

史: 成王即位周公之屬傅相焉適營成周洛邑以此為天下之中也諸侯四方納貢職道里均矣有德則易以王無德則易以亡凡居此者欲[令→]念周務以德致人不欲依阻險令後世驕奢以虐民也 "When the Completion King acceded, the entourage of the Duke of Chou tutored and assisted him. Then they enclosed and developed Chou's Lo city, taking this to be the center of the world. The barons and the surrounding peoples sent in tribute of goods and services. The application of the way was equitable. If you have good will it is easy to become king by dint of that; if you lack good will it is easy to perish by dint of that. Whoever occupies this place should bear Chou in mind, making it policy to attract people with good will. They shouldn't rely on the difficulty of the terrain; that would tempt their later generations to become arrogant and extravagant and to oppress the people.

史: 及周之盛時天下和洽四夷鄉慕義懷德附離而並事天子不屯一卒不戰一士八夷大國之民莫不實服效其貢職 "When Chou came to be flourishing, the world was united. All the barbarians turned into the wind, looked to the standard for guidance, remembered good deeds and kept their adherence, together serving the emperor. Without Chou sending a single conscript to guard duty or a single soldier into battle, the people of both tribes and great nations all came to tender their goods and services and offer their submission in peaceful embassies.

史: 及周之衰也分而為兩天下莫朝周不能制也非其德薄也而形勢弱也 When Chou had declined it was split in two. No one came to court any more and Chou had no control over them. It was not because their influence was attenuated but because their position had become weak.

史: 今陛下起豐沛收卒三千人之以徑往而卷蜀漢定三秦與項羽戰滎陽爭成皋之口大戰七十小戰四十使天下之民肝腦塗地父子暴骨[中野→]野中不可勝數哭泣之聲未絕傷痍者未起而欲比隆於成康之時臣竊以為不侔也 "In your case, you arose in Fêng Fei, accepted command of three thousand troops and went straight to the conquest of Shu and Han and the three Ch'in. You fought with Hsiang Yü in Jung-yang and disputed the mouth of Ch'êng-kao with him, fighting seventy major battles and forty minor ones. You caused people all over the world to leave their livers and brains smeared on the ground and fathers and sons to leave their bones to bleach in wilderness in uncountable numbers. Weeping has not ended, the wounded have yet to recover, yet you want to compare your stateliness with that of the time of Ch'êng and K'ang. In my humble opinion there is no comparison.

史: 且夫秦地被山帶河四塞以為固卒然有急百萬之眾可具也因秦之故資甚美膏腴之地此所謂天府者也陛下入關而都之山東雖亂秦之故地可全而有也 "Furthermore the land of Ch'in is cloaked with mountains and girded with the Ho and surrounded by barriers that make it fast. Should there eventually rise an emergency, a million men could be assembled. Relying on the fastness of Ch'in and with its fine, rich land as your source of sustenance—that's what I call a natural treasure house. If YIM were to go within the passes and make your capital there, even if there is disorder east of the mountains, the secure territory of Ch'in can be kept intact.

史: 夫與人鬥不搯其亢[拊→]折其背未能全其勝也今陛下入關而都[之]案秦之故地此亦搯天下之亢而[拊→]折其背也 "When you fight a man, until you crush his throat or break his back you haven't been able to make your victory complete. If YIM were to go within the passes and make your capital there, relying on the fastness of Ch'in, that would be crushing the throat of the world and breaking its back."

史: 高帝問群臣群臣皆山東人爭言周王數百年秦二世即亡不如都周上疑未能決及留

侯明言入關便即日車駕西都關中 The High Emperor asked his ministers. They were all men from east of the mountains. Their rebuttal was that Chou had reigned as kings for several hundred years, while Chin had perished after only two generations; better make Chou the capital. The emperor was unable to resolve his doubts. When it came to the Marquess of Liu, he clearly said that it would be best to go within the passes. The first day it could be done the carts were harnessed and they went west and made the land within the passes their capital.

史：於是上曰本言都秦地者婁敬婁者乃劉也賜姓劉氏拜為郎中號為奉春君 Then the emperor said, "The one who first said to make the capital on Chin territory was Lou Ching, and Lou is just Liu." He conferred the surname Liu on him, promoted him to household trooper and gave him the title Lord Uphold-Spring.

晉：能以祕祝下神龍每旱堅常使之祝龍請雨俄而龍下鉢中天輒大雨 He could conjure magic dragons by means of a secret incantation.

Whenever there was drought, Chien always had him invoke a dragon and ask for rain. With no more ado a dragon would descend into his bowl and suddenly it would begin to rain heavily.

搜：農夫禱於龍洞得雨將祭謝之孫登見曰此病龍雨安能蘇禾稼乎如弗信請嗅之水果腥穢龍時背生大疽聞登言變為一翁求治曰疾痊當有報不數日果大雨見大石中裂開一井其水湛然龍蓋穿此井以報也 A farmer prayed at a dragon cave and got rain. As he was about to sacrifice in acknowledgement of it, Sun Têng saw it and said, "How could this sick dragon's rain be able to revive the grain? If you don't believe me, smell it."

The water was indeed smelly and dirty. The dragon had at that time developed huge abscesses on its back. When it heard what Têng said it changed into an old man and sought treatment from him, saying "If my illness is cured you must be paid for it." In no more than a few days there was indeed a heavy rain. They saw that a huge rock had split and opened a well. There was nothing wrong with its water. The dragon must have opened this well as payment.

衡：盛夏之時雷電擊折破樹木發壞室屋俗謂天取龍謂龍藏於樹木之中匿於屋室之間也雷電擊折樹木發壞室則龍見於外龍見雷取以升天世無愚智賢不肖皆謂之然如考實之虛妄言也 At the height of the summer season thunder and lightning strike and split trees and smash open the roofs of houses; the common saying is that sky is gathering dragons. They say that dragons are hidden inside trees and concealed between houses and their roofs. When thunder and lightning strike and split trees and smash open the roofs of houses, dragons appear outside. The dragons are gathered by the thunder so as to ascend to the sky. If we look into the facts of the matter, this is idle and frivolous talk.

衡：夫天之取龍何意邪如以龍神為天使猶賢臣為君使也反報有時無為取也如以龍遁逃不還非神之在天亦無用為也如龍之性當在天在上者固當生子無為復在地如龍有升降降龍生子於地子長大天取之則世名雷電為天怒取龍之子無為怒也 What would sky's intention be in gathering dragons? If it employs dragon spirits as messengers then (like a good servant acting as messenger for his ruler) there would be an appointed time for them to return and make their reports, and there would be no reason for gathering them. If we assume the dragons have absconded and would not return, that is not how spirits behave and sky would still have no reason for gathering them. If it is part of a dragon's life-process that it ought to be in the sky, then those that are already in the sky ought to give birth to young ones and there would be no reason for them to come down to earth. If it is that dragons go up and down, and when dragons have given birth to young while down on the ground sky gathers them after they are grown, then there is no reason for the "anger" mentioned in the common name for thunder and lightning, "sky's anger," if it is gathering young dragons.

方食其馬手劍擊殺兩蛟由是言之蛟與龍常在淵水之中不在木中屋間明矣在淵水之中則魚鱉之類魚鱉之類何為上天 Furthermore, where dragons regularly dwell is inside rivers and swamps, not inside trees or attics. How do we know that? Shu-hsiang's mother said, "It is deep mountains and great swamps where dragons and snakes are born." Annals also say that when Giwo crossed the Yangtze a brown dragon bore the ship. When Tz'ü Fei of Ch'ü crossed the Huai a pair of dragons entwined the boat. There was Ch'ü Hsin who dwelt in Tz'ü above the eastern sea; he was brave and strong. Once while passing a magic pool he had the driver stop to let the horses drink. When the horses went to drink they sank under the water. Enraged, he drew his sword and entered the pool to retrieve the horses, and saw a pair of alligator-dragons in the act of eating his horses. By hand and sword he struck and killed the pair of alligator-dragons. Discussing it in these terms, we clearly see that alligator-dragons and dragons are regularly inside rivers and pools, not inside trees and attics. What dwells in rivers and pools is of the nature of fish and turtles; what purpose would fish and turtles have in ascending to the sky?

衡：天之取龍何用為哉如以天神乘龍而行神恍惚無形出入無間無為乘龍也如仙人騎龍天為仙者取龍則仙人含天精氣形輕飛騰若鴻鵠之狀無為騎龍也世稱黃帝騎龍升天此言蓋虛猶今謂天取龍也 What ever would sky intend to accomplish by gathering dragons? Do they assume that spirits in the sky harness dragons for transport? Spirits are inchoate and formless; they go in and out where there is no opening, and have no reason to harness dragons. Do they assume that Taoist immortals ride dragonback and sky gathers dragons on behalf of these immortals? But Taoist immortals contain the essential vapor of sky; their form is light and they fly up in the manner of geese and swans; they have no reason to ride dragonback. Everyone says Huangti ascended to sky riding dragonback. This turns out to be idle talk, like the present case of saying that sky gathers dragons.

衡：且世謂龍升天者必謂神龍不神不升天升天神之效也天地之性人為貴則龍賤矣貴者不神賤者反神乎如龍之性有神與不神神者升天不神者不能龜蛇亦有神與不神神龜神蛇復升天乎 Furthermore, when everyone says that dragons ascend to the sky, they must mean magic dragons. If not magic, they do not ascend to the sky; ascending to the sky is the proof of magic nature. In the life-process of sky and earth, man ranks highest. Therefore dragons rank lower. If the highest-ranking are not magic, would those ranking lower contrarily be magic? Do we assume that there are both magic and non-magic dragons, the magic ascending to the sky while the non-magic cannot? Tortoises and snakes also have magic and non-magic kinds; do magic tortoises and magic snakes also ascend to the sky? 衡：且龍稟何氣而獨神天有倉龍白虎朱鳥玄武之象也地亦有龍虎鳥龜之物四星之精降生四獸虎鳥與龜不神龍何故獨神也人為裸虫之長龍為鱗虫之長俱為物長謂龍升天人復升天乎龍與人同獨謂能升天者謂龍神也 Moreover, what vapor is it that dragons are supplied with that they alone are magic? In the sky there are the images of the green dragon, the white tiger, the purple bird and the dark armored [a tortoise]. On earth there are also those four things, dragons, tigers, birds and tortoises. The essence of the four constellations descends and gives life to the four creatures. Tigers, birds and tortoises are not magic—how is it that dragons alone are magic? Man is the chief of the naked creatures and the dragon the chief of the scaly creatures. If they are both the chief of their kind of creature, and we claim that dragons ascend to the sky, do we turn around and claim that men ascend to the sky? If men and dragons are alike in that, to claim that dragons alone ascend to the sky is to say that dragons are magic.

 漢: 公卿大夫所使總方略壹統類廣教化美風俗也 The high officers of state are the ones whom We commission to organize the coordination of plans, keep chains of command and assignments uniform, broaden Our civilizing influence and raise the general standard of behavior.
 衡: 董仲舒申春秋之雩設土龍以招雨其意以雲龍相致易》曰雲從龍風從虎以類求之故設土龍陰陽從類雲雨自至 Tung Chung-shu expounded the rain-making ceremony of the Ch'un-ch'iu to be that we set up an earthen dragon in order to summon rain, the idea being that clouds and dragons attract each other. The Yi Ching says, "Clouds follow dragons; wind follows tigers." One seeks things by categories, so when we set up an earthen dragon the Yin and Yang follow their categories and the clouds and rain arrive of themselves.

 衡: 儒者或問曰夫易言雲從龍者謂真龍也豈謂土哉楚葉公好龍牆壁盤盂皆畫龍必以象類為若真是則葉公之國常有雨也易又曰風從虎謂虎嘯而谷風至也風之與虎亦同氣類設為土虎置之谷中風能至乎夫土虎不能而致風土龍安能而致雨 A Confucian would object, "When the Yi Ching says clouds follow dragons, that refers to real dragons, surely not to earthen dragons. The Lord Lieutenant of Yeh in Ch'u loved dragons. His walls, partitions, trays and basins were all decorated with dragons. If we must take the image to operate the same as the real thing then surely the country must have had constant rain under that Lord Lieutenant. The Yi Ching also says, 'Wind follows tigers.' It means that when a tiger roars, the wind rises in the valley. The relation of wind to tigers is also that of identical vapor-category. If we make an earthen tiger and set it up in a valley, can the wind then rise? If an earthen tiger cannot bring wind, how can an earthen dragon bring rain?
 衡: 古者畜龍乘車駕龍故有豢龍氏御龍氏夏后之庭二龍常在季年夏衰二龍低伏真龍在地猶無雲雨況偽象乎 "In ancient times they kept dragons as domestic animals, harnessing them to chariots and driving them. Thus there were the clan-names Dragon-keeper and Dragon-driver. In the court of Hsia-hou-shih there were always two dragons present. As the years drew to a close and the Hsia declined, the two dragons crouched low. With real dragons on the earth there still were not clouds and rain; what about with artificial images?
 衡: 禮畫雷樽象雷之形雷樽不聞能致雷土龍安能而動雨頓牟掇芥磁石引針皆以其真是不假他類他類相似似不能掇取者何也氣性異殊不能相感動也劉子駿掌雩祭典土龍事桓君山亦難以頓牟磁石不能真是何能掇針取芥子駿窮無以應子駿漢朝智囊塞墨淵海窮無以應者是事非議誤不得道理實也 "In ritual, we decorate a lei urn with the image of thunderclouds. A lei urn cannot bring thunder, so how can a clay dragon arouse rain? Amber attracts straws and lodestone draws needles, but this is only when they are the real thing, not other things substituted for them. Why is it that other things similar to them lack this attractive power? The type of energy vapor they have is different, so they cannot stimulate each other. When Liu Tzū-chün had charge of the rain ceremony he was responsible for the business of the clay dragon. Huan Chün-shan raised the same objection: how could amber and lodestone attract if they were not the real thing? That Tzū-chün, the most learned man of the Han court, with a veritable library in his head, was at a loss for a reply was surely because the business was improper and his analysis of it false, missing the real-world logic of the thing."
 衡: 曰夫以非真難是也不以象類說非也夫東風至酒湛溢天道自然非人事也 I say he was right to object in terms of its not being real, but wrong in not explaining in terms of categorical similarity.

When the east wind rises, wine turns cloudy, whales die and comets appear. The way of sky makes it so of its own; this is none of men's doing. The thing is of an organic whole with clouds and dragons following each other.

At this point, in contrast to the erudite scepticism he applies to popular superstitions about dragons (see under 龍), Wang will turn his erudition to support of learned superstition about resonant interaction of similarity. The contradiction that this reveals to a modern western mind would not have seemed one to Wang. Rarely indeed will one find a gentleman in any society taking a position that shows his entire social class in a bad light. To ask whether Wang's mentality is scientific or not is to miss the point. He upholds the great tradition that gives his life meaning, questioning only those aspects in which the tradition itself seems to him to have been weakened by the intrusion of vulgar muddle.

衡：事與彼雲龍相從同一實也日火也月水也水火感動常以真氣今伎道之家鑄陽燧取飛火於日作方諸取水於月非自然也而天然之也土龍亦非真何為不能感天 The sun is fire and the moon is water. The causative interactions of fire and water are invariably through their genuine vapor. I cite the technical artisans who cast sun-kindlers to take fire from the sun and make formula-gems to take water from the moon. These things do not happen of themselves; sky makes them happen. Though a clay dragon is other than genuine, why would it not be able to interact with sky?

The lung-lung sound is Sky's voice in anger, just like people shouting hohwoh! No one in the world, whether wise or foolish, denies that is how it is. If we reason by analogy from the ways of humans, this is an idle, frivolous tale.

衡: 夫雷之發動一氣一聲也折木壞屋亦犯殺人犯殺人時亦折木壞屋謂折木壞屋者天取龍犯殺人罰陰過與取龍吉凶不同并時共擊非道也論者以爲隆隆者天怒[响]吁之聲也此便於罰過不宜於取龍罰過天怒可也取龍何過而怒之如龍神天取之不宜怒如龍有過與人同罪殺而已何爲取也殺人怒可也取龍何過而怒之殺人取殺龍取之人龍之罪何別而其殺之何異然則取龍之說既不可聽罰過之言復不可從 Now, thunder is a single occurrence of energy, a single occurrence of noise; when it splits a tree or destroys a roof, it may also kill a man; when it kills a man, it may also on occasion split a tree or destroy a roof. Sky killing a man while gathering a dragon, punishing hidden crimes and gathering dragons, is a mingling of contraries, blessing and cursing at once with the same voice; it is unnatural. The explanatory assumption is that the lung-lung sound is Sky's voice shouting hohwoh in anger. This goes along with punishing crimes but does not fit with gathering dragons. If it is punishing crimes, I can accept that Sky is angry; but if it is gathering dragons, what did the dragons do to anger Sky? If dragons are magical, Sky ought not to get angry when gathering them; if dragons have committed crimes the same as people, why would Sky gather them instead of just killing them? If when it kills people it doesn't gather them but when it kills dragons it does gather them, how are the crimes of men and dragons distinguished and how is the killing of them different? So the dragon-gathering theory cannot be accepted, and moreover the crime-punishing story cannot be allowed either.

pairs of white jade circlets and a thousand bolts of brocade & embroidery were to be used to draw the barons to agreement.

The foregoing sentence, entirely regular and unremarkable in Chinese, displays the aspects of the interaction of CC syntax and word-class membership that tempt speakers of European languages to twist it into something acceptable to the grammar of their own tongue, with results that are misleading, perhaps badly so.

The words 百 and 千, as numbers, belong the word-class of stative verbs. In these four occurrences they function as factor ("make-hundred" and "make-thousand") each with the next word as its object, the pairs forming nuclei. The two syllable phrase preceding each nucleus functions as its subject. Those four nuclear sentences are in turn the subject of the nucleus 以 "be used". The three words at the end, 約諸侯, are fac+obj=nuc, best regarded as the core nucleus of this nuclear sentence, with the segment from 乃 to 以 as co-nuclear.

When they parched millet and cooked pork at an open fire, tilted the jug and drank from cupped hands and flourished their drumsticks while beating drums, they were yet able to express their respect to the spirits. When the time came that one died, they mounted a roof and proclaimed loudly, "Awake, So-and-so, and return!" Not until then did they fill the mouth with uncooked meat and set out cooked food. Thus it was to the sky they looked while it was the earth that held the body. The corporeal animator then sank while the sentient vapor remained above. Thus a dead man's head points north while the living face south. All of this has been thus from its beginning.

 Ch'eng-tzu said not a thing. When Mr. Shih got home, he ordered them cut down. But the ax had only cut a few chips when he countermanded the order. His major-domo asked him, “Why change your mind so quickly?” Mr. Shih said, “There is an ancient saying, ‘It is not good to see fish too deep in the pool.’ That Mr.
 T'ien intends a coup d'etat, and if I show him I am aware of his secret I will certainly be in danger. If I don't cut down the trees, I still will not have offended.
 To be aware of what someone does not speak of, that is a great offense.” So he didn't have them cut down.

淮：鴈門之北狄不穀食賤長貴壯俗尚氣力人不弛弓馬不解勒便之也 North of Goose Gate the tribesmen don't have a diet of grain. They disdain elders and honor the vigorous. Their customs favor those of high energy. Men's bows are never unstrung nor horses unbridled. This because they find that convenient.

淮：齊俗訓 discourse on matching what is customary (chapter title)

淮：率性而行謂之道得其天性謂之德性失然後貴仁道失然後貴義是故仁義立而道德遷矣禮樂飾則純樸散矣是非形則百姓眩矣珠玉尊則天下爭矣凡此四者衰世之造也末世之用也 Acting according to nature is called the Way; getting the sky nature is called the Power. When nature is lost hold of only then does humaneness come to be valued. When the Power is lost hold of only then does propriety come to be valued. That is why if humaneness and propriety are established, the Way and the Power slip away. If ritual and music are elaborated, the original pure simplicity is dissipated. If right and wrong are formulated then ordinary folk become confused. If pearls and jades are valued then the world fights over them. All four of these are inventions of a decadent age, apparatus of recent time.

淮：夫禮者所以別尊卑異貴賤義者所以合君臣父子兄弟夫妻朋友之際也今世之為禮者恭敬而忤為義者布施而德君臣以相非骨肉以生怨則失禮義之本也故搆而多責夫水積則生相食之魚土積則生自淫之獸禮義飾則生偽匿之本夫吹灰而欲無昧涉水而欲無濡不可得也 Ritual is what we use to distinguish honored and humble and differentiate high- and low-ranking. Propriety is what we use to harmonize the separation between ruler and minister, father and son, elder and younger brother, husband and wife, friend and colleague. In our time, ritual is contrived by acting pious and deferential but being stubbornly unaccommodating, while propriety is turned into the dispensing of largesse in the expectation of a quid pro quo. On that basis ruler and minister condemn each other and bad feeling erupts between flesh and blood. They have therefore lost grasp of the root of ritual and propriety, and so they become cross-purposed and demanding. Now if water accumulates, it gives life to fish that eat each other. If earth accumulates it gives life to creatures that proliferate themselves. And if ritual and propriety are elaborated, they give life to the root of falsity and concealment. To blow ashes without getting any in your eyes, to wade a stream without getting wet, are things that cannot be done.

淮：古者民童蒙不知東西貌不羨乎情而言不溢乎行其衣致緩而無文其兵戈銖而無刃其歌樂而無轉其哭哀而無聲鑿井而飲耕田而食無所施其美亦不求得親戚不相毀譽朋友不相怨德 In ancient times the folk were simple, not knowing east from west. Their gestures did not magnify their true feelings, nor did their speech exceed their actions. Their clothing provided warmth but had no decoration; their weapons were pole-hooks and clubs, without edges. Their songs were musical but had no tunings; their weeping was sad but soundless. They got drink by digging wells and food by plowing fields. They had nothing for mere display of its beauty, nor did they wish to acquire any such thing. Relatives did not denigrate or praise each other; friends and colleagues did not feel gratitude or resentment to each other.

淮：及至禮義之生貨財之貴而詐偽萌興非譽相紛怨德並行於是乃有曾參孝己之美而生盜跖莊蹻之邪故有大路龍旂羽蓋垂綵結駟連騎則必有穿窬拊楸抽筭踰備之姦有詭文繁繡弱弱羅紉必有菅屨跣[踏一]跣短褐不完者故高下之相傾也短脩之相形也亦明矣 But when the time came that ritual and propriety came into existence and goods and property came to be valued, then deceit and pretense sprouted and flourished, blame and praise intermingled and gratitude and resentment went hand in hand. Only then did we get the fine conduct of Tsêng Shên and Hsiao Chi, giving rise to the wretched excess of Bandit Chih and Chuang Chiao. Thus where there exist Grand Carriages with Dragon Banners, feather canopies, hanging hand-holds, matched teams of four horses and escort riders, then there must also exist the treachery of cutting through walls, bumping door-bars, pulling out foundation-blocks and leaping barriers. Where there exist fantastic designs, complicated embroidery, thin silk gauze and fine peau-de-soie, there must also exist sedge-grass sandals, bare feet and tattered smocks.

Thus we see how high and low incline to each other, how short and long resemble each other.

淮：夫蝦蟆為鶉水蠶為蟒慈皆生非其類唯聖人知其化夫胡人見鷹不知其可以為布也越人見龜不知其可以為旃也故不通於物者難與言化 Consider how frogs turn into partridges or water-scorpions become dragonflies; neither reproduces according to its kind. Or consider how a Hu barbarian seeing a hemp seed could have no idea that it could be made into cloth, or how a Yüeh barbarian seeing fine hair could never guess that it might make felt. Thus it is difficult to discuss changes with those who are unfamiliar with things.

淮：昔太公望周公旦受封而相見太公問周公曰何以治魯周公曰尊尊親親太公曰魯從此弱矣周公問太公曰何以治齊太公曰舉賢而上功周公曰後世必有劫殺之君其後齊日以大至於霸二十四世而田氏代之魯日以削至三十二世而亡故易曰履霜堅冰至聖人之見終始微言故禮丘生乎象檣炮烙生乎熱斗 Anciently, T'ai Kung Wang and Chou Kung Tan met at the time they were first enfeoffed. T'ai Kung Wang asked Chou Kung Tan, "How will you govern Lu?" Chou Kung Tan said, "I will honor the honorable and be in-timinate with those close to me." T'ai Kung Wang said, "Lu will become weak owing to this." Chou Kung Tan asked T'ai Kung Wang, "How will you govern Ch'i?" T'ai Kung Wang said, "I will promote competence and elevate skill." Chou Kung Tan said, "In later generations there will surely be rulers assassinated and expelled from Ch'i." Sure enough, Ch'i grew larger every day until it ruled the world, but after twenty-four generations the T'ien family usurped it, while Lu grew smaller every day and finally after thirty-two generations it vanished. Thus the Changes say, "When you walk on frost, soon hard ice will arrive." The sage's perception of how a thing will end may begin in an insignificant remark. Thus the mounds of wine-dregs started from a pair of ivory chopsticks, while the human roasting-rack started from a hot soup ladle.

淮：子路撥溺而受牛謝孔子曰魯國必好救人於患子贖人而不受金於府孔子曰魯國不復贖人矣子路受而勸德子贖讓而止善孔子之明以小知大以近知遠通於論者也由此觀之廉有所在而不可公行也 Tz'u-lu rescued a drowner and accepted an ox as thanks. Confucius said, "Everyone in Lu will want to rescue drowners." Tz'u-kung ransomed a prisoner and would not take recompense from the treasury. Confucius said, "No one in Lu will ransom a prisoner again." Tz'u-lu took something and encouraged gratitude, while Tz'u-kung declined something and put a stop to good deeds. Confucius's perceptiveness recognized the large by the small, the far by the near. He was one who knew how to think. Viewed from this, virtue as its own reward is a fine idea in its place but cannot be generally applied.

It is typically Confucian to ignore the possibility of the kind of fraud that a hard-line Legalist might think of, namely collusion between a feigned drowner and a feigned rescuer, who then split the undeserved reward.

淮：故行齊於俗可隨也事周於能易為也矜偽以惑世佞行以違眾聖人不以為民俗 Thus deeds that match the custom can be imitated and affairs that lie wholly within one's competence are easily accomplished. Bragging and posturing to deceive the world, behaving contrarily just to be different from everyone else, are things that the sage would not have become the general custom.

淮：廣廈闔屋連闔通房人之所安也鳥入之而憂高山險阻深林叢薄虎豹之所樂也人入之而畏川谷通原積水重泉鼉鼉之所便也人入之而死咸池承雲九韶六英人之所樂也鳥獸聞之而驚深谿峭岸峻木尋枝猿狖之所樂也人入之而慄形殊性詭所以為樂者乃所以為哀所以為安者乃所以為危也乃至天地之所覆載日月之所照臨使各便其性安其居處其宜為其能 Broad halls, high ceilings, connecting rooms and adjoining chambers are what people feel secure in, but if a bird gets in it panics. High mountains, narrow passes, deep woods and jungles are what tigers and leopards delight in, but a human goes in fear into them. Valleys with streams going back to the source, deep water with multiple springs, these are what turtles and alligators find convenient, but people who enter them drown. The Hsien-ch'i'ih, Ch'i'eng-yüin, Nine Shao and Six Ying are what people consider good music, but birds and animals are startled when they hear them. Deep gullies, steep cliffs, great trees and long limbs are what monkeys and gibbons delight in, but if people climb them they shake with fear. Forms are distinct and natures differ, so that what brings delight may also bring sorrow, what makes one safe make endanger another. So far as whatever the sky and earth cover and uphold, whatever the sun and moon illuminate and make visible, let each accommodate its nature, be safe in its home, live where it fits and do what it can.

淮:故愚者有所脩智者有所不足柱不可以插齒筐不可以持屋馬不可以服重牛不可以追速鉛不可以為刀銅不可以為弩鐵不可以為舟木不可以為釜各用之於其所適施之於其所宜即萬物一齊而無由相過夫明鏡便於照形其於以函食不如簞犧牛粹毛宜於廟牲其於以致雨不若黑蜮由此觀之物無貴賤因其所貴而貴之物無不貴也因其所賤而賤之物無不賤也 Thus the stupid have things they are good at while the wise have deficiencies: a post cannot be used to pick one's teeth while a sliver cannot hold up a roof. A horse cannot be hitched to a heavy cart while an ox cannot be urged to run fast. Lead cannot make knives, bronze cannot make crossbows, iron cannot make boats, wood cannot make cooking pots—each is to be used where it suits. If you apply them where they fit, then all things are equal and none of them has any cause to exceed any of the others. A bright mirror is good for reflecting shapes, but for holding food it is not so good as a serving-basket. A sacred cow, with its hair all of one color, is fit for being sacrificed in the ancestral temple, but for bringing rain it is not so good as a black li-snake. Viewed from this, nothing is either valuable or worthless. Valuing things by how they are valuable, nothing is not valuable; vice versa, nothing is not worthless.

Sun Hsi composed his countenance and focused his will; he piled go-stones vertically and added eggs on top of them. The entourage gasped in alarm; the Numinous Marquess bent double and did not continue breathing. He said, "That's precarious!" Sun Hsi said, "YL has been building a nine-story tower for three years now and it isn't finished yet. That's more precarious than this."

隋:慧體無光傳日而為光故夕見則東指晨見則西指在日南北皆隨日光而指 The body of a comet has no light. It gives light by redistributing that of the sun. Thus when one appears at evening it points east, in the morning west. North or south of the sun it always points in the direction of sunlight.

隋:彗星慧之屬也偏指曰彗芒氣四出曰彗字者字然非常惡氣之所生也內有大亂則外有大兵天下合謀闔敵不明有所傷害晏子曰君若不改彗星將出彗星何懼乎由是言之災甚於彗 A type of comet. If it points one way it is a dzjwad comet. If beardlike emanations go out all around, it is a b'wat comet. b'wat is "sudden", things suddenly go abnormal. It is a source of evil energy. If there is not a massive rebellion within then there will be massive military operations without. The whole world plots together obscurely in secret and they will harm someone. Yen-tzū said, "If YL does not change, a b'wat comet will appear. Why do you fear a dzjwad comet?" From that we can say that it is more disastrous than a dzjwad.

If they are sure of such things with no evidence to go by, they are fools, while if they use them as proof without being sure of them, they are impostors. Thus those who explain and expound from the ancient kings or who are sure they have pinned down Yao and Shun, are either fools or impostors. The doctrines of fools and impostors are confused and contradictory, and a clear-sighted ruler does not accept them.

The king of Ch'i said, "Han is our ally. Ch'in having attacked them, we must go to their aid." T'ien Ch'en Szü said, "YM has miscalculated the situation. Better to take advice on it. Tz'ü-Kuai has turned the state over to Tz'ü-chih. The people won't support him and the barons won't join him. If Ch'in attacks Han, Ch'u and Chao will surely go to its rescue. This is fate giving Yen to us as a gift." The king said, "Good," and approved the Han envoys' request and sent them home. Han assumed they had an agreement with Ch'i, and so went ahead and gave battle to Ch'in. Ch'u and Chao did after all hurriedly mobilize their troops and come to Han's rescue. Ch'i thereupon mobilized its troops and attacked Yen, and thirty days later had taken Yen's capital.

This might be a better story if we were told the exact words the king addressed to the Han envoys. This attack was the occasion of one of Mencius's more notorious quibbles, as to whether he had approved of Ch'i's attack on Yen.

If there is no army outside then the emperor has lost control and many of the populace will revolt. If the halo has five colors there will be rejoicing. If it lacks five colors there will be sorrow.

衡：語稱上世之人個長佼好堅強老壽百歲左右下世之人短小醜陋夭折早死何則上世和氣純渥婚姻以時人民稟善氣而生生又不傷骨節堅定故長老壽狀貌美好下世反此故短夭折形面醜惡此言妄也 They say that in ancient ages people were straight and tall and comely and sturdy and strong and lived to an old age, roughly a century. The people of later generations are short and small and crude and ugly and they die young. Why? Because in ancient times they kept their vapor harmonized and their fluid pure, they married at the proper season and so people were born having inherited good vapor. Further, their growth-principle was not harmed, so their bones and joints grew sturdy and strong. Thus they matured and grew old with comely forms. Later generations reverse this. Thus they are short and small and die young, they have ungainly bodies and ugly faces. This talk is foolish. 衡：夫上世治者聖人也下世治者亦聖人也聖人之德前後不殊則其治世古今不異上世之天下世之天也天不變易氣不改更上世之民下世之民也俱稟元氣元氣純和古今不異則稟以為形體者何故不同夫稟氣等則懷性均懷性均則體同形體同則醜好齊醜好齊則天壽適一天一地并生萬物萬物之生俱得一氣 Now when ancient ages were in order it was due to men of perfect wisdom, and when later ages are in order it is also due to men of perfect wisdom. The influence of such men does not vary from first to last, so their ordering of the age does not differ from ancient times to now. The sky of ancient times is the sky of now; the sky does not change, vapor does not alter. The populace of ancient times is the populace of now; they all are endowed with primary vapor. Primary vapor being pure and harmonious and not different from ancient times to now, why would there be a difference in how their physical forms develop from this endowment? Now if their endowed vapor is comparable then the growth-principle they contain is equivalent, and that means their physical form will be the same. Therefore their comeliness will be equal and therefore their life-spans will match. The same sky and the same earth combine to give life to everything. In getting life everything gets the same vapor. The concentration of the vapor is about the same in all ages.

衡：氣之薄渥萬世若一帝王治世百代同道人民嫁娶同時共禮雖言男三十而娶女二十而嫁法制張設未必奉行何以效之以今不奉行也禮樂之制存見於今今之人民肯行之乎今人不肯行古人亦不肯舉 Kings and emperors have brought order to their eras by the same way for a hundred generations. People have been marrying in all eras by the same ceremonies. Though they may say that a man marries at thirty and a woman at twenty, laws that have been promulgated are not necessarily accepted and carried out. How to demonstrate that? By the fact that they are not carried out today. The regulations of ritual and music still exist to be seen today. Are the people of today willing to carry them out? They are not, nor were the people of ancient times.

衡：以今之人民知古之人民也物亦物也人生一世壽至一百歲生為十歲兒時所見地上之物生死改易者多至於百歲臨且死時所見諸物與年十歲時所見無以異也使上世下世民人無有異則百歲之間足以下筮六畜長短五谷大小昆虫草木金石珠玉蠶蠕動行喙息無有異者 In fact, we can know about the people of ancient times by the people of modern times. And by the same token things are things. If a man lives a whole lifetime his age reaches one hundred years. At the time he has lived long enough to be a ten-year old boy, the birth and death, change and replacement he has seen among the things of the earth cannot be distinguished from those he will have seen by the time he is a hundred years old and approaching death. If there is no way to distinguish between the people of earlier and later eras, then a century is sufficient from which to prognosticate that there will be no difference in the size of farm animals or the height of grain or in how bugs, weeds, trees, metal, stone, gems and jade flutter, fly, creep, crawl, walk and breathe. [He doesn't mean to say that metal flies or jade creeps. I think he added those to the list to reinforce the impression that living things no more change from era to era than do non-living things.]

衡：此形不異也古之火火今之火火也今氣為水火也使氣有異則古之水清火熱而今水濁火寒乎 This is because forms do not change. The fire and water of antiquity are the fire and water of now. In this example, vapor makes water and fire.

Supposing vapor were to vary then was ancient water clear and fire hot while modern water is opaque and fire cold?

衡：人生長六七尺大三四圍面有五色壽至於百萬世不異如以上世人民個長佼好堅強老壽下世反此則天地初立始為人時長可如防風之君色如宋朝壽如彭祖乎從當今至千世之後人可長如英莢色如嫫母壽如朝生乎 Human nature is to be around five-foot-four, have a twenty-one to twenty-eight-inch waist, show five expressions on the face and to live a maximum of a hundred years. In ten thousand ages this has not changed. If we assume that people in ancient times were straight and tall and comely and sturdy and strong and lived to an old age and nowadays are the reverse of that, then when humans were first created at the beginning of sky and earth, was their height like that of the Lord of Fang-feng, their appearance like that of Sung Chao and their longevity like that of P'eng Tsu? And a thousand generations after the present time, might people be the size of seed pods, ugly as Ma-mu and live as long as mayflies?

衡：王莽之時長人生長一丈名曰霸出建武年中潁川張仲師長一丈二寸張湯八尺有余其父不滿五尺俱在今世或長或短儒者之言竟非誤也 In the time of Wang Mang, there was a man who grew to the height of seven foot eight; his name was Pa-ch'ü. During the Chien-wu reign period Chang Chung-shih of Ying-ch'uan grew to be full eight foot. Chang T'ang was over six foot while his father was barely four foot six. The king in person went out to the city limits to receive him. When he first saw Lord Ching-kuo he wept, and when Lord Ching-kuo arrived, he offered him the prime ministry. Lord Ching-kuo tried to refuse it but could not and ended up accepting it. After seven days he pleaded illness and again tried to resign, most pertinaciously, and was not permitted to do so for three more days.

戰：靖郭君將城薛客多以諫靖郭君謂謁者无爲客通齊人有請者曰臣請三言而已矣益一言臣請烹靖郭君因見之 Lord Ching-kuo was going to wall the city of Hsüeh. Many of his retainers objected. Lord Ching-kuo said to the usher, "Let none of my retainers communicate with me." There was a Ch'i man who asked to say only three words, no more. If he said even one more word he could be boiled alive. So Lord Ching-kuo admitted him to audience.

左：八年春石言于晉魏榆晉侯問於師曠曰石何故言對曰石不能言或馮焉不然民聽濫也抑臣又聞之曰作事不時怨讟動于民則有非言之物而言今宮室崇侈民力彫盡怨讟並作莫保其性石言不亦宜乎於是晉侯方築鹿祁之宮 In spring of the eighth year a stone spoke at Wei-yü. The Marquess of Chin asked Shih Kuang, "Why did a stone speak?" He replied, "Stones can't speak. Someone or something was concealed there. If not then people misheard noise for speech. On the other hand, I have also heard that when work is initiated before it is normally scheduled and resentment is stirred up among the people then there are cases of things speaking that ought not to speak. Now our palace buildings are tall and lavish, depleting and exhausting the workforce and resentment springs up on all sides. Nothing keeps to its natural state. Isn't a stone speaking just what we ought to expect?" At that time the Marquess of Chin was in the midst of having a palace built at Szü-chi.

呂：師曠曰後世有知音者將知鐘之不調也臣竊為君恥之至於師涓而果知鐘之不調也是師曠欲善調鐘以為後世之知音者也 Shih Kuang said, "In the future there will be someone who can discriminate pitch who will recognize that these bells are out of tune. I venture to feel shame on YL's behalf." When it came to the time of Shih Chüan he did in fact recognize that the bells were out of tune.

This was a case of Shih Kuang wanting to tune the bells properly on behalf of someone in the future who could discriminate pitch.

tsiangtšig ^{mp} 莊子 qu 莊周

莊：昔者莊周夢為胡蝶 Once upon a time, Chuang Chou dreamed he had turned into a butterfly.

史：楚威王聞莊周賢使使厚幣迎之許以為相莊周笑謂楚使者曰千金重利卿相尊位也子獨不見郊祭之犧牛乎養食之數歲衣以文繡以入大廟當是之時雖欲為孤豚豈可得乎子亟去無污我 The Frightener King of Chū heard that Chuang Chou was talented and sent a messenger to invite him with lavish gifts, granting him appointment as premier. Chuang Chou laughed and said to the messenger, “A thousand ducats are a handsome sum and premier is an honored office. Have you never noticed the sacrificial ox at the temple in the suburb? They feed and care for it for years and dress it in patterned brocade to be led into the great temple. At that point, even if it wished it could have been a mere pig left out to forage for itself, do you think it would have a chance of that? Begone at once, sir! Do not insult me!”

史：莊子者蒙人也名周 Chuang-tzū was a man of Mêng, named Chou.

史：其學無所不闡然其要本歸於老子之言 He had looked into the doctrines of all schools but his core beliefs belong to the school of Lao-tzū.

莊：惠子相梁莊子往見之或謂惠子曰莊子來欲代子相於是惠子恐搜於國中三日三夜莊子往見之曰南方有鳥其名鵩鵩子知之乎夫鵩鵩發於南海而飛於北海非梧桐不止非練實不食非醴泉不飲於是鳴得腐鼠鵩鵩過之仰而視之曰嚇今子欲以子之梁國而嚇我邪 Hui-tzū was premier in Liang. Chuang-tzū paid him a visit. Someone said to Hui-tzū, “Chuang-tzū has come to replace you in acting as premier.” Then Hui-tzū was afraid, and searched the whole country for three days and nights. Chuang-tzū said when he came to visit him, “There is a bird in the south called the clarial. Do you know of it? A clarial left the southern wilderness to fly to the northern wilderness, stopping nowhere but at a wu-tung, eating nothing but perfect fruit, drinking nothing but pure sweet water. Then a small hawk got a rat carcass, and as the clarial flew by, it looked up and said, ‘Back off! Do you want to warn me off on account of your state of Liang?’” tsiab 1.46 ^{mp} commenter on 春秋 (dial var of 左?) 鄒

漢：春秋所貶損大人當世君臣有威權勢力其事實皆形於傳是以隱其書而不宣所以免時難也及末世口說流行故有公羊穀梁鄒夾之傳四家之中公羊穀梁立於學官鄒氏無師夾氏未有書 The important men derogated in the Ch'un-ch'iu, rulers and ministers of that time whose realities were all plainly described in the commentary, had awesome might and powerful positions, and that is why he concealed his book and left it unpublished:

so as to avoid unpleasantness with his contemporaries.

Near the end of Chou oral traditions circulated; thus there were the Kung-yang, the Ku-liang, the Tsou and the Chia commentaries. Of the four, the Kung-yang and Ku-liang became established parts of the training of bureaucrats, but there were no professors of Mr. Tsou and Mr. Chia never wrote a book.

tsiabj'iaq ^{mp} man name (r k'iaq?) 騶忌

史：騶忌以鼓琴干威王因及國政封為成侯而受相印先孟子 Tsou Chi got to meet the Frightener King by playing the cithern. He advanced in government of the state until he was ennobled as the Completion Marquess and was entrusted with the seal of premier. He was before Mencius.

tsiabgian ^{mp} man name 騶衍 鄒衍

史：公孫龍善為堅白之辯及鄒衍過趙言至道乃緇公孫龍 Kung-sun Lung was skilful at arguing the subtleties of hardness and whiteness, but when Tsou Yen passed through Chao and spoke of the ultimate Way, Kung-sun Lung was dismissed.

衡：萬人俱歎未能動天一鄒衍之口安能降霜 Ten thousand men sighing in chorus could not move Tsu; how could the voice of a lone Tsou Yen bring down frost?

史：齊有[三→]二騶子其前騶忌以鼓琴干威王因及國政封為成侯而受相印先孟子其次騶衍後孟子 There were two in Ch'i who were “Master Tsou”. The earlier, Tsou Chi, got to meet the Frightener King by playing the cithern. He advanced in government of the state until he was ennobled as the Completion Marquess and was entrusted with the seal of premier. He was before Mencius. The other, Tsou Yen, was after Mencius.

史：騶衍睹有國者益淫侈不能尚德若大雅整之於身施及黎庶矣 Tsou Yen observed that those who controlled states got more unbridled and extravagant, no longer able to make their character their highest consideration as in the Greater Elegantiae, “Get it right in your own person, then apply it to the multitude.” [I don't find this in the Mao Odes.] 史：乃深觀陰陽消息而作怪迂之變終始大聖之篇十餘萬言其語闊大不經必先驗小物推而大之至於無垠 He then deeply observed how waxing and waning of Yin and Yang initiated oddities and deviations; he read over a hundred thousand words of essays of great sages, from beginning to end. His language was grandiose and not straightforward. He insisted on first examining small things, extending and enlarging them as far as infinity.

史：先序今以上至黃帝學者所共術大並世盛衰因載其機祥度制推而遠之至天地未生窮冥不可考而原也 He first listed in order methods all scholars shared from the present back to Huang Ti, pairing them in large scale with success or failure of that age. He then recorded a systematic classification of their bad and good omens, all the way to when sky and earth had not emerged and darkness made further tracing to a source impossible.

史：先列中國名山大川[通→]遼谷禽獸水土所殖物類所珍因而推之及海外人之所不能睹 First he listed the famous mountains and large rivers of China, the birds and animals of plains and valleys, what is planted in water and earth, and the types of things that are considered rare or valuable.

Then he extrapolated that to things beyond the ocean that people cannot view.

史：稱引天地剖判以來五德轉移治各有宜而符應若茲 He adduced that ever since sky and earth split apart, the five influences have rotated in alteration. Each has what is suitable to governing, and natural signs respond in accordance with these. 史：以爲儒者所謂中國者於天下乃八十一分居其一分耳中國名曰赤縣神州赤縣神州內自有九州禹之序九州是也不得爲州數中國外如赤縣神州者九乃所謂九州也 He took it that what the Confucians called The Central States occupied only one portion of eighty-one into which the world was divided. China is named Chih-hsien-shên-chou. Within Chih-hsien-shên-chou itself are nine regions, just the same as the nine regions listed by Yü, but these do not attain to the status of region. Outside China there are nine just like Chih-hsien-shên-chou, and those are called the nine regions. 史：於是有所裨海環之人民禽獸莫能相通者如一區中者乃爲一州如此者九乃有大瀛海環其外天地之際[焉→]也 There is there a peripheral ocean surrounding it such that neither people nor animals can pass. It is like the interior of an entire district. That, then, is a chou. There are nine like this, and then there is a great full sea that encircles their exterior; that is the juncture of sky and earth. 史：其術皆此類也 All his method was like this. 史：或曰伊尹負鼎而勉湯以王百里奚飯牛車下而繆公用霸作先合然後引之大道驪衍其言雖不軌儻亦有牛鼎之意乎 Some say Yi Yin carried a cauldron and by his efforts T'ang became king; Pai-li Hsi fed oxen on foot and the Solemn Earl made himself overlord by employing him. They pioneered the great law of "First win his favor, then lead him." Although what Tsou Yen said was irregular, there is a chance it may have been intended as an "ox" or a "cauldron."

非：夫物之一存一亡乍死乍生初盛而後衰者不可謂常 The way things are now here now gone, suddenly dead suddenly born, flourishing at first then declining afterward cannot be called unchanging. 禮：雞初鳴而衣服 When the cock first crew he donned his clothing.

戰：初時惠王伐趙 At an earlier time, the Kind King attacked Chao.

衡：人生性命富貴者初稟自然之氣 When people are conceived, those who are destined to become rich and high-ranking initially are provided with the stuff that makes it so all by itself.

左：及陳之初亡也陳桓子始大於齊 When it came to the time that Chên had just begun to perish, Chên Huan-tzü first began to become important in Ch'i.

漢：元光元年冬十一月初令郡國舉孝廉各一人 In the first year of the Yüan Kuang period, twelfth month, winter, we instituted an order to commanderies and principalities to designate a man as exemplary for filiality and one for frugality.

衡：初死藏尸於棺少久藏棺於墓 When people are recently dead we enclose the corpse in a coffin, and after a while we enclose the coffin in a grave.

禮：夫禮之初始諸飲食其燔黍捭豚汗尊而抔飲實桴而土鼓猶若可以致其敬於鬼神及其死也升屋而號告曰皋某復然後飯腥而苴孰故天望而地藏也體魄則降知氣在上故死者北首生者南鄉皆從其初 Now when ritual first began, they started it in drinking and eating. When they parched millet and cooked pork at an open fire, tilted the jug and drank from cupped hands and flourished their drumsticks while beating drums, they were yet able to express their respect to the spirits. When the time came that one died, they mounted a roof and proclaimed loudly, “Awake, So-and-so, and return!” Not until then did they fill the mouth with uncooked meat and set out cooked food. Thus it was to the sky they looked while it was the earth that held the body. The corporeal animator then sank while the sentient vapor remained above. Thus a dead man's head points north while the living face south. All of this has been thus from its beginning.

風：楚之先出自帝顓頊 The ancestry of Ch'u was from emperor Chuan Hsü.

史：封熊繹於楚蠻封以子男之田姓芈氏居丹陽楚子熊繹與魯公伯禽衛康叔子牟晉侯燮齊太公呂伋俱事成王 Hsiung Yi was enfeoffed among the Ch'u and Man, with territory for a tribal leader, surname Mi and dwelling in Tan-yang. Hsiung Yi, Chief of Ch'u, served the Completion King together with Po-ch'in, ruler of Lu, the Vigorous Sibling of Wei, Tzü-mou, Marquess Hui of Lu and Lü Chi, son of Tai-kung of Ch'i.

史：楚之祖封於周號為子男五十里 When Ch'u was first enfeoffed by Chou we were denominated tribal leaders of fifty li.

史：平王之時周室衰微諸侯彊而弱齊楚秦晉始大政由方伯 In the time of the Level King, the house of Chou was in decline, and the strong among the barons annexed the weak; Ch'i, Ch'u, Ch'in and Chin first became great and the source of governance was the frontier overlords.

史：凡天下疆國非秦而楚非楚而秦兩國交爭其勢不兩立 The strongest states in the world, if not Ch'in then Ch'u, or if not Ch'u then Ch'in, cannot both win in a struggle.

史：楚雖有富大之名而實空虛其卒雖多然而輕走易北不能堅戰 Though Ch'u has a reputation for wealth and size, it is actually a hollow one. Its troops may be numerous but they desert as if it meant little and retreat as if it were no big thing. They cannot be resolute in battle.

史：屈原者名平楚之同姓也 Ch'ü Yüan, named Ping, was of the same surname as the house of Ch'u.

呂：楚人生乎楚長乎而楚言不知其所受之 A Ch'u person is born in Ch'u, grows up in Ch'u and speaks Ch'u dialect without knowing where he acquired it.

國：諸侯之大夫盟于宋楚令尹子木欲襲晉師 When the great officers of the barons made a treaty at Sung, the Ling-yin of Ch'u, Tzü-mu, wanted to make a surprise attack on the army of Chin.

管：楚王好小要而美人省食 The king of Ch'u loved small waists so the beauties all went on diets.

戰：常仗趙而畔楚仗齊而畔秦 He has often adhered to Chao in defecting from Ch'u or adhered to Ch'i in defecting from Ch'in.

左：六人叛楚即東夷秋楚成大心仲歸帥師滅六 They of Lu repudiated Ch'u and joined the eastern Yi; in the autumn, Ch'eng Ta Hsin and Chung Kuei of Ch'ü led a force that extinguished Lu.

荀:定楚國如反手爾 Putting the state of Ch'ü into good order would be as [easy as] turning over one's hand, that's all.

戰:齊將封田嬰於薛楚王聞之大怒將伐齊 Ch'i was going to sub-infeudate T'ien Ying in Hsüeh; the king of Ch'ü heard about it and was so enraged he meant to attack Ch'i.

戰:君之楚將奚爲北面 If you are going to Ch'ü, sir, then for what reason are you heading north?

戰:五國約以伐齊昭陽謂楚王曰五國以破齊秦必南圖楚王曰然則奈何對曰韓氏輔國也好利而惡難好利可營也惡難可懼也我厚賂之以利其心必營我悉兵以臨之其心必懼我彼懼吾兵而營我利五國之事必可敗也約絕之後雖勿與地可楚王曰善乃命大公[事一]使之韓見公仲曰夫牛關之事馬陵之難親王之所見也王苟無以五國用兵請效列城五請悉楚國之眾也以廬於齊齊之反趙魏之後而楚果弗與地則五國之事困也 Five nations made a treaty with Ch'in to attack Ch'i. Chao Yang said to the king of Ch'ü, "When the five nations have been its instrument of smashing Ch'i, Ch'in is sure to turn its attention south to Ch'ü." When the king asked what to do about it, he replied, "The Hân family grip the state; they are self-aggrandizing but wary of conflict. That means they can be corralled by greed and controlled by fear. If we offer them a huge bribe so as to fill their minds with thoughts of what they stand to gain we will certainly rein them in, and if we then overawe them with the full extent of our military might they will surely be afraid of us. With them afraid of our might and governed by our wealth, anything the alliance of five do can be brought to nothing. And after they have broken the treaty, we need not even cede them any land." The king approved and sent Ta Kung as envoy to Hân. He met with Kung-chung and said, "The business at Niu-lan and the trouble at Ma-ling are things your king himself has seen. If the king would refrain from taking any military action on account of the alliance of five, we would like to cede certain territory of ours to you, to wit five cities, and we would also like to mobilize our full power in defense of Ch'i." After Ch'i had repulsed Chao and Wei, Ch'ü did not cede the territory after all; thus was the alliance of five confounded.

不肖者不似也不似天地不類聖賢故有為也
If one has received a sparse, thin energy-vapor he does not follow the influence of the way and does not resemble sky and earth. Thus he is called a bungler.
“Bungler” is “not resemble.” That is, he does not resemble sky and earth, nor is he similar to geniuses and highly competent people. Thus he contrives things.
*The state of etymological research in Chinese is still lamentably primitive, so it cannot be flatly asserted that “not resemble” is not the source of the word “bungler” but a more plausible source would be 不
修 “not finished, not ready, lacking polish.”*

呂: 非惡其聲也人主雖不肖其說忠臣之聲

on word-play and allusive imagery that so many of the fēng odes share.

史: 夫南風之詩者生長之音也舜樂好之樂 與天地同意得萬國之驩心故天下治也 The folk songs of the south are the music of birth and growth [play on “south wind” indicating vernal rebirth]. Shun loved them, and his music expressed aims identical with those of sky and earth, gaining the gladdened hearts of all nations; thus the world was put in order.

Thus the chaos is infallibly brought to an end.

淮：兵之所由來者遠矣黃帝嘗與炎帝戰矣顛項嘗與共工爭矣故黃帝戰於涿鹿之野堯戰於丹水之浦舜伐有苗啟攻有扈自五帝而弗能偃也又況衰世乎夫兵者所以禁暴討亂也炎帝為火災故黃帝擒之共工為水害故顛項誅之教之以道導之以德而不聽則臨之以威武臨之威武而不從則制之以兵革 The origin of arms is in the distant past. Huang Ti once fought with Yen Ti. Chuan Hsü once fought with Kung-kung. Huang Ti did battle at the field of Cho Lu. Yao did battle at the mud-flat of Tan Shui. Shun attacked the Miao; Ch'i attacked the Hu. From the time of the five sovereigns, it has been unstoppable—how much the worse in a disordered age? Now, arms are the means of preventing oppression and punishing rebellion. Yen Ti caused disastrous fires, so Huang Ti captured him. Kung-kung caused disastrous floods, so Chuan Hsü punished him. They tried to show them the Way and attract them to follow it, without success. Then they tried to overawe them with military power, also without success. Therefore they brought them under control by force of arms.

淮：故聖人之用兵也若櫛髮耨苗所去者少而所利者多殺無罪之民而養無義之君害莫大焉殫天下之財而澹一人之欲禍莫深焉使夏桀殷紂有害於民而立被其患不至於為炮烙晉厲宋康行一不義而身死國亡不至於侵奪為暴此四君者皆有小過而莫之討也故至於攘天下害百姓 Thus the great man's resort to arms is like combing hair or thinning seedlings. Few perish and many benefit from it. To kill innocent folk in aggrandizing a wrong-doing ruler—no harm is worse than that. To despoil the possessions of the whole world in satiating the desire of one man—no evil is deeper than that. If Chieh of Hsia and Ch'ou of Yin had instantly suffered the consequences when they first harmed their people then they would not have gone on to the making of human roasting-frames. If the Cruel Marquess of Chin or the Great Duke of Sung had been dethroned and killed when they first began to do wrong then they would not have gone on to plunder, rapine and oppression. These are all cases in which a ruler did a small wrong and no one demanded restitution from him, so they went on to put the world in turmoil and harm everyone.

淮：肆一人之邪而長海內之禍此大倫之所不取也所為立君者以禁暴討亂也今乘萬民之力而反為殘賊是為虎傅翼為弗除夫畜池魚者必去獮獠養禽獸者必去豺狼又況治人乎故霸王之兵以論慮之以策圖之以義扶之非以亡存也將以存亡也 To give free rein to the perversity of one man and bring burgeoning evil to all of civilization is not acceptable to the highest logic. The reason we establish rulers is to forbid oppression and punish rebellion. Here we have one harnessing the energy of thousands of his people and turning it to slaughter and plunder; that is to make them the aides and auxiliaries of a tiger. Why not get rid of him? One who raises fish in a pond must keep otters away; one who raises game animals must keep wolves away. How much the more so in governing people! Thus in the conquering king's resort to arms, he orders it by foresight, disposes it by plans and upholds it by rightness. It is not to destroy those who would otherwise survive but to preserve those who would otherwise perish.

淮:馬齒非牛蹠檀根非椅枝故見其一本而萬物知 Having teeth like a horse implies having feet other than those like a cow; having roots like sandalwood implies having branches other than those like catalpa. Thus everything becomes known by seeing one root.

This remark illustrates how badly comprehension of CC texts is impaired by sinologists' simpleminded ignorance of time-tested methods of philology. Ignoring syntax and reading character-meanings yields "Horses' teeth are not cows' feet," a plonking insipidity from which the conclusion initiated by 故 does not remotely follow. Every clause in that sentence is nuclear, not appositional. Compare this statement from the same book:

淮:四足者無羽翼戴角者無上齒 What has four feet lacks feathers and wings; what has horns on its head lacks upper incisors.

Expanded versions of this idea can be found:
 淮:故牛歧蹠而戴角馬被髦而全足者天也 Thus it is due to nature that a cow has split hooves and horns while a horse has a mane and solid feet.
 呂:冬與夏不能兩[刑→]形草與稼不能兩成新穀熟而陳穀虧凡有角者無上齒果實繁者木必庠用智編者無遂功天之數也 Winter and summer cannot both take form at once; weeds and crops cannot both grow in the same place; when the new grain ripens the old grain deteriorates. Creatures with horns lack upper incisors; trees prolific of fruit never grow tall; those who use their intelligence promiscuously never accomplish anything successfully. This is due to sky's methods.

That is, it is claimed that there exist properties A and B such that in principle a thing with A cannot in fact also have B: A 非 B "A implies not-B". That is asserted to be due to how nature operates.

Separation of principle from fact is the prime tenet of a widely-accepted modern view of science, in which priority is given to fact: one cow with upper incisors is enough to invalidate the principle. Such a separation was proposed by some rhetors in the Warring States era who sound much like formal logicians. This major procedural innovation has ever since been seen as mere captious quibbling.

呂:說淫則可不可而然不然是不是而非不非 If explanation is carelessly done then one accepts what is unacceptable and believes what is untrue, holds wrong to be right and vice versa.

How far might Kung-sun Lung's approach have gone toward developing a philosophical basis for experimental science? It seems improbable that anything would have come of it in any case; seldom can a change of no immediately obvious practical benefit withstand the social pressure of a dominant class who reject it. Even before the politicization of natural history in the Han, in China a cow with upper incisors would have been a portent for divination, not a puzzle for biology. Still, his insight is noteworthy.

史：二十九年…白起爲武安君 In 278 BC…Pai Ch'i became Lord Military Security.

戰：昭王既息民繕兵復伐趙武安君曰不可王曰前年國虛民飢君不量百姓之力求益軍糧以滅趙今寡人息民以養士蓄積糧食三軍之俸有倍於前而曰不可其說何也 When the Renowned king had given his people a rest and had repaired his weapons, he again wanted to attack Chao. Lord Military Security said, "It won't do." The king said, "Last year the state was bankrupt and the folk starving but you did not take our people's condition into account when you asked for more troops and supplies to defeat Chao. Now We have rested the folk so as to train soldiers, saved and stored grain for provisions and doubled the armies' pay over what it was, yet you say it can't be done. What is your explanation for that?"

戰：武安君曰長平之事秦軍大剋趙軍大破秦人歡喜趙人畏懼秦民之死者厚葬傷者厚養勞者相饗飲食饋餽以靡其財趙人之死者不得收傷者不得療涕泣相哀戮力同憂耕田疾作以生其財 Lord Military Security said, "At Ch'ang-p'ing the Ch'in army won a big victory and the Chao army took a big defeat. The Ch'in were delighted and the Chao alarmed. The Ch'in dead were buried with honors and the wounded treated generously. We rewarded each other for our exertions by feasts and presents, using up our wealth. The Chao dead could not be buried nor their wounded doctored. They cried for each other's grief and labored at their common woe. They worked their fields frantically to build their wealth.

戰：今王發軍雖倍其前臣料趙國守備亦以十倍矣趙自長平已來君臣憂懼早朝晏退卑辭重幣四面出嫁結親燕魏連好齊楚積慮并心備秦爲務其國內實其外交外成當今之時趙未可伐也 Now even if YH sends out twice as many troops as before, I calculate the state of Chao will have multiplied its defense by ten times. Ever since Ch'ang-p'ing, ruler and ministers have fretted and worried, going to court early and retiring late. By humble words and heavy bribes and marriage alliances with all neighboring states, they have drawn close Yen and Wei and have formed good relations with Ch'I and Ch'u. They have pooled their minds making plan upon plan with the object of preparing against Ch'in. Their state is firm within, their alliances complete without. At the present time, Chao cannot yet be attacked.

戰：王曰寡人既以興師矣 The king said, "I have already raised a force for this attack."

戰：乃使五校大夫王陵將而伐趙陵戰失利

亡五校 He then sent the Five Pen official Wang Ling to be general in the attack on Chao. Ling bungled the advantage in fighting the battle and lost Five Pens.

戰：王欲使武安君武安君稱疾不行王乃使應侯往見武安君責之曰楚地方五千里持戟百萬君前率數萬之眾入楚拔鄢郢焚其廟東至竟陵楚人震恐東徙而不敢西向 The king wanted to appoint Lord Military Security but he declined, pleading illness. The king then sent the Marquess of Ying to speak to Lord Military Security and take him to task in these words: "The land of Ch'u is five thousand li square and has a million spearmen. You, sir, have led tens of thousands into Ch'u, taking Yen and Ying and burning their ancestral temple, as far east as Ching-ling. The Ch'u were so terrified they fled east and did not dare look west.

戰：韓魏相率興兵甚眾君所將之卒不能半之而與[戰之→]之戰於伊闕大破二國之軍流血漂鹵斬首二十四萬韓魏以故至今稱東藩此君之功天下莫不聞今趙卒之死於長平者已十七八其國虛弱是以寡人大發軍人數倍於趙國之眾願使君將必欲滅之矣君嘗以寡擊眾取勝如神況以彊擊弱以眾擊寡乎 Hán and Wei egged each other on to raise enormous armies. You did battle with them at Yi-ch'üeh and smashed the armies of both states, making enough blood flow to float their shields and cutting off 240,000 heads although the levies you led could not have amounted to half their numbers. To this day Hán and Wei call themselves eastern allies of Ch'in for that reason. This feat of yours is known to the whole world. Here we have the Chao dead at Ch'ang-p'ing fully seventy to eighty percent. Their state is emptied and weakened. Therefore We will attack on a grand scale with many times the soldiers Chao has. I want to appoint you as general; we will surely then be on the point of conquering them. You have won victory by attacking many with few as if by magic—how much the more so would you by attacking few with many!

戰：武安君曰是時楚王恃其國大不恤其政而群臣相妒以功諂諛用事良臣斥疏百姓心離城池不修既無良臣又無守備故起所以得引兵深入多倍城邑發梁焚舟以專民[以→]心掠於郊野以足軍食當此之時秦中士卒以軍中爲家將帥爲父母不約而親不謀而信一心同功死不旋踵楚人自戰其地咸顧其家各有散心莫有鬥志是以能有功也 Lord Military Security said, "At the time you mentioned, the king of Ch'u relied on his state's being large and did not trouble himself about its government, so the ministers were jealous of each other's accomplishments. Flatterers were in charge and good men driven away. The people's allegiance wavered. The walls and moats were not kept in repair. He had neither good ministers nor prepared defenses. As to what I, Ch'i, gained by that, he withdrew his forces deep within the country, abandoned many of his forts and towns, opened dams and burned boats to concentrate people's minds and pillaged his own countryside to eke out the army's rations. At this time all in Ch'in felt as if while on military service they were at home and the generals and commanders were their parents. They needed no pacts to make them friendly nor prearrangements to make them steadfast. Being all of one mind they shared all the credit, nor did they flee from death. The Ch'u were fighting on their own territory, looking over their shoulders at their own homes. All were of a mind to disperse, none wanting combat. Thus I was able to win. [It would be possible to take rise so that as the A-term and everything following it down to the final 也 as the B-term of a long appositive sentence. The patchy rimes in the rhythmic sections of this declamation might be accidental or they might be all that remains of rimed verse decimated by the vicissitudes of textual transmission.]

戰：伊闕之戰韓孤顧魏不欲先用其眾魏恃韓之銳欲推以爲鋒二軍爭便之力不同是以臣得設疑兵以待韓陣專軍并銳觸魏之不意魏軍既敗韓軍自潰乘勝逐北以是之故能立功皆計利形勢自然之理何神之有哉 At the battle of Yi-ch'üeh, Hán looked only to Wei, not wanting to put its troops into action ahead of them. Wei relied on the high state of Hán's training, urging them to act as spearhead. The power of the two armies that vied for advantage was not merged, so I was able to firm up my force in preparation, waiting for the Hán to form up. I concentrated my army and combined my crack units, smashing into the unsuspecting Wei. When Wei had been defeated, the Hán army decamped of its own accord and I took advantage of the victory to pursue the fugitives. This is how I accomplished that. I always worked out what would be the best position and how natural principles would apply. What is there magic about that?

戰：今秦破趙軍於長平不遂以時乘其振懼而滅之畏而釋之使得耕稼以益蓄積養孤長幼以益其眾繕治兵甲以益其強增城浚池以益其固主折節以下其臣臣推體以下死士至於平原君之屬皆令妻妾補縫於行伍之間臣人一心上下同力猶勾踐困於會稽之時也以合伐之趙必固守挑其軍戰必不肯出圍其國都必不可剋攻其列城必未可拔掠其郊野必無所得兵出無功諸侯生心外救必至臣見其害未睹其利又病未能行 Now Ch'in has smashed the Chao army at Ch'angping but did not go on to seize the occasion to take advantage of their panic and destroy them. Out of apprehension we let them escape to plow and sow, increasing their stores, to feed orphans and educate young men, increasing their manpower, to put their arms and armor in good order, increasing their strength and to heighten their walls and dredge their moats, increasing their defenses. The ruler bends over backwards to defer to the ministers; the ministers exaggerate their postures to honor the dead officers. This goes so far as the entourage of Lord Plains all sending their wives out to the route camps to mend the soldiers' clothing for them. Ministers and men are of one mind, high and low unite their efforts, as it was in the time when Kou Chien was beset at Kuei-chi. If you try to overwhelm them ["take them at one gulp"] Chao will surely hold firm. If you challenge their army to battle, they will surely not accept. If you besiege their capital, you are sure to find it unconquerable. If you attack their other cities, you are sure to find them not yet to be taken. If you pillage their countryside, you are sure to get nothing. If our expedition accomplishes nothing, the other states will see an opportunity and their assistance to Chao will follow. I see damage in this; no benefit appears to me. Also, I have not yet sufficiently recovered from my illness to go.

戰：應侯慚而退以言於王王曰微白起吾不能滅趙乎復益發軍更使王齧代王陵伐趙圍邯鄲八九月死傷者眾而弗下趙王出輕銳以寇其後秦數不利 Ashamed, Lord Ying went back and told the king of it. The king said, "Am I not able to destroy Chao without Pai Chi?" He dispatched an increased force to attack Chao as before, shifting the command to Wang He instead of Wang Ling. They besieged Hantan the eighth and ninth months, with huge casualties, but the city held. The king of Chao sent out light cavalry to harass their rear and the superior numbers of Ch'in gave them no advantage. 戰：武安君曰不聽臣計今果何如王聞之怒因見武安君彊起之曰君雖病強為寡人臥而將之有功寡人之願將加重於君如君不行寡人恨君武安君頓首曰臣知行雖無功得免於罪雖不行無罪不免於誅然惟願大王覽臣愚計 Lord Military Security said, "The king ignored my plan; how did that work out for him?" That angered the king when he heard of it, and he went to see Lord Military Security and forced him to get up. He said, "Even though you are sick you will exert yourself for my sake to command the expedition from a sick bed. If you succeed my intention is to increase your authority. But if you do not go you will incur my displeasure." Lord Military Security said, "I am aware that I would not be held at fault even if the expedition failed, while if I do not go I will not avoid punishment even if not at fault. However, I would like to request YM to have a look at my own plan."

戰：釋趙養民以諸侯之變撫其恐懼伐其惰慢誅滅無道以令諸侯天下可定何必以趙為先乎此所謂為一臣屈而勝天下也大王若不察臣愚計必欲快心於趙以致臣罪此亦所謂勝一臣而為天下屈者也夫勝一臣之嚴焉[孰]若勝天下之威大耶臣聞明主愛其國忠臣愛其名破國不可復完死卒不可復生臣寧伏受重誅而死不忍為辱軍之將願大王察之王不答而去 "If we let Chao alone, provide for our people, utilize the occasions of emergencies in other states to calm their fears, attack the insolent and destroy evildoers, the world can be stabilized. Why must Chao be first? This is what I would call conquering the world while being constrained by one minister. If you don't consider my plan but insist on easing your frustration in Chao and blame me on account of it, that's what I would call conquering one minister while being constrained by the whole world. How is the dominance of a world-conqueror comparable to being a tough guy who conquers one minister? I have heard that an intelligent king values most his nation, while a loyal minister values most his reputation. A nation once smashed cannot be made whole again, nor can dead soldiers be brought back to life. I would rather die by submitting to the extreme penalty than do what I could not bear, to be the general of a humiliated army. Please consider it." The king left without replying. 史: 冠雖敝必加於首履雖新必關於足 Though the hat be worn out, it must be put on the head; though the sandals be new, they must be fastened on the feet.

史: 今濟西河北盡已役矣封內敝矣 Now the Chi-hsi and Ho-pei deployments have all been stood down, and the whole country is exhausted.

史: 臣聞功大者易危而民敝者怨上 I have heard that those who have great success are easily imperiled, and people who are exhausted resent their superiors.

戰: 邯鄲之難昭奚恤謂楚王曰王不如無救趙而以強魏魏強其割趙必深矣趙不能聽則必堅守是兩弊也 At the time of the Han-tan conflict, Chao Hsi-Hsiü said to the king of Chü, "Best for YM not to aid Chao, thus making Wei relatively stronger. Wei being stronger will certainly cut a deep chunk of Chao territory. Chao will be unable to accept that and will resist more sturdily. This will weaken both equally."

史: 夫秦楚相敵而韓魏以全制其後計無危於此者矣 For Ch'in and Chü to weaken each other while Hán and Wei remain intact in control of their rear—no plan is more dangerous than that.

史: 久師則兵敝矣 If they are in active service for long, weapons become worn. [久 put caus fac]

史: 今秦有敵甲凋兵軍於澗池 Now Ch'in has worn-out armor and used-up weapons. We are drawn up for battle at Min-chih.

漢: 古世相革皆承聖王之烈今漢獨收孤秦之弊鑄金石者難爲功摧枯朽者易爲力其勢然也 In replacing each other, the ancient successor dynasties all received the power of the sage kings. Only Han acceded to the inanity of the isolated Ch'in. Carving metal and stone we find it hard to make a good job of it; breaking withered, rotten twigs we find it easy to exert the strength. That is due to the circumstances of these cases.

衡: 語曰圖王不成其弊可以霸 There is a saying, "Aim at becoming king, and if you fail, from the ruins you might become overlord."

吳: 五勝者禍四勝者弊三勝者霸王一勝者帝 Who wins five battles meets disaster; who wins four battles is ruined; who wins three battles becomes overlord; who wins two battles becomes king; who wins a single battle becomes emperor.

漢: 計其道里一年尚未集合兵先至者[聚→]聖居暴露師老誠弊勢不可用此一難也 Reckoning how to do it, after a year we still won't have got it together. The first units to arrive will have to camp out while building cantonments. The troops will be tired and their equipment worn out, not employable as a force. This is the first difficulty.

顏: 人之愛子罕亦能均自古及今此弊多矣 Rarely indeed are people able to be balanced in their care for their children. Ever since ancient times, this kind of downfall has happened again and again.

搜: 覆以敝筐 covered him with a worn-out basket

晉: 是時大修宮室加以軍旅百姓饑弊 At that time there was large-scale rebuilding of halls and residences, and adding military expeditions to that, the people were famished and exhausted.

史: 齊宣王卒潛王即位說潛王厚葬以明孝高宮室大苑囿以明得意欲破敵齊而爲燕 When the Perspicuous King of Ch'i died, the Lost King succeeded him. [Su Ch'in] persuaded the Lost King to give a lavish funeral to demonstrate his filiality and to make palaces and chambers high and gardens and orchards big to demonstrate his success; he wanted to break and impoverish Ch'i on behalf of Yen.

顏: 有人訪吾曰魏志蔣濟上書云弊之民是何字也余應之曰意爲疲即是疲倦之疲耳 Someone inquired of me, "In the record of Wei, in a written submission of Chiang Chi it says 弊之民.

What graph is this?" I replied, "I suppose 疲 is just the 疲 of 疲倦."

b. 弊邑 con humil phr "our poor city"

左: 今號爲不道保於逆旅以侵敝邑之南鄙 Now Kuo, acting lawlessly, has made forts at its visitor lodges so as to attack our southern villages.

國: 子以君命鎮撫弊邑 On your ruler's orders you soothe our poor city

(1) later use in 戰國 urt kingdoms

史: 敝邑趙王使臣效愚計 The king of our poor state of Chao has sent YS to deliver my clumsy plan.

b'æg currency; tax, fee 138 幣

淮: 凡事人者非以寶幣必以卑辭 Whenever one pays tribute to another, if it is not paid in treasure then it must be paid by acknowledging deference.

漢: 至於用度不足乃權酒酤筦鹽鐵鑄白金造皮幣 When it came to the point that there was not enough for expenses, they made a monopoly of the liquor trade, managed salt and iron, cast debased coins and made parchment money.

戰: 利歸於陶國[弊→]幣御於諸侯 The benefit goes to the state of T'ao while our money is doled out to other countries.

漢: 珠玉龜貝銀錫之屬爲器飾寶藏不爲幣然各隨時而輕重無常 Things like pearls, jade, tortoise shell, cowries, silver and pewter were used for decorating vessels or hoarded as treasure, but were not used as money; thus their value fluctuated with circumstances.

b'æg ^{nc} presents; gifts (cf 男) 幣

左: 王貪而無信唯蔡於感今幣重而言甘誘我也 The king is avaricious and unreliable, and Ts'ai is just what his heart is set on. His gifts are lavish and his words sweet in order to inveigle us.

左: 所不歸爾幣者有如河 I swear by the Ho to return your presents.

b'æg 2.28 ^m discriminate 11 辨 辨 辯

荀: 人之所以爲人者非特以二足而無毛也以其有辨也 As to that by which humans are human, it is not solely by means of having two legs and no fur; it is by means of their having the power of discrimination.

衡: 王欲羣臣之畏也不若毋辨善不善而時罪之 If YM wants your retinue to fear you, better ignore their individual virtues and vices, and simply punish one of them when an occasion arises.

周: 辨魚物爲鱸羹 He divides fish supplies into fresh and dried.

隋: 作馬上漏刻以從行辨時刻 He made a horseback clepsydra, to accompany travel and tell time by notches.

史: 好法律持詭辯以中人 He loved laws and used distorted interpretations of them to harm people.

絕: 賢者辯士見夫子作春秋而略吳越 Smart people with analytic minds saw that Confucius had given cursory treatment to Wu and Yüeh in writing the Ch'un-ch'iu.

後: 能文章尤好古學數從劉歆楊雄辯析疑異 He had ability for original composition and particularly loved to study the ancients. He often analyzed dubieties and variants with the guidance of Liu Hsin and Yang Hsiung.

淮: 蒼頡之初作書以辯治百官領理萬事愚者得以不忘智者得以志遠 When Ts'ang Chieh

first invented writing it was so as to apply differential controls to the many offices and bring order to their myriad tasks. The stupid were able to use it to aid their memories, the intelligent to make long-range plans. 史:司馬季主問坐弟子四人侍方辯天地之道日月之運陰陽吉凶之本 Szü-ma Chi-chu sat there with no customer, three or four students in attendance. They were in the midst of a discussion of the way of sky and earth, the motions of sun and moon and the roots of Yin and Yang and good and bad auguries.

b'ian 2.28 ^{mt} to be glib, facile with words 11 辯新:論物明辯謂之辯反辯爲訥 If one explains things clearly when discussing them it is called being articulate; to invert articulate is hobble-tongued. 淮:王無以應...謂左右曰辯矣 The king could make no reply...he said to his servants, "He is certainly glib."

呂:人同類而智殊賢不肖異皆巧言辯辭 People are all the same but their intellects differ and their competence varies, yet they all have polished words and glib phrases.

史:夫從人飾辯虛辭高主之節言其利不言其害卒有秦禍無及爲[己→]矣 Those vertical men have polished arguments and empty phrases, exalting their ruler's reasoning and speaking only of its benefits, not of its harm. When, at the last, calamity comes to you from Ch'in, desperate measures will do nothing.

史:方誅商鞅疾辯士弗用 They had just punished Shang Yang and were sick and tired of sophists; they didn't hire him.

史:人主賢其辯而牽其說豈得無眩哉 If a ruler takes their glibness to be real ability and lets himself be led by their persuasion, how could he not be dazzled.

史:范雎蔡澤世所謂一切辯士然游說諸侯至白首無所遇者非計策之拙所爲說力少也 Fan Sui and Ts'ai Tsê were what are called "consummate rhetors" but they went from baron to baron until they were old, presenting their proposals and never finding acceptance; that was not because their proposals were inept but because the barons to whom they delivered them lacked the power to put them in practice.

露:不智而辯慧[環→]選給則迷而乘良馬也 To have poor powers of discernment, but be persuasive, clear-thinking and a ready speaker, is to drive a swift horse in the wrong direction.

呂:辨而不當論信而不當理勇而不當義[法→]決而不當務惑而乘驥也狂而操吳干將也 To speak persuasively but miss the point of the discussion, to be factually correct but for the wrong reasons, to be courageous but act wrongly, or to act decisively but not do what you set out to do is to drive Chi in the wrong direction. It is to wield Kan Chiang of Wu in madness.

b. vic with words, dispute, debate 人:夫辯有理勝有辭勝 Now in debate there is victory by logic and victory by rhetoric.

史:諸辯士爲方略者妄作妖言諂諛王喜多賜金錢而謀反滋甚 All the rhetors and planners made up baseless prophecies to flatter the prince [of Huainan]. He was pleased and gave them even more money, and the plotting for revolt got even thicker.

b'ian 3.33 profitable, convenient 248 便

戰:早救之孰與晚救之便 Which is more advantageous for us, helping them soon or helping them later? 藝:匕首劍屬其頭類匕故曰匕首短而便用 Spoon-pommel: a type of sword. Its pommel looks like a spoon, hence its name. It is short and convenient to use.

後:大抵取便國利事多者則可矣 If in general you choose what makes affairs of state go smoothly and beneficially, that is good enough.

史:臣以爲計無便於此者 I take it that there is no plan more advantageous than this.

史:夫攻楚以利其地轉禍而說秦計無便於此者 No plan is more beneficial than this, to attack Ch'u and profit from their land while reversing your ill fortune and clearing your name with Chin.

史:卒下令行於民期年秦民之國都[言初→]初言令之不便者以千數 After that they issued the orders. When the orders had been in effect among the populace for a year, those who said from the start that the laws were harmful could be numbered in thousands.

非:烏獲輕千鈞而重其身非其身重於千鈞也勢不便也 To Wu Huo [the famous weight-lifter] a thousand chün was light but his own body was heavy, not because he weighed more than a thousand chün but because the configuration would not allow [him to lift himself as a weight].

史:曰臣願見上言便事 He said, "I want audience with the emperor. I have things to say that will smooth his way."

淮:王子慶忌足躡麋鹿手搏兕虎置之冥室之中不能搏龜繫勢不便也 Prince Ching-chi could outrun deer on foot and take rhinos and tigers barehanded; put him in a lightless house and he couldn't catch a turtle, conditions being so unfavorable.

淮:夫所以養而害所養譬猶削足而適履殺頭而便冠 Now when the provision itself harms the thing to be provided for, compare that to cutting down the foot to fit the shoe or shrinking the head to fit the hat.

史:且夫從人多奮辭而少可信說一諸侯而成封侯是故天下之游談士莫不日夜搢腕瞋目切齒以言從之便以說人主 Another thing is that the "vertical men" say many exciting things that are not always reliable. They discourse on uniting the barons with the aim of having themselves ennobled. Thus itinerant rhetors the world over all persistently take you by the wrist and glare and grit their teeth, promoting the advantages of vertical alliance to rulers.

淮:高山險阻深林叢薄虎豹之所樂也人入之而畏川谷通原積水重泉鼉鼉之所便也人入之而死 High mountains, narrow passes, deep woods and jungles are what tigers and leopards delight in, but a human goes in fear into them. Valleys with streams going back to the source, deep water with multiple springs, these are what turtles and alligators find convenient, but people who enter them drown.

漢:越非有城郭邑里也處谿谷之間篁竹之中習於水門便於舟地深味而多水險中國之人不知其勢阻而入其地雖百不當其一 Yüeh has no walled cities and towns. They live in ravines among bamboo thickets. They are experienced in river fighting and facile in their use of boats. The land is gloomy. There are many cataracts. If Chinese invade their land while unfamiliar with the difficulties of the terrain, a hundred will not prevail against one.

語：昔扁鵲居宋得罪於宋君出亡之衛衛人有病將死者扁鵲至其家欲為治之病者之父謂扁鵲曰言子病甚將為迎良醫治[之]非子所能治也退而不用乃使靈巫求福請命對扁鵲而咒病者卒死靈巫不能治也夫扁鵲天下之良醫而不能與靈巫爭用者知與不知也故事求遠而失近廣藏而狹棄斯之謂也 Long ago when P'ien Ch'üeh lived in Sung, he offended the Sung ruler somehow, and fled to Wèi. There was in Wèi a patient at death's door, and P'ien Ch'üeh applied to his family to take charge of the treatment. The patient's father said to him, "The report that my son's illness is severe is true. On that account we are about to invite a good doctor to treat it. It is not within your competence." He withdrew without being appointed. They then employed a psychic medium to bring good fortune and plead for the patient's life. He directed curses at P'ien Ch'üeh. In the end the patient died, the psychic medium having been unable to cure him. Now, P'ien Ch'üeh was the best doctor in the world yet he was unable to get appointed in competition with a psychic medium. That shows the contrast between having a reputation and lacking one. Thus this is what is meant by "Seeking far and wide to get a thing accomplished and missing what is near at hand, keeping what is general and discarding what is particular."

the family of the Tou empress dowager was suppressed it was desired to give the Fêng consort her place in the Confucianists say the fêng-huang and chi-lin come on behalf of Sage Kings. They take it that the fêng-huang and chi-lin are benevolent and wise animals which ponder deeply and give trouble a wide berth.

They come if the central states keep the way, and if not they hide. In proclaiming the benevolence and wisdom of the fêng-huang and chi-lin they want by that to praise the Sage Kings. Nothing but the attractive power of a sage could bring the fêng-huang and chi-lin. This talk is foolish. The fêng-huang and chi-lin are wise and the sages are also wise. The sages fluster themselves in worrying for their contemporaries;
the fêng-huang and chi-lin should also lead and instruct. The sages go around and about among their contemporaries; the fêng-huang and chi-lin should also flock with the other birds and animals. Why do they stay out beyond the frontiers, so far away from the central states? How could it be that the sages are muddy and the fêng-huang and chi-lin alone are clear?

Why would it be that the surpassing draw of both is complete but their conduct so very different? Do we suppose sages ought to keep out of sight? Then these twelve ought to have done. If we assume sages ought to be seen then the fêng & lin ought to have been seen. If we assume that benevolent and wise creatures are deeply foresighted and avoid harm by a long margin, then the Cynosure King's being captured at Yu-li and Confucius's being in trouble in Ch'ên and Ts'ai were wrong. The Cynosure King and Confucius, benevolent and wise men, were troubled for the world and saddened for the people without measuring their own profit and loss, so even with the insight given by their kindness and wisdom they still underwent the suffering of imprisonment and straitened circumstances.

衡: 凡人操行能修身正節不能禁人加非於 己案人操行莫能過聖人聖人不能自免於厄 而鳳獨能自全於世是鳥獸之操賢於聖人也 Everyone can conduct himself to as to improve his character and conform to limits; no one can prevent others from lodging condemnations against himself.
Noting that no one's conduct can surpass that of a sage, and that sages cannot free themselves from straits but fêng & lin uniquely can keep themselves unharmful in the world, that would mean that the conduct of birds and animals is more competent than that of sages.

衡: 且鳥獸之知不與人通何以能知國有道 與無道也人同性類好惡均等尚不相知鳥獸 與人異性能知之人不能知鳥獸鳥獸亦不

能知人兩不能相知鳥獸為愚於人何以反能 知之 Furthermore, the consciousness of birds and animals is not interchangeable with that of humans.
How could they tell whether a state has or does not have the way? Humans are all in the same life-category and their likes and dislikes are equivalent, yet they still misunderstand each other. Birds and animals have a different kind of life from humans, so could they understand them? Humans do not understand birds and animals and birds and animals do not understand humans. The incomprehension is mutual, and birds and animals must be accounted less intelligent than humans, so by what contradiction could they understand us?

非：事急不及以賞救火者盡賞之則國不足以賞於人請徒行罰 Things are desperate. We can't take time to reward those who put out the fire, and if we reward all then the state will lack means to reward the other people. Let me use only punishment.

史：不告姦者腰斬告姦者與斬敵首同賞匿姦者與降敵同罰 Those not reporting violations were to be cut in half at the waist. Reporting violations brought the same reward as cutting off enemy heads, while concealing violations brought the same punishment as surrendering to the enemy.

戰：秦王曰寡人聞之毛羽不豐滿者不可以高飛文章不成者不可以誅罰道德不厚者不可以使民政政不順者不可以煩[大]臣今先生儼然不遠千里而庭教之願以異日 The king of Ch'in said, "We have heard that birds with incomplete plumage may not fly high on it, one whose emblems and insignia of power are not perfected may not use them as grounds for punishing others, one whose reputation for doing the right thing is not very deep may not use it to make people work for him and one whose doctrine of government is contrarian may not busy his servants on behalf of it. Now, sir, you in your dignity have not thought a thousand li too far to come to teach me those things in court. I would rather do it some other day."

A few examples in 戰國策 show 伐 being treated as an ergative verb:

戰：齊秦交爭韓魏東聽則秦伐矣 If, when Ch'i and Ch'in are struggling with each other, Hân and Wei take orders from the east, then Ch'in will be attacked.

I don't see a semantic distinction here like that between 居 "lodge" and 居 "occupy" (see above, p. liii). I think we have the same word in two different dialects. Regional usage of different words for the same thing has been a staple of Chinese dialectology all along. Differences in word frequency were noted by sinologists as clues to dialect differences in the twentieth century. I have suggested differences in pronunciation of close comparands as another sort of clue to dialect differences. Rare examples of disparate word-class membership like this one are also usable as clues.

Not until then did they fill the mouth with uncooked meat and set out cooked food. Thus it was to the sky they looked while it was the earth that held the body. The corporeal animator then sank while the sentient vapor remained above. Thus a dead man's head points north while the living face south. All of this has been thus from its beginning.

非：世之顯學儒墨也儒之所至孔丘也墨之所至墨翟也 The most eminent doctrines in the world are Confucian and Mohist. The Confucians can be traced back to Confucius and the Mohists can be traced back to Mo Ti

非：自墨子之死也有相里氏之墨有相夫氏

之墨有鄧陵氏之墨故孔墨之後儒分爲八墨離爲三。Since the death of Motzū there have been the Mohists of the Hsiangli clan, those of the Hsiangfu clan and those of the Têngling clan. Thus in the wake of their founders, the Confucians split into eight and the Mohists divided into three.

非：取舍相反不同而皆自謂真孔墨孔墨不可復生將誰使定世之學乎孔子墨子俱道堯舜而取舍不同皆自謂真堯舜堯舜不復生將誰使定儒墨之誠乎殷周七百餘歲虞夏二千餘歲而不能定儒墨之真今乃欲審堯舜之道於三千歲之前 Their tenets are contradictory and different, yet each calls itself genuine. Confucius and Mo-tzū not being returnable to life, whom are we going to get to make determinations about contemporary scholarship? Confucius and Mo-tzū both cited Yao and Shun, yet their tenets were different and both called themselves genuine Yao and Shun. Yao and Shun not returning to life, whom are we going to get to determine the sincerity of the Confucians and the Mohists? The Yin and Chou go back more than seven hundred years; the Hsia go back more than two thousand years, yet, unable even to determine the genuineness of Confucians and Mohists, they now want to get the details of the way of Yao and Shun three thousand years ago.

非：意者其不可必乎無參驗而必之者愚也弗能必而據之者誣也故明據先王必定堯舜者非愚則誣也愚誣之學雜反之行明主弗受也。On the other hand, perhaps we can't be sure of such things? If they are sure of such things with no evidence to go by, they are fools, while if they use them as proof without being sure of them, they are impostors. Thus those who explain and expound from the ancient kings or who are sure they have pinned down Yao and Shun, are either fools or impostors. The doctrines of fools and impostors are confused and contradictory, and a clear-sighted ruler does not accept them.

非：墨者之葬也冬日冬服夏日夏服桐棺三寸服喪三月世主以爲儉而禮之儒者破家而葬服喪三年大毀扶杖世主以爲孝而禮之夫是墨子之儉將非孔子之侈也是孔子之孝將非墨子之戾也今孝戾侈儉俱在儒墨而上兼禮之。In Mohist funerals, they wear winter clothes if it is winter and summer clothes if summer, the softwood coffin is three inches thick and mourning is worn into the third month. People nowadays consider them frugal and do honor to them. The Confucians break up the household for a funeral; they wear mourning into the third year and get so emaciated they have to hobble along on sticks, and rulers nowadays consider them filial and do honor to them. Now if you accept the frugality of the Mohists you ought to reject the extravagance of the Confucians, while if you accept the filiality of the Confucians, you ought to reject the callousness of the Mohists. In fact, filiality and callousness, frugality and extravagance, are juxtaposed in Confucianism and Mohism, yet superiors do honor to them equally.

a treaty with Ch'in to attack Ch'ü. Chao Yang said to the king of Ch'ü, "When the five nations have been its instrument of smashing Ch'ü, Ch'in is sure to turn its attention south to Ch'ü." When the king asked what to do about it, he replied, "The Hân family grip the state; they are self-aggrandizing but wary of conflict. That means they can be corralled by greed and controlled by fear. If we offer them a huge bribe so as to fill their minds with thoughts of what they stand to gain we will certainly rein them in, and if we then overawe them with the full extent of our military might they will surely be afraid of us. With them afraid of our might and governed by our wealth, anything the alliance of five do can be brought to nothing. And after they have broken the treaty, we need not even cede them any land." The king approved and sent Ta Kung as envoy to Hân. He met with Kung-chung and said, "The business at Niu-lan and the trouble at Ma-ling are things your king himself has seen. If the king would refrain from taking any military action on account of the alliance of five, we would like to cede certain territory of ours to you, to wit five cities, and we would also like to mobilize our full power in defense of Ch'ü." After Ch'ü had repulsed Chao and Wei, Ch'ü did not cede the territory after all; thus was the alliance of five con-founded.

He killed the younger full brother of the successor-son and they called him “ruler.” By his being called “ruler” we know that had the status of younger brother. Tuan was a younger brother but he is not called “younger brother” because he was the ruler's son. And not calling him “ruler” is to blame him. Tuan abandoned the way of the son and younger brother. It is to degrade Tuan but also to call the Earl of Chêng even worse. What do they find even worse about the Earl of Chêng? That he cold-bloodedly developed his plans that led to the killing. “At Yen” is distant. It is like saying, “He took him from his mother's embrace and killed him,” and so forth. It is to call him even worse.

藝：古先聖王所以受天命而不辭者誠急於答皇天之意副四海之望不得已也 The reason the wise kings of ancient times did not refuse the order of Sky was that they could not refuse, being genuinely eager to respond to the intent of Sovereign Sky and to further the hopes of all in our civilization.

史：及文王爲西伯斷虞芮之訟始受命呂望伯夷自海濱來歸之 When the Cynosure King came to be Overlord of the West, judging disputes in Yü and Jui, they first received the command. Lü Wang and Po Yi came from the seaside to adhere to him. 藝：臣等以爲天命不可稽神器不可黷昔周武中流有白魚之應不待濟而大號以建舜受禪大麓桑陰未移而已陟帝位所以祇承天命者若此之速也故無固讓之義不以守節爲貴必信於神靈而符合於天地也 We take it that the command of Sky is not to be sought; magic vessels are not to be sullied. Long ago the Martial King of Chou got the portent of the white fish while in midstream. There was no need to wait for his great shout while crossing the stream to be on his course to kingship. When Shun accepted the abdication [of Yao] at Ta-lu, before the shadow of the mulberry could shift he was already on the imperial throne. So swift as that is the manner in which the mandate of Sky is reverently received. Thus there is no standard of firmly refusing. Adhering to restrictions is not what is most highly valued. One must be seen by divine intelligence to be sincere and must match the tallies of sky and earth.

(1) not nec any specific one

漢：夫積貯者天下之大命也 Accumulation and storage are the most important principle in the world. 楚：后皇嘉樹橘徠服兮受命不遷生南國兮 The most pleasant tree in the world, the orange came to offer its submission/ It acceded to a decree not to go anywhere, and grows in the southern states.

詩：周雖舊邦其命維新 Though Chou is a former pūng/ Its mandate is new.

藝：天命不可稽神器不可黷 The command of Sky is not to be sought; magic vessels are not to be sullied.

呂：令者人主之所以爲命也賢不肖安危之所定也 Command is that by which the master of others carries out his mandate. It is that by which relative competence and relative security are fixed.

後：當王莽居攝篡弑之際天下之士莫不競褒稱德美作符命以求容媚譚獨自守默然無言 At the time when Wang Mang, usurper and assassin, had seized control of the world, all of the officer class vied with each other to praise him and proclaim him worthy of their allegiance, inventing omens of destiny so as to ingratiate themselves; only Tan kept to himself, saying nothing. [符命 adj-head "foretold destiny"]

d. fate, destiny

呂：命也者不知所以然而然者也 "fate" is defined as what is so although we do not know how it comes to be so 衡：夫遭遇幸偶或與命祿并或與命祿離 Now, coincidence and lucky chance in some cases parallel destiny and fortune, and in some cases depart from destiny and fortune.

衡：人命稟於天則有表候於體 The predetermination of a human life is supplied by Sky, and so there are indicia of it in the body members.

漢：數者一十百千萬也所以算數事物順性命之理也 Being numbered is being one, ten, hundred, thousand and ten thousand. It is used to enumerate acts and objects and to accord with the principles of nature and life.

隋：中外之官常明者百有二十可名者三百二十爲星二千五百微星之數萬一千五百二十庶物蠢動咸得繫命 Of the inner and outer constellations, there are 120 constantly bright. There are 320 namable. They amount to 2500 stars. The number of faint stars is 11,520. As the many creatures wriggle about, each has its fate attached.

衡：信命者則可幽居俟時不須勞精苦形求之也 One who knows the reality of destiny therefore accepts the possibility of dwelling obscurely, waiting for the opportunity to come, not needing to wear out one's essence or labor one's frame in seeking it.

莊：知不可奈何而安之若命 recognize its ineluctability and feel as untroubled by it as if it had been natural 衡：屋老崖瀕命凶之人遭尸立適履 A roof might be old or a cliff water-logged and an unfortunate man might come along to rest under it or just happen to walk past it.

漢：使犯法者贖罪入穀者補吏是以天下奢侈官亂民貧盜賊並起亡命者眾 He allowed criminals to buy themselves off and selling offices for grain.

Thus the world became dissolute, the bureaucracy disordered and the people impoverished. Bandits arose everywhere and those who lost their lives were many.

衡：生有高大之命其時身有尊貴之奇 When one is born with a grand high destiny, at that very time his body will have oddities foretelling honor and high rank.

衡：孔子自牖執其手曰亡之命矣夫 Confucius took his hand through the window and said, "It is fated, is it not, that we will lose him?"

衡：凡人遇偶及遭累害皆由命也有死生壽夭之命亦有貴賤貧富之命自王公逮庶人聖賢及下愚凡有首目之類含血之屬莫不有命命當貧賤雖富貴之猶涉禍患矣命當富貴雖貧賤之猶逢福善矣故命貴從賤地自達命賤從富位自危故夫富貴若有神助貧賤若有鬼禍 Whenever men meet good luck or encounter trouble and harm, it always comes from destiny.

There is the destiny of life or death, long life or short, and there is also the destiny of high rank or low and wealth or poverty. From kings and dukes to commoners, whether supremely competent or utter dolts, whatever is of the class of things that have heads and eyes, the family of creatures of flesh and blood, none is without destiny. If destiny assigns one lowliness and poverty, then even if we were to enrich and ennoble him he would still blunder into misfortune and suffering. If destiny assigns one wealth and high rank then even if we were to degrade and impoverish him, he would still bump into good fortune and felicity. Thus destined high rank will advance itself from lowly ground; destined low rank will topple itself from a high position. Thus such men become rich and high-ranking as if there were spirits helping them, or become poor and lowly as if there were haunts plaguing them.

衡：命貴之人俱學獨達并仕獨遷命富之人俱求獨得并爲獨成貧賤反此難達難遷難成獲過受罪疾病亡遺失其富貴貧賤矣是故才高行厚未必保其必富貴智寡德薄未可信其必貧賤或時才高行厚命惡廢而不進知寡德薄命善興而超逾故夫臨事知愚操行清濁性與才也仕宦貴賤治產貧富命與時也命則不可勉時則不可力知者歸之於天故坦蕩恬忽 One whose destiny is to high rank studies with a class but he alone gets through, is appointed with a cohort but he alone is promoted. One whose destiny is for wealth may seek in company but he alone gains, may strive with others but he alone prospers. For poverty and lowliness it is the reverse of this: he finds it hard to get through, hard to be promoted, hard to prosper. He incurs correction, attracts blame, gets sick, loses things, and what wealth and rank he had slips away and he becomes poor and lowly. Thus it is that high talent and grand deeds do not necessarily ensure that one will be rich and high ranking, nor do sparse knowledge and slim deserts reliably ensure that he will be poor and lowly. Sometimes though one's talent be high and deeds grand, one's destiny is bad and one is dismissed or not promoted, or though one's knowledge be sparse and his deserts slim his destiny is good and he prospers and leaps ahead. Thus the intelligence of one's conduct of affairs and the clarity of one's sense of purpose are due to nature and talent. One's appointment to high rank or low and one's profit on the management of his business are due to destiny and occasion. If things are due to destiny, they cannot be avoided; if dependent on occasion they cannot be forced. The wise relegate them to sky, letting it smoothly make one rich and high despite one's poverty and lowliness.

衡：雖其貧賤使富貴若鑿溝伐薪加勉力之趨致強健之勢鑿不休則溝深斧不止則薪多無命之人皆得所願安得貧賤凶危之患哉然則或時溝未通而遇湛薪未多而遇虎仕宦不貴治產之富鑿溝遇湛伐薪逢虎之類也有才不得施有智不得行或施而功不立或行而事不成雖才智如孔子猶無成立之功 In digging a ditch or chopping wood if one applies one's efforts to working hard and puts all one's strength into the task, unwearied digging will make the ditch deep and ceaseless chopping will make the wood pile up. Those without destiny can all get what they want; how could they incur the suffering of poverty, lowliness, hard times and peril? But sometimes when a ditch has not yet been put through one strikes boggy ground, or before one has much wood one encounters a tiger. Not rising high in office nor enriching one's estate are of the same class as hitting boggy ground while digging a ditch or running into a tiger while chopping wood. One had the talent but does not get to apply it; one has the knowledge but does not get to put it into effect. Or else one applies talent but without success, puts knowledge in effect without accomplishment. Even talent like that of Confucius was without lasting accomplishment. 衡：世俗見人節行高則曰賢哲如此何不貴見人謀慮深則曰辯慧如此何不富富有命

福祿不在賢哲與辯慧故曰富不可以籌策得貴不可以才能成智慮深而無財才能高而無官 The common man sees someone's highly disciplined conduct and says, "With skill like this, why hasn't he high rank?" He sees someone's deeply foresighted plans and says, "With intelligence like this, why isn't he rich?" Rank and wealth are destined. Luck and fortune do not depend on skill and intelligence. Thus we say, "You never get rich by stratagems nor gain high rank by talent." One's plans are far-reaching but one lacks capital; one's talent is high but one is out of office.

衡: 懷銀紆紫未必稷契之才積金累玉未必陶朱之智或時下愚而千金頑魯而典城故官御同才其貴殊命治生鈞知其富異祿祿命有貧富知不能殺性命有貴賤才不能進退成桓受尊命而周管稟卑秩也案古人君希有不學於人臣知博希有不為父師然而人君猶以無能處主位人臣猶以鴻才為庸役故貴賤在命不在智愚貧富在祿不在頑慧 Hoarded silver and stored purple cloth may not imply the talent of a Chi; piled gold and heaped jade may not imply the knowledge of a Hsieh. Sometimes a low-grade moron has a thousand gold pieces or a pig-headed dolt is in charge of a fortified city. Thus in official life those of identical talent can be destined disparate ranks, while in private life those of equal intelligence may be destined differing wealth. There are degrees of wealth and poverty granted that intelligence cannot increase or decrease; there are degrees of high and low rank destined that talent cannot promote or demote. The talent of Ch'eng Wang was not equal to that of Tan, Duke of Chou; the intelligence of the Foursquare Marquess was not up to that of Kuan Chung. But Ch'eng and Foursquare had the destiny to be honored while Tan and Kuan were ordained to be of lower rank. Looking at antiquity, few are the cases in which the rulers did not learn from their ministers, few the cases in which those of broad understanding were not tutors and teachers. Nonetheless, the rulers still with their incompetence occupied the ruling position and the ministers still with their vast talent acted as flunkies. Thus high or low rank depends on destiny, not on whether one is intelligent or stupid; wealth or poverty depends on fortune, not on whether one is frivolous or serious.

e. lifespan (ex "fate")

衡: 人之命有長短 People's destined lives may be long or short.

語: 使靈巫求福請命對扁鵲而咒病者卒死靈巫不能治也 They employed a psychic medium to bring good fortune and plead for the patient's life. He directed curses at P'ien Ch'üeh. In the end the patient died, the psychic medium having been unable to cure him.

非: 智性也壽命也性命者非所學於人也 Intelligence is innate and lifespan is pre-ordained. What is innate or pre-ordained is not learned from others.

衡: 是故德令降於殿堂命長之囚出於牢中 Thus the pardon is issued in the audience hall and the prisoner whose fate is to live longer is released from jail. 淮: 是故聖人得志而在上位讒佞姦邪而欲犯主者譬猶雀之見鷓而鼠之遇狸也亦必無

餘命矣 Thus when the great wise man reaches his goal and is on the throne, anyone who is slanderous, ingratiating, treacherous or evil and means to go against the ruler is like a sparrow meeting a sparrowhawk or a mouse meeting a raccoon-dog: he would have no longer left to live than they.

衡: 何以知不滿百為天者百歲之命也 How can we tell that not reaching a hundred is to be considered dying young and that one hundred is the destined span? 衡: 故厲氣所中必加命短之人 Thus where the pestilence strikes is to infect people whose allotted lives are short.

史: 湯出見野張網四面祝曰自天下四方皆入吾網湯曰噫盡之矣乃去其三面祝曰欲左左欲右不用命乃入吾網諸侯聞之曰湯德至矣及禽獸 Tang went out and saw the setting of nets to all four directions in the wilds. They prayed, "From everywhere in the world, all enter our nets." Tang said, "Hey! That gets all of them!" He then took down three sides and prayed, "If you want to go left, go left. If you want to go right, go right. If you are tired of life, enter our nets." The barons heard of it and said, "Tang's good will is perfect; it extends even to birds and beasts."

左:以隨之辟小而密邇於楚楚實存之 Given the remoteness and smallness of Sui and its being very near to Chü, it is Chü that has preserved it.

語:密緻博[通一]迤蟲蝸不能穿水溼不能傷在高柔軟入地堅彊 On minute scale or immense, worms and beetles cannot bore into them, nor water or dampness harm them. Used aloft they are flexible; in the earth they are stiff and sturdy.

釋:密蜜也如蜜所塗無不滿也 "dense" is "honey"; like what we smear with honey, it goes all over everywhere.

隋:張平子既作銅渾天儀於密室中以漏水轉之與天皆合如符契也 After Chang Ping-tzu had built a brass turning sky orrery, he timed it with a clepsydra in a sealed room. Its rotation matched that of the sky like paired tallies.

草：心有疏密手有巧拙 There are vague minds and precise ones; there are clever hands and clumsy ones.

選：且夫道有夷隆學有麤密因時而建德者不以遠近易則 Furthermore, there are levels and hills on the Way; there are coarse and fine kinds of scholarship. In adjusting to one's time to build one's influence, one does not exchange basic principles according to whether they are recent or remote.
草：蓋秦之末刑峻網密官書煩冗戰攻並作軍書交馳羽檄紛飛故為隸草趨急耳示簡易之指非聖人之業也 It seems that at the end of the Ch'in dynasty punishment was exalted and the legal net fine-meshed, official documents multiplied troublesomely, wars erupted everywhere at once, military documents sped back and forth, and HQ orders flew around in chaos. So they devised li-shu grass writing. It only was to speed things to their utmost pace and convey simple, easily-understood meanings. It was no project of the sages.

荀：吾嘗跂而望矣不如登高之博見也 I have tried standing on tiptoe and looking afar; one doesn't get as broad a view as climbing a height.

史：商君相秦十年宗室貴戚多怨望者 Lord Shang acted as premier in Ch'in for ten years. Many of the principal families and the nobles looked on him with resentment.

隋：今日西轉不復見是火滅之類也日月不圓也望視之所以圓者去人遠也夫日火之精也月水之精也水火在地不圓在天何故圓 In fact, how the sun rolls westward and is no longer seen is exactly analogous to a fire going out. It is not true that the sun and moon are round. That they appear round when we look at them is because they are so far away from us. The sun is the essence of fire, the moon that of water. Water and fire are not round on the ground; why should they be round in the sky?

b. observe expectantly

衡：塗有狂夫投刀而候澤有猛虎厲牙而望 In the road a madman flips his knife and waits; in the swamp a ravening tiger sharpens its fangs and watches.

選：望濤遠決 Catching the tide we go a long way without stopping.

後：怪公卿以下各相顧望 I marvel at how from the highest ministers on down you all just look at each other.

後：善風角星筭六日七分能望氣占候吉凶 He was good at divining by wind direction, astrology, six-day and seven-division, and could predict good or ill fortune by examining chi.

藝：將軍出兵有所討伐引兵出城門望見白雲及白水者舉白牙旗五色牙旗隨天氣四時 When a general sends forth a military force, having someone to punish, he leads it away through the gate of the fortress and looks about. If he sees white clouds and white water he raises a white ensign. Ensigns of all five colors are to accord with the vapor-energy of the sky and with the four seasons.

mjwən 1.20 cynosure (pheap) 142 文

It is always a froward undertaking to limn the contours of a word's semantic field from its etymology, the more so in a language in which a proper basis for determining etymologies is yet to be shown. But, for this word, plausible comparands are worth mention. Some are mjwər words like 武 and 舞 (p). Others are mjwər-mjwər words like 徽 and 麾. I think of this set of words as connected with the need of a hunting party armed with bows and spears to make clear signals to avoid injury while keeping silent to avoid startling game. (A war party could have a similar need.) Hand signals can meet this need, but are more efficient if augmented with artifacts of cloth, fur, animal tails, bird wings and the like. Distinctive garments and headgear also help. If this set has a single etymon, a plausible one might be 尾 mjwər "tail" or a related word. Some uses of 物 mjwət also call to mind this set of words.

Reanalysis and blending seem, as often, to have complicated the development of these words. It can be hard to distinguish this set from others meaning "flicker, as fire" or "fly, as bird" or "flap, as blown by wind", nor can confusion with a word like 聞 mjwən be ruled out. Until we can reliably trace individual words through eras and dialects, I prefer not to attempt such distinctions. And of course we cannot take it for granted that all words now written with the graph 文 had a common origin.

We should not let our opinion of a word's origin bend our understanding of it in a specific context, but neither should we allow a word as important as this one to be represented in translation with blurry generalities like "cultured," "literary" or the like. As pheap, for example, as first applied to the wild-west bandido whose son broke the hegemony of Shang, I suggest it referred to his success in organizing and leading smash-and-grab raiding parties. My "Cynosure" reflects that interpretation: the one to whom others look to get direction. But a 文王 of the 12th C BC would not necessarily have had much in common with a 文公 of the 7th C BC, nor either with a 文帝 of the 2nd C BC.

~~mīwə~~ mīwər 2.9 ^m dance 142 舞 舞 舞 無

Some have suggested a connection between dancing and shamanism in ancient China. Early forms of the graph 舞 like 𠄎 seem to show a man waving flames or scarves or something, although the trance or ecstatic state associated with shamans does not seem to be indicated. I see no reason to suppose shamans did not dance, but I also see no evidence that they did, at least not as part of their craft or art. We are told that they spoke enchantments and prophecies, some in the voice of a spirit that possessed the shaman's body. I have not seen grounds to assign mīwə 巫 "shaman" to a set of companions, but if forced to choose one I incline toward 306 obscure rather than 142 flutter.

I view the activity this verb denotes as consisting in its early forms, of coordinated pantomimes of stylized warfare. In a society in which warfare is mostly the province of aristocrats, the value of coordinating the efforts of these hot-headed show-offs cannot be overstated. It can mean literally life or death, for example, to have all chariot-drivers turn at once when the war drums beat the signal to do so. Many words associated with warfare seem to me to belong to this complex that means "give signals" and "accept signals". Pantomimes of this being done, presented as lively entertainment at drinking parties, seem to me an effective way of emphasizing the importance of coordination. (V. note under 文 "cynosure".)

Under the Completion and Tranquility kings of Chou, punishments were put in abeyance and not used and good will extended to wild creatures and doctrine pervaded the four quarters. Nations from beyond the wilderness, Hsiao-shén, Pei-fa, Chü-sou and Ti-chiang came to submit. The stars did not deviate from their courses, the sun and moon were not eclipsed, mountain slopes never slid, valley streams were never blocked. Unicorns and phoenixes inhabited thickets near the capital; The Ho and the Luo sent forth diagrams and writings. Alas, what shall we do to reach this state? Now it has fallen to Us to uphold the ancestral temples. We rise early and strive; We retire late and ponder. We are as if crossing deep water still unsure of our landing. Is that not daunting? Is that not overwhelming? What is to be done so as to make obvious the grand aims and beneficent charisma of the former emperors and to connect to Yao and Shun in high antiquity and parallel the three kings in recent? That We have lacked perspicacity and have not been able to extend Our moral influence to distant places—this is something all you gentlemen and officers have heard and seen. The most capable are clear-sighted about the entirety of royal affairs ancient and modern. They will receive commissions to make close inquiry, and will all reply in writing, writing on rolls of bamboo strips which We will examine in person." It was then that Tung Chung-shu, Kung-sun Hung and their associates came to prominence from among them.

孟: 管仲以其君霸晏子以其君顯 Kuan Chung led his ruler to overlordship and Yen-tzu led his ruler to fame.

左: 盟國人於大宮曰所不與崔慶者晏子仰天歎曰嬰所不唯忠於君利社稷者是與有上帝乃歆 They swore their countrymen to an oath in the great hall, wording it, "...that we will adhere to Tsüi and Ch'ing." Yen-tzu looked up at the sky and sighed and said, "I swear by the High Ancestor that I will adhere only to those who are loyal to the ruler and beneficial to the state." Only then did he smear his mouth with blood.

晏: 景公藉重而獄多拘者滿囹怨者滿朝晏子諫公不聽 The Glorious Marquess's exactions were heavy, and there were many lawsuits. The prisons were filled with prisoners and the court was full of resentment. Yen-tzu remonstrated but the marquess did not listen.

晏: 公謂晏子曰夫獄國之重官也願託之夫子晏子對曰君將使嬰飭其功乎則嬰有壹安能書足以治之矣君將使嬰飭其意乎夫民無欲殘其家室之生以奉暴上之僻者則君使吏比而焚之而已矣 The marquess said to Yen-tzu, "Court cases are an important function of the state. I would like to make you responsible for their conduct." Yen-tzu said, "Do you want me to get the work done in the proper form? In that case I have a servant girl who can write, who would be all that is needed. Or do you want me to get it done in the proper spirit? Since none of our people wish to destroy the livelihood of their households to support the minions of tyrannical superiors, YL should simply have the bailiffs line them up and burn them."

晏: 景公不說曰飭其功則使壹安飭其意則比焚如是夫子無所謂能治國乎晏子曰嬰聞與君異今夫胡貉戎狄之蓄狗也多者十有寡者五六餘然不相害傷今東豕豕妄投其折骨決皮之可立得也且夫上正其治下審其則貴賤不相踰越論今君舉千鍾爵祿而妄投之于左右左右爭之甚于胡狗而公不知也 The Glorious Marquess said to Yen-tzu, "'To grind out the work, use a servant girl. To do it in the proper spirit, burn them all.' If that's all there is, have you none of what is called 'ability to govern a state'?" Yen-tzu said, "That's not how I heard it. You know all the frontier barbarians keep dogs, some as many as ten or more, at least five or six, but they don't bite and maim each other. Now if you tied up a chicken or a pig and threw it among them, you would not wait long to hear them biting and crunching each other's hide and bones. Likewise if superiors demand good government and inferiors are meticulous about what is whose, then low and high ranks will not overleap each other. Here YL takes an appointment worth a thousand chung and tosses it up for grabs to your retinue and they fight over it worse than the barbarians' dogs and YL doesn't even notice it.

晏: 寸之管無當天下不能足以粟今齊國丈夫耕女子織夜以接日不足以奉上而君側皆雕文刻鏤之觀此無當之管也而君終不知五尺童子操寸之[煙→]燧天下不能足以薪今君之左右皆操煙之徒而君終不知 "A one-inch tube cannot be filled up by all the grain in the world if it lacks a stopper in the bottom. Now the men of Ch'i plow and the women spin, and they continue the work of the day into the night and it is still not enough to support those above them, yet YL's retinue show off their fancy carved designs and intaglios. This is a bottomless tube, yet YL never even notices it. A four-foot boy with a one-inch fire-spill can burn more firewood than the whole world can satiate. Now YL's retinue are lighters of flames, yet YL never even notices it.

晏: 鐘鼓成肆干戚成舞雖禹不能禁民之觀且夫師民之欲而嚴其聽禁其心聖人所難也而況奪其財而飢之勞其力而疲之常致其苦

而嚴聽其獄誅其罪非嬰所知也 “When the gongs & drums give forth a concert and the shields & spears present a dance, not even Yü could prevent people from watching. And to make a display of what people want but judge them severely and suppress their hearts and minds—a sage would find that difficult, let alone a ruler who takes their goods and starves them, compels their labor and exhausts them, constantly sends them misery and judges their cases severely and exacts cruel punishments—that is not within my purview.”

晏：公孫接田開疆古冶子事景公以勇力搏虎聞晏子過而趨三子者不起 Kung-sun Chieh, T'ien K'ai-chiang and Ku Yeh-tzu were in the service of the Glorious Marquess. They were renowned for having the bravery and strength to capture tigers. When Yen-tzu passed them he would hurry his stride, but they never rose. [compare 搏虎 to 暴虎]

晏：晏子入見公曰臣聞明君之蓄勇力之士也上有君臣之義下有長率之倫內可以禁暴外可以威敵上利其功下服其勇故尊其位重其祿今君之蓄勇力之士也上無君臣之義下無長率之倫內不以禁暴外不可威敵此危國之器也不若去之 Yen-tzu had a private audience with the marquess. He said, “I have heard that a clear-sighted ruler treats a retinue of brave vigorous men in such a way that above there is the proper relation of ruler and servant, while below there is the order of leading and following. Thus internally he can prevent violence with them while externally he can frighten his enemies with them. Their superiors benefit from their vigor while their subordinates submit to their bravery. Thus he makes their rank honored and their salaries impressive. Here YL treats brave and vigorous men in such a way that above there is no proper relation of ruler and servant, while below there is no order of leading and following. Thus internally you cannot prevent violence while externally you cannot frighten enemies. These are weapons that endanger the state. Better get rid of them.”

晏：公曰三子者搏之恐不得刺之恐不中也晏子曰此皆力攻勦敵之人也無長幼之禮因請公使人[少↓]餽之二桃曰三子何不計功而食桃 The marquess said, “The thing to worry about with these three is that if I seize them they might not stay seized, while if I try to assassinate them the blow might miss.” Yen-tzu said, “These are all men whose style is a vigorous attack against a strong enemy. They observe no protocol of senior and junior. So I would like YL to have someone present them with two peaches, saying, “Why don't you three gentlemen tell why you deserve to eat these peaches?”

晏：公孫接仰天而歎曰晏子智人也夫使公之計吾功者不受桃是無勇也士眾而桃寡何不計功而食桃矣接一搏猶而再搏乳虎若接之功可以食桃而無與人同矣援桃而起 Kung-sun Chieh looked up, sighed and said, “Yen-tzu is a discerning man. The way he got our ruler to evaluate our merits, if one doesn't get a peach he lacks courage. Peaches being fewer than men, why not tell why I deserve to eat a peach? I once captured a wild boar and twice captured a mother tiger nursing cubs. Feats like mine entitle me to eat a peach without sharing it with another.” He took a peach and got up.

晏：田開疆曰吾仗兵而卻三軍者再若開疆

之功亦可以食桃而無與人同矣援桃而起 T'ien K'ai-chiang said, “I have made a whole national army retreat just holding a weapon at the ready. I did it twice. Feats like mine also entitle me to eat a peach without sharing it with another.” He took a peach and got up.

晏：古冶子曰吾嘗從君濟于河龜銜左驂以入砥柱之流當是時也冶少不能游潛行逆流百步順流九里得龜而殺之左操驂尾右擊龜頭鶴躍而出津人皆曰河伯也若冶視之則大龜之首若冶之功亦可以食桃而無與人同矣二子何不反桃抽劍而起 Ku Yeh-tzu said, “I once followed our ruler crossing the Yellow River. A giant turtle seized the ruler's left outer horse in its mouth and took it into the Tichu current. At that time I was quite young and could not swim. I sank to the bottom and walked a hundred paces against the current, then went nine li with the current, got the turtle and killed it. Holding up the horse's tail in my left hand and hefting the turtle's head in my right, I came out of the river high-stepping like a crane. People in the shallows all said, “It's the River Boss!” But I looked at it and it was just the head of a huge snapping turtle. Feats like mine also entitle me to eat a peach without sharing it with another. Why don't you two give back the peaches?” He drew his sword and got up.

晏：公孫接田開疆曰吾勇不子若功不子逮取桃不讓是貪也然而不死無勇也皆反其桃 [擊→]契領而死 Kung-sun Chieh and T'ien K'ai-chiang said, “Our bravery is not as good as yours, nor do our feats come up to yours. To take the peaches rather than yielding them to you was greedy. To be so and not to die is to lack bravery.” They both gave back the peaches and died by cutting their own throats.

晏：古冶子曰二子死之治獨生之不仁恥人以言而夸其聲不義恨乎所行不死無勇雖然二子同桃而節治專其桃而宜亦反其桃 [擊→]契領而死 Ku Yeh-tzu said, “It would show a lack of feeling for me to live through this after they both died in it. To shame people with words and boast of one's reputation is not proper. Full of remorse for what one has done, not to die is to lack courage. Even so, for the two to share a peach would have been fair and for me to have the other peach to myself would have been proper.” He also returned the peaches and died by cutting his throat.

晏：使者復曰已死矣公殮之以服葬之以士禮焉 The messenger reported that they had all died. The marquess buried them in full uniform with the honors of officers.

This was a case of Shih Kuang wanting to tune the bells properly on behalf of someone in the future who could discriminate pitch.

b. the sound of music

後：譚以父任為郎因好音律善鼓琴 Tan was appointed to the imperial household on account of his father; he turned out to love tunes and tunings and to be good at the cithern.

史：凡音由於人心天之與人而有以相通如景之象形響之應聲故為善者天報之以福為惡者天與之以殃其自然者也 All music comes from the human heart. Sky's relation to humans is such that there are ways they can connect, like the resemblance of shadow to shape, or the correspondence of echo to sound. Thus sky rewards doers of good with good fortune and sends ill fortune to doers of evil; these are examples of its spontaneous behavior.

史：故舜彈五弦之琴歌南風之詩而天下治紂為朝歌北鄙之音身死國亡舜之道何弘也紂之道何隘也 Thus Shun plucked a five-string cithern and sang the folk songs of the south, and the world was put in order. Ch'òu played music of the villages north of Chao-ke; he and his state both perished.

How did the way of Shun become so widespread and that of Ch'òu get so straitened?

史：夫南風之詩者生長之音也舜樂好之樂與天地同意得萬國之驩心故天下治也夫朝歌者不時也北者敗也鄙者陋也紂樂好之與萬國殊心諸侯不附百姓不親天下畔之故身死國亡 The folk songs of the south are the music of birth and growth [play on "south wind" indicating vernal rebirth]. Shun loved them, and his music expressed aims identical with those of sky and earth, gaining the gladdened hearts of all nations; thus the world was put in order. Now, "singing at morning" [pun on pln] is ill-timed, "retreating" [pun on "north"] is defeat and "rustic" [pun on "village"] is vulgar. Ch'òu loved them, differing in this from all nations; the barons did not adhere to him, nor did the folk feel akin to him. The world rebelled against him and thus he perished with his state.

A. the cardinal number one

1. (all numbers are stative verbs) be | make one a. in abs use

戰: 此以一易二之計也 This is a plan that exchanges one for two.

(1). as adj

左: 一矢 one arrow

孟: 吾何愛一牛 Why would I begrudge one cow?

(2). as nuc

左: 矢一而已 There was only one arrow.

(3). as fac

釋: 四方各一時 Each of the four directions has a season.

山: 其狀如牛蒼黑一角 its shape is like an ox, blue-black with one horn

呂: 日夜一周 Day and night make one cycle.

國: 王耕一墾 The king plows one furrow.

史: 治世不一道 There is no single way to put the world in order.

b. only one

非: 千里之馬時一 A superb horse is seen once in an era.

非: 夔非一足也一而足也 It wasn't that K'uei had only one leg; it was that one of him was enough.

衡: 一足之人 a one-legged man

管: 螭者一頭而兩身其形若蛇 Kuei: has a single head but a pair of bodies, shaped like snakes.

史: 千金之裘非一狐之腋也 A cloak worth a thousand ducats is not the armpit fur of only one fox.

非: 欲治其外官置一人 If you want to govern the outside, to each office appoint just one man.

衡：一人之身含五行之氣 Within one human body are contained the vapors of the five elements.

淮：一人相隨 go in turn one by one

淮：一朝而兩城下 Both cities fell in one morning.

馬：一國而服六危者滅 One state with all six totterings will perish.

晉：法術紛以多端變態諒非一緒 The techniques [of thaumaturgy] are a maze leading every which way; the manifestations obviously refuse to follow a unique line. [一緒 fac-obj; this nuc is obj to 非 put caus fac || 寧 etc]

選：黃鵠一遠別千里顧徘徊 The great swan goes far away in a single flight/ For a thousand li it looks back and hesitates. [I see a double meaning here: "a non-stop flight" and also "flying alone".]

史：妾一僵而覆酒上存主父下存主母然而不免於答惡在乎忠信之無罪也 By the one act of falling and upending the wine, the maid saved her master as well as her mistress yet did not escape whipping. Where in this is the guiltlessness of integrity and reliability?

c. a given one, a particular one

呂：萬民之主不阿一人 The ruler of myriad people does not lean toward any individual

非：不知一時之權 did not perceive where the advantage lay in a particular situation

衡：越簡子夢上天見一男子在帝之側 The Pespicious Patriarch of Chao dreamed of going up to the sky and seeing a certain man at the side of the Ancestor.

淮：昔者蒼頡作書成造曆胡曹爲衣后稷耕稼儀狄作酒奚仲爲車此六人者皆有神明之道聖智之跡故人作一事而遺後世非能一人而獨兼有之。In ancient times Ts'ang Chieh invented writing, Jung Ch'êng invented calendrical calculation, Hu Ts'ao made clothing, Hou Chi plowed for planting, Yi Ti invented wine and Hsi Chung invented carts. These six wise men all left the traces of their passage on the way of the intellect. Thus when someone invents one way of doing things and hands it on, it is not possible for one man alone to monopolize it in later generations.

d. one more, another

論：至於他邦...至一邦 got to another state...went to yet another state

左：或遇之...又遇一人 someone encountered him...he later encountered someone else

左：宣子有環其一在鄭商 The Pespicious Patriarch had a ring; its mate was in possession of a Ch'êng merchant.

多：天一方 the other end of the world

多：一曰 someone else says

多：一說 another explanation

史：夫以宋加之淮北強萬乘之國也而齊并之是益一齊也 Now adding Sung to Huai-pei would make a state of ten thousand chariots. If Ch'i annexes it this would be to add another Ch'i.

史：國一日見攻雖欲事秦不可得也 If some day your state is attacked, though you may wish to submit to Ch'in, that will not be possible.

衡：道路之上一步一鬼也 On the roads there would be a new ghost every step.

e. one portion of several

詩：人知其一莫知其他 people recognize the one [application] but none recognizes the others

論：回也聞一以知十 Hui hears one and thereby knows of all ten.

左：民三其力二入於君而衣食其一 The people divide their work into three parts; two go to the ruler while they feed and clothe themselves by the other one.

左：五之一 one part of five

史：中宮天極星其一明者太一常居也旁三星三公或曰子屬 In the center of the palaces: the pole constellation. The bright one is Great Unvarying and it stays always in the same place. The three beside it: the three ducal ministers, also called the sons.

f. even one

呂：三者國有一焉 As to the three, if a state has even one of them

史：此一物不具君固不出 If even one of these things is lacking, you refuse to go out.

淮：人主之一舉也不可不慎也 Even a single appointment made by a ruler is not a thing to be treated lightly.

史：義不離其親一宿於外 He thought it proper not to spend even a single night apart from his parents. [義 put caus fac]

叢：自古聖王之爲城臺未有不戮一人而能致功若此者也 Since the time when the ancient sage-kings built walls and towers never has anyone brought about an accomplishment like this without executing even one man.

g. the entire one

草：十日一筆月數丸墨 They use up a writing brush every ten days, and several tablets of inkstuff per month.

史：行之一國未嘗不得所欲 When they were put into effect throughout the nation, in no case did they not achieve their desired effect.

漢：天下方擾諸侯並起[令→]今置將不善一敗塗地 The world is all in turmoil at once and the nobles are united in arms. If we now appoint an unskilful leader, all will be defeated everywhere.

後：城中好高髻四方高一尺 If high top-knots are favored in the city, in the provinces they go up a full foot.

選：我心何怫鬱思欲一東歸 Where has my resolution gone? I want to retreat all the way back east.

史：夫以一詐僞之蘇秦而欲經營天下混一諸侯其不可成亦明矣 It has now surely become clear that controlling the world and amalgamating the barons by employing the totally false and deceptive Su Ch'in could not have been done. [first →]

史：於是有裨海環之人民禽獸莫能相通者如一區中者乃爲一州 There is there a peripheral ocean surrounding it such that neither people nor animals can pass. It is like the interior of an entire district. That, then, is a chou.

h. each one

史：秦西有巴蜀大船積粟起於汶山浮江已下至楚三千餘里舫船載卒一舫載五十人與三月之食 Ch'in has, in the west, Pa and Shu. If a large boat is loaded with grain and launched from Min Mountain onto the Yangtze, it can float down to Ch'u, over three thousand li away. If they raft it with another boat to carry troops, each raft would carry fifty men with food for three months.

j. 一何 how so entirely_?

宋：使君謝羅敷寧可共載不羅敷前置詞使君一何愚 His Excellency addressed himself to Lo-fu/ "Wouldn't you rather ride with me?" / Lo-fu had her refusal prepared/ "How could His Excellency be so utterly silly?" [一 fac 何愚 adj-head as obj]

藝：農夫禱於龍洞得雨將祭謝之孫登見曰此病龍雨安能蘇禾稼乎如弗信請嗅之水果腥穢 A farmer prayed at a dragon cave and got rain. As he was about to sacrifice in acknowledgement of it, Sun T'eng saw it and said, "How could this sick dragon's rain be able to revive the grain? If you don't believe me, smell it." The water was indeed smelly and dirty.

藝：下邳陳公達議以貴人雖是先所幸尸體穢汗不宜配至尊乃以竇太后配食 Mr. Ch'ên of Hsia-p'i submitted a dissent to the effect that although as consort of the highest rank she had indubitably been first favored by the imperial attention, since her corpse had been polluted she was not suitable to be paired with the most honored one. So the empress dowager Tou was enshrined.

Appendix 4: Mimetics and comparands

This appendix is narrowly focused on one aspect of the 海賦 Fu on the Sea by Mu Hua 木華, namely sequences of two syllables that might be considered mimetic binomes. I give enough of the text to provide about fifty binomes; that should suffice to show my procedure. I put the Chinese graphs for such sequences in bold type in the left-hand column. The corresponding English phrase in the translation in the center column is also bold-faced. A translation of a text this allusive and euphuistic normally includes an apparatus criticus. Readers feeling the need of one are invited to consult the dictionary portion of this volume, as well as the usual sinological sources.

In the right-hand column I give three forms of annotation. I transcribe the two syllables in modified GSR marked to indicate my judgment of the structure of the Chinese word or phrase they compose. I transcribe two words with the function of each word indicated by a subscript letter appended to its transcription thus: a adjunct, f factor, h head, n nucleus, o object, s subject. I write a disyllabic word as hyphenated syllables, with subscript appended to the second syllable. After each word I give the number of the comparand set I used to arrive at my translation of this phrase. At the end of the line, I insert any scholium on the two words.

It seems that many two-syllable sequences glossed as if they were mimetic binomes can be understood in the light of comparands as two words chosen for assonance, alliteration or rime. See discussion of sound variation in mimetic binomes above (p. lvi) and of traditional scholia (pp. xxviii-xxx). Many of these scholia do not serve as definitions of the phrases they gloss.

So then when the great brightness hauls the reins at the cave of the metal door-pivot

And the flying warmth is flushed from the shallows at Fu-sang
It swirls the sand and rattles the pebbles and stirs up a strong wind at the island shore

Which then becomes invigorated; breakers spring up
They bash each other turn by turn, making spray fly, raising billows

Whose shape is like the wheel of the sky held down and spinning furiously

And like the axle of earth pulled out and fighting to revolve
Long steep banks spring up and then fall back

The five peaks are moved to dance, then knock each other down
When flowing along, they swell up and accumulate in mounds

When impeded, they rush forward,
break and collapse

They recurve sharply, forming tunnels

They leap high, showing off solitary peaks

Suddenly they spread out, rising at a different angle

Heaping, jostling and squeezing, they bump each other

Waves stampede in panic; water huddles together in fright
Opening, closing, parting, rejoining, rushing, racing

babbling, rippling

bursting outward

collapsing inward

endlessly

boiling

So then when black clouds have gone away

No more shaking, no more stirring-up

Fine dust wouldn't rise; thin gauze wouldn't stir

Yet still oh-ho! leftover waves spring up of their own

sharp peaks,

towering slopes,

steep mounds and mountainous levees

Consider how its estuaries and inlets overflow and sluice,

Bursting roisterously through to form intracoastal channels;

Through exotic aborigines and isolated tribes they twist and twine for thousands of li.

If there is a swift announcement from a farflung outpost or a *p'ian*_a 132 *χmwāng*_h 6 偏邊也

royal order to be urgently propagated

Horses ridden swift as flight, oars plied quick as flapping wings,

span the sea, cross the mountain tops

At that point, foreseeing a good wind we hoist the 75-footer

Belaying the long furling-lines, we haul up the sail-mat.

Catching the tide, we go a long way without stopping

Madly fleeing like birds

Swift as when a frightened duck flies to regain its flock

Fast as one drawn by six dragons

Thirty [estuaries] passed without stopping.

Before the morning ends we reach our destination.

But suppose we had approached the deep ignoring an ill omen, or had promised an offering not meaning to render it, or had prayed for inordinate blessing

Then there would be sea-kappa in ambush on the road, horse-chompers blocking the paths, wraiths suddenly appearing in the sky, seeming to be what they are not,

Water sprites suddenly appear, seen only briefly,

All kinds of eldritch things are half-glimpsed,

With fantastic shapes.

They split our sail and break our spar; a killing wind bestirs its wrath. Suddenly all is inexplicably out of kilter; chaotic and bewildering.
