不亦可乎 In the time of the Numinous Marquess of Wèi Mi Tzū Hsia was favored and did as he pleased throughout Wèi. One of the court dwarves saw him and said, "My dream is fulfilled!" "What did you dream of?" asked the marquess. "I dreamed of a stove, on account of seeing YL," he replied. The marquess said angrily, "I have heard that one who is to see a ruler dreams of the sun. Why would you dream of a stove before seeing me?" "The sun shines on the whole world equally, and no one person can block it. A ruler shines on his whole country equally and no one person can shut him up. So if you're going to see a ruler you dream of the sun. But a stove—one man soaks up its warmth and the others behind him get no look at it. Now perhaps some one man is soaking up YL's warmth; if so then wouldn't it be right for YS to dream of a stove?"

tju-tju ^{nc} 瀾瀾

tju-tju ^{nc} patriarch (hon.) 29 主君

左：齊侯使高張來唁公稱主君子家子子齊卑君矣 Kao Chang, emissary of the Marquess of Ch'i, came to express sympathy with our ruler. He addressed him with the expression "patriarch". Tzū-chia-tzu said, "Ch'i has degraded our ruler."

Legge, following 服虔, says of this passage, "The style of the messenger in calling him 'sir (主君)' was the mode of addressing a great officer." It turns out to be more complicated than that. There are examples of great officers being addressed as 主君, as well as 君 and 公 (qqv). (Calling these third-person honorifics "pronouns" is an ignorant error.) For example, 蘇秦 is so addressed by some of the rulers to whom he made his appeal.

史：楚王曰...今主君欲一天下收諸侯存危國寡人謹奉社稷以從 The king of Ch'u said, "...Now you, sir, wish to unite the world, include all the barons, and preserve endangered states. With respect, We place our state at your disposal in that endeavor."

But most referents of this honorific are not best described as merely "great officers"; they are heads of great land-owning families in 晉, immediate ancestors of some who became sovereigns when 晉 broke up, and in the majority of extant examples that family/state is 趙. The position of 蘇秦 was not merely that of a foreigner employed as a high officer; he was the ambassador plenipotentiary of the king of 趙, and his mission was to transmit the rescript 詔 of the king of 趙 to other kings.

It may be no coincidence that examples of 主君 come preponderantly from 晉 and former 晉; we need always consider the possibility that a word or one of its acceptations is peculiar to a dialect. We need also consider the likelihood that the meaning and usage of 主君, like most words, developed over time.

As a word of general currency in CC, 主君 strikes me as best considered parallel to words like 主人, 主父 and 主母. If so, then the degrading aspect of the Chü messenger's parlance follows from the very reason the marquess of Chü felt moved to extend sympathy: The marquess of Lu had been wandering as a supplicant from court to court for several years, having been ousted by the powerful Chi family from the state he nominally ruled. The messenger addressed him as one would the head of a great family who is not sovereign.

He would say things that, though they made no sense in real world terms, still by their phrasing amused the ruler and made him happy. 藝: 後單于遣使者朝賀元帝陳設倡樂乃令後宮粧出昭君怨恚日久乃便循飾善粧盛服 Later the Shan-yü sent an emissary to pay a court visit to the emperor, who put on a display of his entertainers and musicians. Then he had the ladies of his harem come out in makeup. Chao-chün resented that it had taken so long a time. So only then did she proceed to beautify herself. She put on her makeup with the greatest skill and dressed to the nines.

 史: 商君者衛之諸庶孽公子也名鞅姓公孫氏其祖本姬姓也鞅少好刑名之學事魏相公叔座為中庶子公叔座知其賢未及進 Lord Shang was one of the offspring of the ruler of Wei by a concubine. His given name was Yang and his surname was Kungsun. His ancestors were originally of the Chi surname. He served Kungshu Ts'o, premier of Wei, as middle tutor to his sons. Kungshu Ts'o saw he was brilliant, but not yet to the point of being recommended to the court.
 史: 會座病魏惠王親往問病曰公叔病有如不可諱將奈社稷何公叔曰座之中庶子公孫鞅年雖少有奇才願王舉國而聽之王嘿然 Then Ts'o got sick, and the Benevolent King of Wei went in person to inquire of his illness. He said, "Your illness seems to have passed the point of not being mentioned. What shall we do about the nation?" Kungshu said, "My sons' middle tutor, Kungsun Yang, though he may be young, has extraordinary talent. I would like YM to entrust the entire nation to his counsel." The king remained silent.
 史: 王且去座屏人言曰王即不聽用鞅必殺之無令出境王許諾而去 When the king was about to go, Ts'o had everyone sent away and said to the king, "Given that YM will not accept my advice to employ Yang, you must have him killed. Do not let him leave the country." The king assented and left.
 史: 公叔座召鞅謝曰今者王問可以為相者我言若王色不許我方先君後臣因謂王即[弗→]不用鞅當殺之王許我汝可疾去矣且見禽 Kungshu Ts'o summoned Yang and apologized, "A while ago the king asked me who could be made premier, and I said you could. His expression told that he would not allow that. At that time I was putting the ruler first and his ministers afterward, so I said to the king that if he would not employ you he should kill you. He agreed with me. You'd better leave in a hurry. You're about to be taken."

 史: 鞅曰彼王不能用君之言任臣又安能用君之言殺臣乎卒不去惠王既去而謂左右曰公叔病甚悲乎欲令寡人以國聽公孫鞅也豈不悖哉 Yang said, "If that king can't employ me on your word, how can he kill me on your word?" He wound up not leaving. After the king had left he said to his servants, "How gravely ill Kung-shu is! He wanted me to entrust all the cares of state to Kung-sun Yang. He must be demented!"
 史: 公叔既死公孫鞅聞秦孝公下令國中求賢者將修繆公之業東復侵地迺遂西入秦因孝公寵臣景監以求見孝公 When Kung-shu died, Kung-sun Yang heard that the Filial Earl of Ch'in had issued a state-wide order seeking competent men for the purpose of restoring the project of the Splendid Earl by annexing more land to the east, so he went west into Ch'in and enlisted the aid of the Filial Earl's favored minister Ying Chien to gain audience with the earl.
 史: 孝公既見衛鞅語事良久孝公時時睡弗聽罷而孝公怒景監曰子之客妄人耳安足用邪景監以讓衛鞅衛鞅曰吾說公以帝道其志不開悟[矣→]已後五日復求見鞅 When the Filial Earl gave audience to Wei Yang he talked business for a long time; the earl paid little attention and even dozed from time to time. When they had finished, the Filial Earl berated Ying Chien, "Your visitor is nothing but a blatherskite. How could he be useful?" Ying Chien took Yang to task for that. Wei Yang said, "I propounded the imperial way to the earl, only his interest wasn't awakened." Five days later he requested another audience for Yang.
 史: 鞅復見孝公益愈然而未中旨罷而孝公復讓景監景監亦讓鞅鞅曰吾說公以王道而未入也請復見鞅 Yang had another audience with the Filial Earl. This one went somewhat better but still did not meet the point. When they had finished, the Filial Earl scolded Ying Chien, who in turn scolded Yang. Wei Yang said, "I propounded the royal way to the earl, only it didn't penetrate. Please present me again."
 史: 鞅復見孝公孝公善之而未用也罷而去孝公謂景監曰汝客善可與語矣鞅曰吾說公以霸道其意欲用之矣[誠→]請復見我我知之矣 Yang had another audience with the Filial Earl. The earl thought him good, but not yet to the point of employing him. When he had finished and gone the Filial Earl said to Ying Chien, "Your visitor turns out to be good, worth talking with." Yang said, "I presented the way of the overlord to the earl, and his ambition is now inclined to use it. Please present me again; I've got his measure now."
 史: 衛鞅復見孝公公與語不自知割之前於席也語數日不厭景監曰子何以中吾君吾君之驩甚也 Yang had another audience with the Filial Earl. The earl, speaking with him, did not notice that his knees had got forward of the mat. He conversed for several days and couldn't get enough of it. Ying Chien said, "How did you accord with my ruler so exactly? His delight in you is exceeding."
 史: 鞅曰吾說君以帝王之道比三代而君曰久遠吾不能待且賢君者各及其身顯名天下安能邑邑待數十年以成帝王乎故吾以彊

國之術說君君大說之耳然亦難以比德於殷周矣 Yang said, "I expounded the way of the emperors and kings of the three eras to the ruler, but he said, 'That's too long-range. I can't wait. Also, typically competent rulers make their names famous throughout the world within their own lifetimes. How could I bear to wait patiently through decades or centuries to establish an imperial kingship?' Thus I told the ruler of techniques for strengthening the state, and he was pleased with them. That's all. But still those are not easy ways to raise one's influence to a level with that of Yin and Chou."
 史: 孝公既用衛鞅欲變法恐天下議已衛鞅曰疑行無名疑事無功且夫有高人者行者固見非於世有獨知之慮者必見於民愚者闇成事智者睹未形民不可與慮始而可與樂成論至德者不和於俗成大功者不謀於眾是以聖人苟可以彊國不法其故苟可以利民不循其禮 After the Filial Earl employed Wei Yang, Yang wanted to change the laws but feared the whole world would criticise him. Wei Yang said, "No reputation is made by timid acts, nor success by timid undertakings. I might add that if you do high deeds you are sure to be condemned by all and if you have visionary plans you are certain to be mocked by the populace. Stupid ones are blind to accomplished fact while intelligent ones discern what has not yet taken form. The folk are not to be consulted in initial planning; the delight at its success may be shared with them. Assessing supreme influence, one does not match it with what is ordinary; bringing about a great accomplishment, one does not plan it with a crowd. Thus the sage, should he happen to find a way to strengthen the state, does not take an applicable precedent as precept, nor does he follow the applicable etiquette should he happen across a way to profit the folk."
 史: 孝公曰善甘龍曰不然聖人不易民而教知者不變法而治因民而教不勞而成功緣法而治者吏習而民安之 The Filial Earl approved. Kan Lung said, "Not so. The wise ruler instructs without changing people, governs without altering rules. Giving the sort of instructions people expect brings success with little effort. Governing by standard rules means the officials will follow routine and the people will feel unthreatened by them."
 史: 衛鞅曰龍之所言世俗之言也常人安於故俗學者溺於所聞以此兩者居官守法可也非所與論於法之外也三代不同禮而王五伯不同法而霸智者作法愚者制焉賢者更禮不肖者拘焉 Wei Yang said, "What Lung has said is the talk of ordinary people. Ordinary people feel safe with precedent and custom; scholars are drenched in what they have learned. As a way of holding office and keeping to the laws, these two are acceptable, but not for joining discussion of what is beyond the laws. The three dynasties reigned with different rites; the five overlords led the world with different laws. Intelligent people make laws; stupid ones are ruled by them. Competent people change rituals; incompetent ones are constrained by them."
 史: 杜摯曰利不百不變法功不十不易器法古無過循禮無邪 Tu Chih said, "We do not change the laws for less than a hundred-fold benefit; we do not alter implements for less than a ten-fold result. If you

史：衛鞅曰治世不一道便國不法古故湯武不循古而王夏殷不易禮而亡反古者不可非而循禮者不足多 Wèi Yang said, “There is no one way to put the world in order. Don’t take the old as model in doing what is best for the state. Thus T’ang and Wu became kings even though they did not follow the ancients, while Hsia and Yin perished even though they did not change the rites. Going against antiquity is no grounds to be deemed failure, nor is following ritual sufficient to be called success.”

Those not reporting violations were to be cut in half at the waist. Reporting violations brought the same reward as cutting off enemy heads, while concealing violations brought the same punishment as surrendering to the enemy. Those with two men or more were to split and separate or have their poll taxes doubled. High rank was to be awarded based on degree of military merit; engaging in private fights was to be punished in greater or less amount according to how serious it was. The corvee of those who produced the most grain and silk cloth by applying themselves to the primary tasks of agriculture and weaving was remitted. Those who made profit from trade their business or who were poor out of laziness were all taken into slavery. Only those principal families recognized for military merit were allowed to keep records of affiliates. He made clear the grades and steps of rank and degree; he assigned differential terminology to farmland and dwellings; he had male and female servants wear distinct clothing according to household. Accomplishment brought fame and glory; lacking it even the rich had no venue in which to shine.

He then had a three-d’iang log stood at the south gate of the market in the capital and proclaimed that if someone were able to move and place it at the north gate, he would give him ten ducats. People didn’t know what to make of that. No one dared to move it. He repeated the offer with a reward of fifty ducats. One man moved it and he immediately gave him fifty ducats to make it clear that he would keep his word.

史：卒下令行於民期年秦民之國都[言初

The heir-apparent being the successor to the ruler, physical punishment may not be applied to him.” They mutilated his preceptor Kung-tzu Ch’ien and tattooed his tutor Kung-sun Chia. The next day everyone in Ch’in rushed to obey the laws.

史：行之十年秦民大說道不拾遺山無盜賊家給人足民勇於公戰怯於私鬥鄉邑大治秦民初言令不便者有來言令便者衛鞅曰此皆亂化之民也盡遷之於邊城其後民莫敢議令 The laws were in effect ten years and the people of Ch’in were very happy. Things dropped on roads were not picked up; there were no robbers or thieves in the hills; each family was well supplied and each individual had enough. The people were brave in general war but timid in private quarrels. Towns and cities were very well-ordered. Of the Ch’in people who had formerly called the laws harmful, some now came forward to call them helpful. Wèi Yang said they were all disturbers of society and transferred them all to forts on the frontier. After that no one dared discuss the laws pro or con. He then made Yang a senior colonel, who led an armed force to besiege Secure City in Wei and got its surrender.

He then ordered that ordinary people keeping offspring at home, father and son, elder and younger brothers dwelling in one household, was to be prohibited. He aggregated small cities and towns and merged them into counties, appointing administrators and sub-administrators, to a total of thirty-one counties. He managed the farm fields, opening N-S and E-W paths to be boundaries and collecting taxes evenly. He regularized measures of volume, weighing balances and measures of length.

史：行之四年公子虔復犯約劓之居五年秦人富彊天子致胙於孝公諸侯畢賀其明年齊敗魏兵於馬陵虜其太子申殺將軍龐涓衛鞅既破魏還秦封之於商十五邑號為商君 When that had been done four years, Kung-tzu Ch’ien once again violated a prohibition. They cut off his nose. After five years the men of Ch’in were rich and strong. The emperor transferred [certain royal] sacrifices to the Filial Earl. The barons all congratulated him. The year after that Ch’i defeated Wei in battle at Ma-ling, capturing the heir-apparent Shên and killing general

P’ang Ch’üan. When Wèi Yang had smashed Wei and returned, Ch’in enfeoffed him in Shang with fifteen cities. His title was made Lord Shang.

史：商君相秦十年宗室貴戚多怨望者趙良見商君 Lord Shang acted as premier in Ch’in for ten years. Many of the principal families and the nobles looked on him with resentment. Chao Liang had a meeting with Lord Shang.

史：商君曰鞅之得見也從孟蘭舉今鞅請得交可乎趙良曰僕弗敢願也孔丘有言曰推賢而戴者進聚不肖而王者退僕不肖故不敢受命僕聞之曰非其位而居之曰貪位非其名而有之曰貪名僕聽君之[義一]議則恐僕貪位貪名也故不敢聞命 Lord Shang said, “When I have met you it has been by way of Mêng Lan-kao. Now I would like to form a direct personal relation to you. Would that be acceptable?” Chao Liang said, “I would not dare wish for it. K’ung Ch’iu had a saying, ‘One who brings competent ones and presents them may advance [in court]; one who assembles incompetent ones and visits the king is repulsed.’ Incompetent myself, I dare not put myself at your disposal. I have heard it said that having a status not one’s own is called grasping for status; having a reputation not one’s own is called grasping for reputation. If I were to attend your discussions I fear I would be grasping for status and reputation. Thus I dare not do as you say.”

史：商君曰子不說吾治秦與趙良曰反聽之謂聽內視之謂明自勝之謂彊虞舜有言曰自卑也尚矣君不若道虞舜之道無為問僕矣 Lord Shang said, “Is it because you don’t like how I govern Ch’in?” Chao Liang said, “Listening in reverse is what I call good hearing; looking inward is what I call clear vision; conquering the self is what I call being strong. Shun of Yü had a saying, ‘Self-deprecation is highest.’ Yü had best make the Way of Shun of Yü your way; then there would be no need to ask anything more of me.”

史：商君曰始秦戎翟之教父子無別同室而居今我更制其教而為其男女之別大築冀闕當魯衛矣子觀我治秦也孰與五穀大夫賢 Lord Shang said, “In the original barbarous customs of Ch’in, there was no separation of father and son, they dwelling in the same house. Now I have restructured their customs and instituted their male-female distinctions, built the Chi-ch’üeh large, and they have become as well-ordered as in Lu or Wèi. You have observed my governing of Ch’in. Who is more competent, me or the Five-ram Official?”

史：趙良曰千羊之皮不如一狐之掖千人之諾諾不如一士之諤諤武王諤諤以昌殷紂墨墨以亡君若不非武王乎則僕請終日正言而無誅可乎 Chao Liang said, “The skins of a thousand sheep are not worth the armpit fur of one fox. The sycophancies of a thousand men are not worth the objections of one officer. It was objections by which The Martial King achieved glory; it was silence by which Ch’ou of Yin brought about his own ruin. If, as I take it sir, you do not condemn the Martial King, then would you allow me to speak truth for a whole day without punishment?”

史：商君曰語有之矣貌言華也至言實也苦言藥也甘言疾也夫子果肯終日正言鞅之藥也鞅將事子子又何辭焉 Lord Shang said, “A

If it turned out that you were willing to speak truth to me for a whole day, that would be medicine for me. I will serve you as your student. What excuse does that leave you?"

史：趙良曰夫五穀大夫蒯之鄙人也聞秦繆公之賢而願望見行而無資自粥於秦客被褐食牛期年繆公知之舉之牛口之下而加之百姓之上秦國莫敢望焉 Chao Liang said, "The Five-ram Official was a nobody in Ching. He heard what a good ruler the Splendid Earl of Ch'in was and wanted to go and have audience with him, but, departing with no money, he sold himself to a traveler of Ch'in; he wore kudzu-cloth and fed oxen. He taught the whole country, and the Pa sent tribute to him; he made all the barons obliged to him and the eight Jung came to submit. Yu Yü heard of him. He knocked on the gate and requested audience. When the five-ram official was premier of Ch'in, he didn't sit to ride when tired, nor did he open a parasol when it was hot. He traveled throughout the country, never accompanied by chariots nor carrying weapons. His reputation for accomplishment was preserved in the treasuries and his good deeds came down to later generations.

史：五穀大夫死秦國男女流涕童子不歌謠春者不相杵此五穀大夫之德也 "When the five-ram official died, men and women in Ch'in shed tears, children didn't sing or chant, and people didn't pound with a pestle as if it were a time-beater. This is how he came to be regarded by the folk.

As premier of Ch'in you have not made the folk your concern but built the Chi-ch'üeh large. That is not how to build success. Mutilating and tattooing the tutor and preceptor of the heir-apparent and cruelly wounding people with unusual punishments—that is building resentment and storing up disaster.

Then why not return the fifteen cities, merge your gardens with village land, urge the king of Ch'in to honor those scholars who have fled into eremitage, support the elderly and orphaned, respect the father-son relationship, rank accomplishment by merit and pay homage to those who have earned it? You could be a bit safer that way. If you prefer to clutch the wealth of Shang-wu and pervert the teaching of the state of Ch'in, piling up the resentment of the people, one morning the king of Ch'in will dismiss all visitors and not hold court. The manner in which you were accepted by Ch'in is surely no secret! Your doom is so imminent you could wait for it on tiptoe." Lord Shang did not follow that advice. Five months later the Filial Earl of Ch'in died and the heir-apparent succeeded.

He got near the barrier and wanted to stay at an inn. The innkeeper [客人 strikes me as an unlikely term for such a functionary. The emendation 官人-館人 suggests itself, but not strongly enough to be adopted.] did not recognize him as the real Lord Shang. He said, "According to the laws of Lord Shang, whoever gives lodging without verifying the lodger is guilty of a crime." Lord Shang sighed aloud and said, "Woe, that law should be applied so utterly uniformly!"

史：去之魏魏人怨其欺公子印而破魏師弗受商君欲之他國魏人曰商君秦之賊也秦彊而賊入魏弗歸不可遂內秦 He left and went to Wei. The Wei resented his having smashed the Wei force by deceiving Kung-tzü Yang. They would not receive him. When it got to where he wanted to meet the Filial Earl by wrapping the kingly way in frivolous sayings, he contravened his intelligence. Also, his introduction came by way of a court favorite. When he came to be employed, he punished Kung-tzü Ch'ien, tricked the Wei general Yang, and took no instruction from what Chao Liang said. This is surely sufficient to reveal his deficiency of kindness. I have read Lord Shang's book on opening frontiers, plowing and fighting. It is of a piece with the man's own actions. It was for good reason, was it not, that he wound up getting an evil reputation in Ch'in?"

Wei being stronger will certainly cut a deep chunk of Chao territory. Chao will be unable to accept that and will resist more sturdily. This will weaken both equally." Ching She said, "Not so! Chao Hsi-Hsü doesn't know what he is talking about. Now, in Wei's attack on Chao they fear an attack in their rear by Ch'u. In fact, if we don't aid Chao, Chao will be in a desperate position and Wei will have no threat from Ch'u, in effect both Wei and Ch'u ganging up on Chao. It will do them tremendous damage—how could it weaken both equally? Chao will see that they are in desperate straits and will realize that Ch'u will not aid them, and they will have to come to some accommodation with Wei, allowing them to turn their attention to Ch'u. Better to send a small force of assistance to Chao. Chao, relying on Ch'u's power, will then fight a major battle with Wei. Wei, angered by Chao's powerful response and seeing that Ch'u's assistance is not worth bothering about, will not let Chao off lightly. With Chao and Wei weakening each other and Ch'i and Ch'in responding to Ch'u's initiative, Wei can be smashed. The king of Ch'u accordingly had Ching She raise a force to aid Chao. 史：叔孫通者薛人也秦時以文學徵待詔博士 Shu-sun Tung was from Hsüeh. In the Ch'in era he was summoned on account of his scholarship and appointed as "widely learned" pending assignment.

諸儒生問曰楚成卒攻斬入陳於公如何博士諸生三十餘人前曰人臣[無→]為將將即反罪死無赦願陛下急發兵擊之二世怒作色 After a few years, Chên Shêng rose in revolt. A messenger from Shantung made it known. The Second Emperor summoned the scholars and professors and asked, "The border troops of Ch'ü have attacked Ch'i and entered Ch'ên. What is your opinion?" More than thirty of the professors and scholars came forth to say, when a minister is promoted general, and acting as general rebels, he is sentenced to death with no chance of reprieve. We request YIM to send out troops right away to attack him." The Second Emperor was angered, and let it show in his expression.

史:叔孫通前曰諸生言皆非也夫天下合為一家毀郡縣城鑠其兵示天下不復用且明主在其上法令其於下使人人奉職四方輻輳安敢有反者此特群盜鼠竊狗盜耳何足置之齒牙問郡守尉[今一]令捕論何足憂 Shu-sun Tung came forward and said, "All these learned men have said is wrong. The world is all one household. Do away with commanderies and counties, melt down the weapons and show the world that they will not be used. With a clear-sighted ruler at the top, laws and decrees are kept intact below, making each of the officials accept his individual responsibilities and all around us converge like the spokes of a wheel. How would any dare to rebel? These mere robber gangs, sneak thieves and burglars are too insignificant to pick your teeth with. The senior officers of the commandery will have them arrested and sorted out. That is too insignificant to be troubled about."

史:二世喜曰善盡問諸生諸生或言反或言盜 The Second Emperor was pleased and expressed approval. He asked all the scholars, some of whom said they were rebels and some bandits.

漢:二世喜盡問諸生諸生或言反或言盜於是二世令御史按諸生言反者下吏非所宜言諸生言盜者皆罷之乃賜通帛二十疋衣一襲拜為博士通已出反舍諸生曰生何言之諛也通曰公不知我幾不免虎口乃亡去之薛薛已降楚矣 He had the censor turn over to the sergeant at arms those who had called them rebels, that being not what they should have said, and excused those who had called them bandits. Then he awarded Tung twenty bolts of silk and a suit of clothing, and promoted him to professor. When Tung had finished he left and returned to the dormitory. The scholars said, "How could you speak such flattery?" Tung said, "You gentlemen just don't get it. I barely avoided the tiger's mouth." Then he fled to Hsüeh, which had already surrendered to Ch'ü.

史:及項梁之薛叔孫通從之敗於定陶從懷王懷王為義帝徒長沙叔孫通留事項王漢二年漢王從五諸侯入彭城叔孫通降漢王漢王敗而西因竟從漢 When Hsiang Liang went to Hsüeh Shu-sun Tung followed him. With defeat at Ting T'ao he followed the Remembered King. When the Remembered King became the Exemplary Emperor he moved to Ch'angsha. Shu-sun Tung stayed behind in service to the King of Hsiang. In the second year of Han the king of Han vertically united the other five rulers and entered P'êng-ch'êng; Shu-sun Tung surrendered to the king of Han. When the king of Han was defeated and went westward, he went along with Han.

史:叔孫通儒服漢王憎之迺變其服短衣楚製漢王喜 Shu-sun Tung habitually wore Confucian garb, and the Han king disliked that. So he switched to wearing a short upper garment, cut after the fashion of Ch'ü, and the Han king was pleased. 史:叔孫通之降漢從儒生弟子百餘人然通無所言進 When Shu-sun Tung surrendered to Han he had more than a hundred student Confucian scholars attending him, but Tung said nothing to recommend any of them.

史:弟子皆竊罵曰事先生數歲幸得從降漢今不能進臣等專言大猾何也 The students secretly complained, "We followed our teacher for years, and he had the good fortune to surrender to Han and enter its service. Now he can't advance our careers. He says nothing but grandiose falsehoods. Why is that?"

史:叔孫通聞之迺謂曰漢王方蒙矢石爭天下諸生寧能鬥乎故先言斬將奪旗之士諸生且待我我不忘矣 When Shu-sun Tung heard that, he said, "When the king of Han was fighting for the world while arrows and stones came at him, would you gentlemen have then preferred that you be able to fight? Thus I first speak of the men who beheaded generals and seized banners. Just wait for me, gentlemen. I won't forget."

史:漢王拜叔孫通為博士號稷嗣君 The king of Han promoted Shu-sun Tung to full professor and titled him Lord Inherit-Chi.

史:叔孫通知上益厭之也說上曰夫儒者難與進取可與守成臣願徵魯諸生與臣弟子共起朝儀高帝曰得無難乎 Shu-sun Tung saw that the emperor was getting more and more fed up with it. He made this proposal to the throne: "Confucians are not good for advancing and capturing, but are all right for holding and consolidating. I want to invite various scholars from Lu to initiate court procedures together with my students." The High Emperor said, "Can you make it without vexations?"

史:叔孫通曰五帝異樂三王不同禮禮者因時世人情為之節文者也故夏殷周之禮所因損益可知者謂不相復也臣願採古禮與秦儀雜就之上曰可試為之令易知度吾所能行為之 Shu-sun Tung said, "The five emperors had different music and the three kings did not have the same rites. Rites are things that make a prescriptive pattern for human feelings according to the spirit of the age. Thus, "What the rituals of Hsia, Yin and Chou successively subtracted and added can be known" means that they did not follow each other's pattern." I want to select bits from the old rites and the Ch'in procedures and assemble them intermingled." The emperor said, "I permit you to try that. Make them easy to manage. Make them proportionate to what I can do." 史:於是叔孫通使徵魯諸生三十餘人魯有兩生不肯行曰公所事者且十主皆面諛以得親貴今天下初定死者未葬傷者未起又欲起禮樂禮樂所由起積德百年而後可興也吾不忍為公所為公所為不合吾古不行公往矣無汗我叔孫通笑曰若真鄙儒也不知時變 Then Shu-sun Tung went as envoy to invite over thirty scholars from Lu. There were two scholars in Lu who would not go. They said, "You have served nearly ten rulers, sir, and in every case you used open flattery to get close to them and be honored by them. Now the world has barely been stabilized. The dead are not yet buried, the wounded not yet risen, yet you want to move on to initiating ritual and music. As to where ritual and music arise from, they can only be brought into action after a regime has built its moral influence for a century. I could not bear to do what you are doing. What you are doing does not fit with antiquity. I will not go. Go away, sir. Do not insult me." Shu-sun Tung laughed and said, "You are truly an ignorant scholar. You do not see that the times have changed." 史:遂與所徵三十人西及上左右為學者與其弟子百餘人為綿蕞野外習之月餘叔孫通曰上可試觀上既觀使行禮曰吾能為此迺令群臣習肄會十月 He then took the thirty men he had invited west, where with over 100 of his followers working together with those of the emperor's servants who had taken the role of learners, they laid out cords and bales in outlying country. When they had rehearsed it for over a month, Shu-sun Tung said, "This is ready for inspection by the emperor." When the emperor had looked it over and had them go through the ceremonies, he said, "I can do this." Then he ordered all court officers to rehearse over and over, setting the time to be in the tenth month.

史:[儀一]義先平明謁者治禮引以次入殿門廷中陳車騎步卒衛宮設兵張旗志傳言趨殿下郎中俠陸陸數百人 First the guidons were sorted out clearly; then the heralds, keeping the ceremony in order, led them in rank order to enter the compound gate. In the court, charioteers and cavalry and foot soldiers were in formation, guarding the palace. They readied their weapons and unfurled their flags and banners. They passed the word: "Hurry." At the base of the entrance hall, the household troops lined the steps. On each step there were over a hundred.

史:於是皇帝輦出房百官執[職一]傳警引諸侯王以下至吏六百石以次奉賀 At this, the emperor's sedan chair came out from his chamber and the corp of officials raised their banners to pass along the alert. From the imperial princes on down to officials of six hundred shih, all offered their felicitations in rank order.

史：自諸侯王以下莫不振恐肅敬至禮畢復置酒諸侍坐殿上皆伏抑首以尊卑次起上壽觴九行謁者言罷酒御史執法舉不如儀者輒引去 From imperial princes on down, there was none who was not frightened and awed. When the arrival ceremony had been completed, in similar fashion the standard issue of wine was made. All those in attendance sat on the platform; they all arose in order of precedence, bowed, lowered their heads and offered “long life”. [The verb 侍 is subj; cf 羣小 as obj in 楚辭] When the cups had gone nine times the heralds said, “The toasts are finished.” The censor, executing the laws, pointed out those who did not act according to the proper ceremony and had them summarily ejected.

史：竟朝置酒無敢譁失禮者於是高帝曰吾迺今日知爲皇帝之貴也迺拜叔孫通爲太常賜金五百斤 At the end of the court session, drinks were served and no one dared breach decorum by whooping and hollering. Thereupon the High Emperor said, “It was not until this day that I recognized how high a thing it is to be emperor.” Then he promoted Shu-sun Tung to be Senior Officiant and granted him five hundred chin of gold. [The terms 大行 and 太常 in this account appear to be anachronisms.]

史：叔孫通因進曰諸弟子儒生隨臣久矣與臣共爲儀願陛下官之高帝悉以爲郎叔孫通出皆以五百斤金賜諸生諸生迺皆喜曰叔孫生誠聖人也知當世之要務 Shu-sun Tung proceeded to approach the throne. He said, “The Confucian scholars who are my students have followed me for a long time. They worked with me to construct the ceremony. I request YIM to make them officers.” The High Emperor appointed them all to the imperial household. When Shu-sun Tung came out, he dispensed all that five hundred catties of gold among his students. The students were all happy. They said, “Academician Shu-sun is genuinely a sage. He saw what the current era required to be done.”

史：漢十二年高祖欲以趙王如意易太子叔孫通諫上曰昔者晉獻公以驪姬之故廢太子立奚齊晉國亂者數十年爲天下笑秦以不蚤定扶蘇令趙高得以詐立胡亥自使滅祀此陛下所親見 In the 12th year of Han, the High Emperor wanted to replace the heir-apparent with Prince Ju-yi of Chao. Shu-sun Tung remonstrated, “Anciently the Exemplary Marquess of Chin set aside his heir-apparent and installed Hsi-chi for the sake of Lady Li. The disorder in Chin lasted for decades and they were ridiculed by the whole world. By not firmly establishing Fu-su early on, the Chin allowed Chao Kao to install Hu-hé by trickery, themselves bringing about the termination of their sovereignty, a thing YIM saw for yourself.

臣願先伏[誅→]鉢以頸血汗地高帝曰公罷矣吾直戲耳 “The heir-apparent is kind and filial; everyone in the world has heard of that. YIM and empress Lü soothed his distress, fed his hunger; how can you ignore that? I was only joking.”

史：叔孫通曰太子天下本一搖天下振動奈何以天下爲戲高帝曰吾聽公言及上置酒見留侯所招客從太子入見上迺遂無易太子志矣 Shu-sun Tung said, “The heir-apparent is the root of the world. Let the root once be shaken and the world will tremble. How could you turn the world into a joke?” The High Emperor said, “I will do as you say, sir.” Later, when he gave a drinking party, he saw that the visitors invited by the Marquess of Liu followed the heir-apparent when they entered for audience. He then dropped his intent to replace the heir-apparent.

史：高帝崩孝惠即位迺謂叔孫生曰先帝園陵寢廟群臣莫習徒爲太常定宗廟儀法及稍定漢諸儀法皆叔孫生爲太常所論箸也 When the High Emperor died and the Benevolent succeeded, he said to Shu-sun Tung, “At the grave mound and memorial chapel of our late emperor, all the officials were inexperienced.” He was transferred to be senior officiant to fix the ceremonial procedures of the ancestral temple. When they came to regularize and fix the ceremonial procedures of the Han, it all came from the analysis Shu-sun Tung had written down as senior officiant.

史：孝惠帝曾春出游離宮叔孫生曰古者有春嘗果方今櫻桃孰可獻願陛下出因取櫻桃獻宗廟上迺許之諸果獻由此興 The Benevolent Emperor once went on an excursion to a detached palace in spring. Shu-sun Tung said, “In ancient times there was a tasting of fruit in spring. Just now the cherries are ripe and can be presented. I would like YIM to go out, pick cherries and present them at the ancestral temple.” The emperor gave his assent. All offerings of fruit arose from this.

They also govern ditches and drains. The big star in its southwest, the one called "eye of the sky pig", is also called "supreme general." It is desirable for it to be bright. If the emperor is self-indulgent and indolent, or government is unfair, Stride will have horns. If the horns move, there will be resort to arms in no more than a year, or something will happen to ditches and drains. It is also said that if stars in the middle of Stride are bright, rivers will overflow in a big way.

隋: 婁三星爲天獄主苑牧犧牲供給郊祀亦爲興兵聚眾 The three stars of Mound act as courtroom to the sky. It governs gardens, herding and sacrificial animals, and providing for the suburb sacrifices. It also controls mobilizing arms and people.

隋: 胃三星天之廚藏主倉廩五穀府也 The three stars of wei: the kitchen-store of sky. It governs receiving and disbursing from the warehouse of the five grains.

隋: 明則和平倉實動則有輸運事就聚則穀貴人流 If they are bright, there will be peace and granaries will be full. If they move, grain will have to be shipped to other regions. If they move into a cluster, then grain will be expensive and people will scatter.

隋: 昴七星天之耳目也主西方主獄事又爲旄頭胡星也又主喪 The seven stars of mao are the ears and eyes of the sky. They govern the west. They govern court proceedings. They also function as the head of a banner. They are the stars of the hu barbarians. They also govern funerals.

隋: 昴畢間爲天街天子出旄頭卒畢以前驅此其義也黃道之所經也 The space between mao and pi functions as the main street of the sky. When the emperor goes out, a hand-net at the head of his banner means to press forward at speed. This is his guidon. It is where the ecliptic passes through.

隋: 附耳一星在畢下主聽得失伺愆邪察不祥星盛則中國微有盜賊邊候驚外國反門兵連年若移動候讒行兵大起邊尤甚 The lone star Jughandle is below Handnet. It governs correct and incorrect judging. It detects excess and perversity and differentiates ill omens. If the star grows, China will be weakened, there will be bandits, border watchers will be frightened, surrounding states will revolt and the clash of arms will go on for years. If it shifts, flattery and slader will succeed, great war will begin and the border situation will worsen.

隋: 觜觿三星爲三軍之候行軍之藏府主葆旅收斂萬物明則軍儲盈將得勞動而明盜賊群行葆旅起 The three stars of Beak act as lookouts for the national army and storage for an army on the move. They govern fortifying and sortieing and requisitioning everything. If they are bright then the army's stores will be complete and the general will out-manuever the enemy. If they move and are bright, bandits will go about in gangs and there will be uprisings in forts and expeditions.

隋: 參十星一曰參伐一曰大辰一曰天市一曰鈇鉞主斬刈又爲天獄主殺伐又主權衡所以平理也又主邊城爲九譯故不欲其動也中央三小星曰伐天之都尉也主胡鮮卑戎狄之國故不欲明 The ten stars of shên: one is called shên-fa, one ta-chên, one Sky Market, one Axes. They govern beheading and slicing. They are also the law court of sky, governing killing. They also govern weighing-balances; they are means of making arrangements even. They also govern border forts and the various interpreters. Thus it is undesirable for them to move. The three small stars in the center are called fa. They are sky's colonels. They govern hu, hsien-pei, jung and ti. Thus for them to be bright is undesirable.

隋: 南方東井八星天之南門黃道所經天之亭候主水衡事法令所取平也王者用法平則井星明而端列 In the south, eight stars of tung-ching: south gate of sky, where ecliptic goes through, tower watchman of sky. They govern things to do with the water-balance, and are the source of evenness in the laws. If the kingly ruler applies the laws evenly then the stars of ching will be bright and laid out straight.

隋: 鉞一星附井之前主伺淫奢而斬之故不欲其明明與井齊則用鉞大臣有斬者以欲殺也月宿井有風雨 The Ax is one star, attached to the front of the Well. It governs detecting the licentious and extravagant, and beheading them. Thus its being bright is not desired. If it is as bright as ching then one will use the beheading-ax. High officials will lose their 家：男子十六精通女子十四而化是則可以生[民→]子矣而禮男子三十而有室女子二十而有夫也豈不晚哉 The male passes semen at sixteen and the female has puberty at fourteen. After that they can reproduce. But according to custom, the male is thirty before acquiring a family and the female twenty before having a husband. Isn't that very late?

選：稽之上古則如彼考之漢室又如此 If we inquire into antiquity about it, it is like that; if we investigate it in the house of Han it is moreover like this.

漢：千室之邑必有千鍾之臧藏緡百萬 A city of a thousand households must have a treasury of a thousand liung holding a million strings of cash.

史：臣聞爭名者於朝爭利者於市今三川周室天下之朝市也而王不爭焉願爭於戎翟去王業遠矣 I have heard that those who compete for reputation do it in the court; those who compete for profit do it in the market. In this case the three rivers and the Chou household are court and market of the whole world, yet YM does not compete there. You turn away and compete among barbarians. That is far indeed from the path to kingship.

šjət 4.5^{ve} escape; let slip, lose control of 22 失

國：平公射鵪不死使豎襄搏之失 The Level Marquess shot a quail which did not die, so he sent the servant-boy Hsiang to catch it but it got away.

淮：魯君聞陽虎失大怒 When the Lu ruler heard that Yang Hu had got away he was very angry.

漢：賢俊失在巖穴 the great and the talented having gone away to mountain caverns

史：張儀至秦詳失綏墮車不朝三月 When he returned to Ch'in, Chang Yi pretended to have fallen from his carriage when the pull-strap slipped from his grasp. He stayed away from court for three months.

呂：今世俗之惑主多官而反以害生則失所為立之矣 When the misguided vulgar rulers of our time multiply bureaus and thereby contrarily harm life, they must have forgotten the reason for establishing them.

管：失轡則馬焉制 If you lose grasp of the reins, how will the horse be controlled?

戰：陵戰失利 When Ling fought the battle he let the advantage slip away from him.

魏：晉帝難於失信不許 The Chin emperor, objecting to the breach of faith, refused permission.

國：陽失而在陰川源必塞源塞國必亡 If Yang gets out of control and is co-located with Yin, rivers and springs will surely be blocked, and if that happens the state must perish.

新：秦國失理天下大敗眾揜寡知欺愚勇劫懼壯凌衰 When the state of Ch'in lapsed into madness, the whole world fell into ruin: the many oppressed the few, the intelligent cheated the stupid, the brave intimidated the fearful, and the strong bullied the weak.

三：使人讀史漢諸紀傳聽之備知其大義往往論說不失其指 He had someone read the Shih Chi and Han Shu and such histories to him, and he got the general significance of everything he heard. He would often discuss them, and never misunderstood.

國：吾聞事君者從其義不阿其惑惑則誤國民誤失德 I have heard that one who serves a ruler adheres to what he does right and does not deviate in favor of his errors. If he errs he misleads the folk; if the folk are misled, their good will goes awry.

左：其君之舉也內姓選於親外姓選於舊舉不失德賞不失勞老有加惠旅有施舍 When their ruler chooses men for office, among those of his surname he chooses close relatives and among those of different surnames he chooses those with longstanding connection. He does not choose with no regard for deservingness, nor does he reward with no regard for effort. The elderly get extra kindness and travelers are welcome to stay indefinitely.

淮：故百家之言指奏相反其合道一體也譬若絲竹金石之會樂同也其曲家異而不失於體 Thus the words of the various schools contradict each other diverging like splayed fingers, but all are of one likeness in how they accord with the Way. Compare how silk, bamboo, metal and stone all are suitable for making music. Their tunes differ from school to school, but without invalidating this likeness.

b. do a job badly

They killed the younger full brother of the successor-son and called him "ruler." By his being called "ruler" we know that had the status of younger brother. Tuan was a younger brother but he is not called "younger brother" because he was the ruler's son. And not calling him "rulerson" is to blame him. Tuan abandoned the way of the son and younger brother. It is to degrade Tuan but also to call the Earl of Ch'eng even worse. What do they find even worse about the Earl of Ch'eng? That he cold-bloodedly developed his plans that led to the killing. "At Yen" is distant. It is like saying, "He took him from his mother's embrace and killed him," and so forth. It is to call him even worse.

If he errs he misleads the folk; if the folk are misled, their good will goes awry. Such is to discard the folk. The reason they have a ruler is to ensure things are done properly. Doing things properly is how to prosper, and prosperity is how to enrich the folk. It is the folk among whom we live—how could we discard them? We must establish the heir-apparent.”

國：里克曰我不佞雖不識義亦不阿惑吾其靜也三大夫乃別 Li K'e said, “I'll speak bluntly. Though I may not be clear about what is right, I will surely not abet error. I had best remain silent.” The three high officials then went their own ways.

šjwat 4.17 ^{vs} explain 4 說 說

Disputation in CC, as in other languages, consists mostly of the exposition of common sense. But where that does not suffice, argument by analogy and appeal to authority are used. All these rhetorical devices are called 說. Training in rhetoric consisted mostly of the memorization of hundreds of 說, which seem to have been used in similar fashion by all schools, regardless of what basic doctrines, if any, the school advocated. It is primarily this memorization of 說 and their application that is called 學 (qv), which may account for references to what hard work 學 is and how one must struggle to stay awake during it.

法：惟五經為辯說天者莫辯乎易說事者莫辯乎書說禮者莫辯乎禮說志者莫辯乎詩說理者莫辯乎春秋 It is the five classics that are really subtle. Nothing is more subtle at explaining Sky than Changes, nothing more subtle at explaining affairs than Writing, nothing more subtle at explaining exemplification than Rites, nothing more subtle at explaining intentions than Odes, nothing more subtle at explaining reason than Spring-Autumn.

孟：說詩者不以文害辭不以辭害志 In construing Odes, one does not take a word against the sense of the phrase, nor a phrase against the sense of the passage.

 戰：蘇秦始將連橫說秦惠王曰大王之國西蜀有巴漢中之利北有胡貉代馬之用南有巫山黔中之限東有肴函之固田肥美民殷富戰車萬乘奮擊百萬沃野千里蓄積饒多地勢形便此所謂天府天下之雄國也以大王之賢士民之眾車騎之用兵法之教可以并諸侯吞天下稱帝而治願大王少留意臣請奏其效 When Su Ch'in first took it in hand to connect a horizontal alliance, he made this proposal to the Benevolent King of Ch'in: "YGM's nation has the income of Pa, Shu and Han-chung on the west, on the north the benefit of the horses of the Hu, the Mo and Tai, on the south the barriers of Wu-shan and Ch'ien-chung mountains and on the east the strongholds of Hsiao and Han. Your earth is fertile and good, your populace rich and prosperous, you have ten thousand war chariots and can call a million men to arms. Your irrigated land stretches a thousand li and your stored grain is in enormous quantity. Your geographic situation is strategically favorable to you. This is what is called a natural treasure house, the most puissant nation in the world. YGM can use your strategic ability, your vast population of officers and men, your versatile cavalry and chariots and your well-inculcated tactical skills to annex all the other barons and engulf the whole world, reigning with the title of emperor. If you are willing to attend for a while I propose to deliver a demonstration of that. [Note the pounding rhythm of this piece, as well as the rigid parallelism, so rigid that we are entitled to suspect that two graphs have been dropped from the phrase 肴函之固. I suggest that the genre of poem known as fu 賦 derives from this style of declamation;

it would need only the addition of rime and eutrophication of the vocabulary. (Some even had rime; see the long citation under 戰.) This style is typical of addresses delivered before an audience in court, contrasting starkly with the conversational style of speech to a ruler in private. I infer that these addresses were composed and rehearsed in advance, and that much of what is called 學 consisted of reading and memorizing the recorded addresses of one's predecessors. We need not assume that any particular example that has come down to us in writing is recorded just as it was delivered, even allowing for textual corruption. But it is important not to take this rigid formalism of what is reported as speech as evidence that CC was not a spoken language. The four-beat rhythm has deep roots in Chinese, possibly originating in chants (called 歌 or 謠 qǔ) used to coordinate work in gangs in stamped-earth construction and irrigated agriculture perhaps as early as the neolithic. Its adoption in rhetoric may have been facilitated by the custom of quoting the Odes in 說, and the addition of rigid parallelism would have made the 說 easier to remember for both the declaimer and his audience. We know that traditional Chinese education developed the power of memorization to a prodigious degree, so that an audience of courtiers of similar education would all recognize the tropes any one of them used in such an address, and so that such addresses set down years afterward, as in 鹽鐵論, may yet have been recorded with fair to good accuracy. See more discussion under 衡鞅 and 王平.]

He bent over them and memorized them, refining them in fine detail to make of them a forged, polished weapon. When, while reading, he felt a desire to sleep he pulled out an awl and stabbed himself in the thigh until the blood flowed down to his foot. He said, "How could it be that I declaim these to rulers and not get gold, jewels, brocade and embroidered cloth and achieve the honor of premier?" A year later, hammering and grinding finished, he said, "These at last really can be declaimed to the rulers of my time." [說 as weapons used in previous battle, needing to be resharpened]

What is meant by “three-at-morning”? A keeper of monkeys meant to give them chestnuts; he said, “Three at morning and four at evening.” The monkeys were all angered. He said, “Well, then, four at morning and three at evening.” The monkeys were all pleased. Neither the name nor the reality was the least bit altered; their emotions were what they went by. 史：臣聞越王句踐戰敵卒三千人禽夫差於干遂武王卒三千人革車三百乘制紂於牧野豈其士卒眾哉誠能奮其威也 I have heard that King Kou-chien of Yüeh sent three thousand exhausted soldiers to do battle and captured Fu-ch'ai at Kan-sui. The Martial King's soldiers numbered three thousand and his armored chariots three hundred, and he brought Ch'ou under control at Mu-yeh. How could that have been due to their armies' multitude? It was because their dedication was able to arouse their will to dominate.

衡：或曰未至誠也行事至誠若鄰之呼天而霜降杞梁妻器而城崩何天氣之不能動乎夫至誠猶以心意之好惡也有果之物在人之前去口一尺心欲食之口氣吸之不能取也手撥送口然後得之夫以果之細易轉去口不遠至誠欲之不能得也況天去人高遠其氣莽蒼無端未乎 One might object that this falls short of perfect single-mindedness. If one does a thing with perfect single-mindedness, like Tsou Yen crying to sky and making frost, or the wife of Ch'i Liang weeping and making the wall crumble, how could it be that sky would not be moved? Now perfect single-mindedness still comes from the likes and dislikes of the heart.

Let there be a piece of fruit just ahead of a man, a foot from his mouth. His heart wants to eat it, his breath draws it to his mouth, but he cannot take it. Not until he grasps it with his hand and conveys it to his mouth can he get it. Now if perfect single-mindedness cannot get this piece of fruit it wants so much, small and round and easy to roll though it is, how much the less so the sky, so high and far from men, its vapor so inchoate and endless?

Shun-yü K'un looked up at the sky and laughed so hard the cord of his capstrings broke. The king said, "Do you consider that too little, sir?" K'un said, "How would I dare?" The king said, "Perhaps there is some explanation for your laughter?" K'un said, "Recently I came from the east. I saw a man by the roadside blessing his fields. He waved about a single pig-trotter and a single cup of wine and said, 'May the narrow mountain field fill baskets/ May the low muddy field fill tumbrils/ May the five grains flourish and ripen/ May the household be filled with richness.' I saw how stingy was what he brought and how extravagant was what he wanted and so I laughed at him. Then the Frightener King of Ch'ü increased his provision to a thousand díet of gold, ten pairs of white jade circlets and a hundred chariots with teams. K'un made his farewells and left for Chao. The king of Chao gave him 100,000 first-rate soldiers and 1,000 armored chariots. When Ch'ü heard of that they withdrew at night.

ḍ'īāg 麝 爾雅：small deer, musk valuable 麝 ḍ'īāgkung “marksman” giant water bug Lethocercus indicus 射工

抱：又有短狐一名蠃一名射工一名射影其實水蟲也狀如鳴蜩狀似三合盃有翼能飛無目而利耳口中有橫物[角弩↓]如聞人聲緣口中物如角弩以氣爲矢則因水而射人中人身者即發瘡中影者亦病而不即發瘡不曉治之者煞人其病似大傷寒不十日皆死 Then there is the shortfox, also called watersprite, also called marksman, also called shadowshooter. Actually it's a water bug. It is shaped like the singing cicada. Its shape resembles a drinking-cup of three ko. It has wings and can fly. It lacks eyes but has very sharp hearing. In its mouth there is a thing running crosswise. If it hears a human voice it pulls the thing in its mouth like bending a bow, making its breath into an arrow and shoots water at him. If it hits the person's body, ulcers break out at once. If it hits the person's shadow, illness also ensues but does not break out in ulcers at once. Those who hadn't noticed it and leave it untreated are killed. The sickness is like massive cold-damage; all die of it within ten days.

Another sermon on the irreconcilability of traditional Chinese nature study with modern biology (citations all from sources quoted in 本草綱目): this insect is common throughout southern China and southeast Asia, where it is eaten as a delicacy. It is the largest insect in order Hemiptera, as big as some of the largest beetles (大如雞子). It has compound eyes and is attracted to light at night. It lacks mouth parts, feeding instead through a penetrating rostrum (頭有一角) through which it injects a digestive fluid. It will attack humans (the North American species is called “toe-biter”), and the pain of this injection is said to be among the most agonizing of all insect bites and stings. The length of this rostrum is exaggerated in traditional accounts. Like all insects, it has six legs, the two rear pair adapted for locomotion and the front pair adapted for grasping its prey, small fish and aquatic arthropods. (The drawing in 本草綱目 shows three pair of locomotive legs.) The front legs, when not in use, are held in flexed position; with just a bit of imagination they can be seen as a bow, with the rostrum as an arrow. The business about shooting people is made up based on this fancied resemblance and the very real pain of its bite.

Any creature that injects fluid into its prey and retrieves it as food should be viewed as a possible disease vector, which might account for the 60-70% mortality rate (十死六七也) reported by traditional sources, but entomologists generally regard L. indicus as not a vector. Serious diseases acquired from other sources might be falsely attributed to this bug.

Giant water bugs share with their cousins the stink bugs a defensive behavior in which they exude a pungent chemical (溪毒) from abdominal scent glands. Sources make no particular

莊：勞神明爲一而不知其同也謂之朝三何謂朝三曰狙公賦芋曰朝三而暮四眾狙皆怒曰然則朝四而暮三眾狙皆悅名實未虧而喜怒爲用亦因是也 To exhaust one's intellect in maintaining that all is one, not recognizing the sameness—we call that “three-at-morning”. What is meant by “three-at-morning”? A keeper of monkeys meant to give them chestnuts; he said, “Three at morning and four at evening.” The monkeys were all angered. He said, “Well, then, four at morning and three at evening.” The monkeys were all pleased. Neither the name nor the reality was the least bit altered; their emotions were what they went by. That, too, is a good analogy.

衡：由是以論癰疽之發亦一實也氣結閉積聚爲癰潰爲疔創流血出膿膿癰疽所發身之善穴哉營衛之行不通也 Analyzing it from this, the outbreak of pustules and of ulcers are also the same essential reality. When the vapor congeals and is obstructed, it accumulates to form pustules, then leaks out to form ulcers and carbuncles. Surely this flow of blood and issue of pus could not be because the body on which the pustules and ulcers form thinks pits are good things? It is because the blood encountered an impasse in its course.

淮: 傷死者其鬼媿時既者其神漠 Those who die violently, their ghosts are bound; those whose span is fulfilled, their spirits are at rest.

左: 秋七月有神降于莘惠王問諸內史過曰是何故也對曰國之將興明神降之監其德也將亡神又降之觀其惡也故有得神以興亦有以亡虞夏商周皆有之王曰若之何對曰以其物享焉其至之日亦其物也王從之 In the autumn, in the seventh month, there was a spirit that descended in Hsin. The Benevolent King asked Kuo, the interior tally-keeper, why that had happened. Kuo replied, "When a state is about to flourish, a clear-sighted spirit descends on it, to observe its deservingness. When one is about to perish a spirit will again descend on it, to observe its evil. Thus there are cases of flourishing by getting a spirit visit, but also cases of perishing by that. It happened each time in the cases of Shun, the Hsia, the Shang and the Chou." The king said, "What should be done about it?" "Offer to it its particular thing. The day on which it arrived, that is its thing." The king followed that advice.

c. 神明 intellectual capacity

莊: 勞神明為一而不知其同也謂之朝三 To exhaust one's intellect in maintaining that all is one while not recognizing the sameness—we call that "three-at-morning".

漢: 此所以神明不遺而聖賢不廢也故各當其世而立功德焉 This is how their intelligence was not lost nor their supreme competence wasted. Thus each responded to his era by getting things done and getting credit for that.

尉: 所謂天子者四焉一曰神明二曰垂光三曰洪敘四曰無敵 此天子之事也 There are four aspects to what we call emperor: first, innate intelligence; second, the sending-down of an aura; third, overwhelming order; fourth, having no rivals. This is the business of the emperor.

淮：昔者蒼頡作書容成造曆胡曹爲衣后稷耕稼儀狄作酒奚仲爲車此六人者皆有神明之道聖智之跡故人作一事而遺後世非能一人而獨兼有之 In ancient times Ts'ang Chieh invented writing, Jung Ch'êng invented calendrical calculation, Hu Ts'ao made clothing, Hou Chi plowed for planting, Yi Ti invented wine and Hsi Chung invented carts. These six wise men all left the traces of passage of their genius on the way of the intellect. Thus when someone invents one way of doing things and hands it on, it is not possible for one man alone to monopolize it in later generations.

史：爲善者天報之以福爲惡者天與之以殃其自然者也 Sky rewards doers of good with good fortune and sends ill fortune to doers of evil; these are examples of its spontaneous behavior.

衡：天地合氣萬物自生猶夫婦合氣子自生矣萬物之生含血之類知飢知寒見五穀可食取而食之見絲麻可衣取而衣之或說以爲天生五穀以食人生絲麻以衣人此謂天爲人作農夫桑女之徒也不合自然故其義疑未可從也 Sky and earth mingle their energy-vapor and things bring themselves into existence, just as when a husband and wife mingle their energy-vapor a child will then bring itself into existence. When things come into existence, those of them that have blood become aware of hunger and cold, see that the five grains can be eaten and take them and eat them, see that silk and hemp can be worn and take them and wear them. Some explain this on the assumption that sky has brought the five grains into existence so as to feed people and has brought silk and hemp into existence so as to clothe people. This is to claim that sky made servants of farmers and mulberry-girls on behalf of other people. That does not tally with what happens of its own accord, so this explanation is dubious and is not to be followed.

衡：試依道家論之天者普施氣萬物之中谷愈飢而絲麻救寒故人食衣衣絲麻也夫天之不故生五穀絲麻以衣食人由其有災變不欲以譴告人也物自生而人衣食之氣自變而人畏懼之以若說論之厭於人心矣如天瑞爲故自然焉在 If we try explaining it according to the Taoists, what sky does is to apply vapor equally among all the things of earth. Grain alleviates hunger, and silk and hemp keep out cold, so people eat grain and wear silk and hemp. Sky does not intentionally give life to the five grains and to silk and hemp so as to feed and clothe people, just as it does not intend to warn people by having disasters and anomalies. Things come to life of their own and people eat and wear them; vapor changes of its own and people are awed and frightened by it. If we use such a theory to explain it, it is all hidden in men's hearts. If sky's signals are the cause, where is self-so-ness? Where does non-contriving lie?

衡：何以[知]天之自然也以天無口目也案有爲者口目之類也口欲食而目欲視有嗜欲於內發之於外口目求之得以爲利欲之爲也今無口目之欲於物無所求索夫何爲乎 How do we know that sky is so of itself? Because sky has no mouth or eyes. I point out that things that contrive are all those of the category having mouths and eyes. The mouth wants to eat and the eye wants to look. Having preferences and desires within they issue forth without; the mouth and eyes want things and get them and benefit by them. This is the contriving of desire. Here we have no desire of mouth and eyes for anything and nothing to seek for, so what contriving could there be?
衡：何以知天無口目也以地知之地以土爲體土本無口目無地夫婦也地體無口目亦知天口目也使天體乎宜與地同使天氣乎氣若雲煙雲煙之屬安得口目 How do we know sky has no mouth and eyes? We know it by earth. Earth's parts are of dirt, and dirt never had any mouth or eyes. Sky and earth are husband and wife, so if no mouth and eyes are among the parts of earth we know that neither has sky a mouth and eyes. Do we suppose sky to be a solid body? Then it ought to be the same as earth. Do we suppose sky to be vapor? Vapor is like clouds and smoke. A thing like clouds and smoke/

Where would it get mouth and eyes? [nr]
衡：或曰凡動行之類皆本[無有爲]有欲故動動則有爲今天動行與人相似安得無爲曰天之動行也施氣也體動氣乃出物乃生矣由人動氣也體動氣乃出子亦生也夫人之施氣也非欲以生子氣施而子自生矣 One might object that all things that move and act from their origin desire things, so they stir from quiescence, and they contrive things. In this case, sky moves and is just like humanity in that regard, so how it not contrive anything? I say when sky moves acts it applies vapor. When its parts move the v emerges and things are then given life. It is like humans applying vapor; the parts move and the vapor emerges and a child is given life. Now when humans apply vapor, it is not that they want to have a child, but the vapor is applied and the child comes alive of its own.

He will not say that parents' intercourse causes a child—the act's result but not its motive. Removing unintended consequences from the class of caused occurrences is the sort of lawyerly verbal trick to which ordinary-language philosophy is apt to descend. If Wang really had the scientific outlook that has been imputed to him, he would instead argue that, just as he pointed out a few lines above, sky and earth have no parts analogous to the body parts of humans, so the analogy to their generative acts is forced and misleading. But he accepts the analogy in this case where it supports his claim, which is about the use of a word, not about the classification of natural events. The word contrive in this essay can best be understood as meaning

mulberry

something like "make" or even "manufacture."

衡:天動不欲以生物而物自生此則自然也施氣不欲為物而物自為此則無為也謂天自然無為者何氣也恬淡無欲無為無事者也老聃得以壽矣老聃稟之於天使天無此氣老聃安所稟受此性師無其說而弟子獨言者未之有也 When sky moves it does not intend to give life to things; things come alive of their own. This, then, is being so of itself, not contriving anything. What do we call the vapor of being so of itself and not contriving things? It is calmness, without desire, without contrivance, without busyness. Lao Tan got it and lived a long life by it. Lao Tan received it from sky. If we suppose sky lacked this vapor, then where did Lao Tan receive this life-nature? A student never initiates doctrine on his own when his teacher has never said that before.

衡:或復於桓公曰以告仲父左右曰一則仲父二則仲父為君乃易乎桓公曰吾未得仲父故難已得仲父何為不易夫桓公得父任之以事委之以政不復與知皇天以至優之德與王政而譴告人則天德不若桓公而霸王之操過上帝也 Someone made a report to the Foursquare Marquess of Chi and he said, "Tell Uncle." A servant said, "Tell this to Uncle; tell that to Uncle. What an easy thing to be a ruler!" The marquess said, "It was hard enough before I got Uncle; why shouldn't it be easy now?" The Marquess got Uncle and handed over his affairs to him and entrusted him with the government and paid no more attention to it. If vast sky with its superb power hands over government to a king and then issues warnings to the people that would mean that the power of sky is not equal that of the Foursquare marquess and the deeds of a senior baron surpass those of the high deity.

衡:或曰桓公知管仲賢故委任之如非管仲亦將譴告之矣使天遭堯舜必無譴告之變曰天能譴告人君則亦能故命聖君擇才若堯舜受以王命委以王事勿復與知今則不然生庸庸之君失道廢德隨譴告之何天不憚勞也 One might object that the marquess knew that Kuan Chung was competent so he passed the burden on to him. Had it been anyone but Kuan Chung, he also would have had to admonish him. When Sky encounters a Yao or a Shun it never has admonitory anomalies. I say: if Sky has the power to warn a ruler then it also has the power to ordain a sage ruler, deliberately selecting one with genius like Yao or Shun, conferring on him the royal command and deputing to him the royal responsibility and taking no further notice of his work. In this case that is not what happens. It brings forth a quite ordinary ruler, and when he loses the way and neglects his influence it follows with admonitory announcements to him. Why doesn't Sky save itself the effort?

When his son remonstrated, he had him given two hundred strokes of the rod. At that time there were no anomalous disturbances anywhere in the world. When false coiners in Huai Yang could not be stopped by the officials, Chi Yen was made governor and without destroying a single furnace or punishing a single man, the administration of Huai Yang became honest while he slept in comfort on a high pillow. Ts'ao Shen was premier as if he wasn't premier and Chi Yen was governor as if his commandery was unpopulated. That the Han empire nonetheless had no trouble nor had Huai Yang anyone punished was because Shen's influence was so superior and Yen's moral force so preponderant. If we reckon the influence and moral force of Sky, how do they compare to those of Ts'ao Shen and Chi Yen? Then to say that Sky confers government on the king and follows with admonitory announcements to him is the same as saying that Sky's influence is less potent than that of Ts'ao Shen, its moral force less preponderant than that of Chi Yen.

衡:蓬伯玉治衛子貢使人問之何以治衛對曰以不治治之夫不治之治無為之道也 When Chü Po-yü was governing Wèi, Tz'u-kung had someone ask him, "What means do you use to govern Wèi?" He replied, "I govern by non-governance." Now government by non-governance is the way of non-contrivance.

衡:或曰太平之應河出圖洛出書不畫不就為不成天地出之有為之驗也張良游泗水之上遇黃石公授太公書蓋天佐漢誅秦故命令神石為鬼書授人復為有為之效也

Objection: in response to supreme pacification, a diagram comes out of the Ho and a writing comes out of the Lo. No brushstrokes, nothing done; no contriving, nothing completed. That they came from Sky and Earth is proof that there is contrivance. Chang Liang travelling by the Szü river met the venerable old man of the brown stone who gave him Tai Kung's book which turned out to be an indication that Sky would help Han to punish Ch'in and therefore ordered a divine stone to make a demonic writing to give to a man; by the same logic, another proof there is contrivance.

衡:曰此皆自然也夫天安得以筆墨而為圖書乎天道自然故圖書自成晉唐叔虞魯成季友生文在其手故叔曰虞季曰友宋仲子生有文在其手曰為魯夫人三者在母之時文字成矣而謂天為文字在母之時天使神持筆墨刻其身乎 I say these all happened of themselves. Now, how would Sky be able to make diagrams and writings with brush and ink? T'ang Shu Yü of Chin and Ch'eng Chi Yu of Lu were born with marks on their hands, so Shu was called Yü and Chi was called Yu. Chung-tzü of Sung was born with marks on her hand that said she would be wife to Lu. When these three were in their mothers the marks were already completed. So if you say Sky wrote these marks, when they were in their mothers did Sky send a spirit to take an awl and scratch those marks into their bodies as if with brush and ink?

狀也黃石授書亦漢且興之象也妖氣為鬼鬼象人形自然之道非或為之也 Metamorphoses that happen of themselves can be puzzling and hard to recognize. Outwardly it is as if they were contrived, while within they actually happen of themselves. The Grand Historian in recording the business of the brown stone was unsure and could not verify it. Chao Chien-tzü dreamed of going up to the sky and seeing a certain man at the side of the High Ancestor. Later he went out and saw a man standing in the road and it was the same man he had previously dreamed of seeing at the side of the High Ancestor. I analyse that as a foreshowing that the state of Chao would prosper. The brown stone conferring the writing was another fore-image, of the rise of the Han. Ominous vapor makes ghosts, and ghosts resemble humans; that is a way things happen of themselves, not because of something contriving them.

衡:草木之生華葉青蔥皆有曲折象類文章 When plants and trees come to life/ Their flowers and leaves are fresh and green/ All of them are bent and folded/ Looking like the patterns of writing. [mr]

衡:謂天為文字復為華葉乎宋人或刻木為楮葉者三年乃成孔子曰使地三年乃成一葉則萬物之有葉者寡矣如孔子之言萬物之葉自為生也自為生也故能并成如天為之其運當若宋人刻楮葉矣觀鳥獸之毛羽毛羽之采色通可為乎鳥獸未能盡實春觀萬物之生秋觀其成天地為之乎 If sky contrives writing, does it by the same logic contrive flowers and leaves? Once a Sung man carved wood to form a leaf of wild mulberry and it took him three years to finish the job. Confucius said, "If it took the earth three years to make a single leaf, then there wouldn't be many things in nature with leaves." If Confucius had it right then leaves on things in nature spring up for their own sake, so they can all be finished at the same time. If Sky contrived them, the delay would be like that of the Sung man making a wild mulberry leaf. Look at the feathers and fur of birds and animals. Could anyone go through them all and paint the colors of their feathers and fur just right? Nor can birds and animals exhaust the reality of this. Look at how everything comes to life in spring and to fruition in fall; could sky and earth contrive that?

衡:物自然也如謂天地為之為之宜用手天地安得萬萬千手并為萬萬千手物乎諸物在天地之間也猶子在母腹中也母懷子氣十月而生鼻口耳目發膚毛理血脈脂膜骨節爪齒自然成腹中乎母為之也 Things come about of themselves. If you claim sky and earth contrive them, it ought to use hands to accomplish the job. How could sky and earth simultaneously contrive billions and billions of things with billions and billions of hands? All things lie between sky and earth like a child lying in its mother's womb. The mother having received the child's energy-vapor, in the tenth month it is born. Did its nose, mouth, ears, eyes, hair, skin, nerves, blood, veins, fingers, fat, bones, joints, nails and teeth all form themselves inside the mother's belly? Or did she contrive them?

衡：然雖自然亦須有為輔助耒耜耕耘因春播種者人為之也及穀入地日夜長夫人不能為也或為之者敗之道也宋人有閔其苗之不長者就而握之明日枯死夫欲為自然者宋人之徒也 But even things that happen by themselves require contrivance to support and assist them. Plowing and harrowing the land and waiting until spring to sow the seed are human contrivance. But when it comes to the grain in the ground growing day and night, humans cannot contrive that. A misguided attempt to force it to happen would be just the way to spoil it. A Sung man, anxious about his sprouts not growing, went and pulled them up. The next day they had all withered and died. Those who want to force things to happen of themselves are of the school of that Sung man.

衡：問曰人生於天地天地無為人稟天性者亦當無為而有為何也曰至德純渥之人稟天氣多故能則天自然無為稟氣薄少不遵道德不似天地故曰不肖不肖者不似也不似天地不類聖賢故有為也 You may ask, "If people are engendered by sky and earth without sky and earth's contrivance, and their life-process goes by what sky has provided them, they ought also to refrain from contriving, yet they do contrive. Why?" I answer that a man who is entirely imbued with perfect influence has been richly provided with the energy-vapor of sky. Thus he is able to model himself on sky in naturally not contriving. If one has received a sparse, thin energy-vapor he does not follow the influence of the way and does not resemble sky and earth. Thus he is called a bungler. "Bungler" is "not resemble." That is, he does not resemble sky and earth, nor is he similar to geniuses and highly competent people. Thus he contrives things.

This is folk-etymology in the service of philosophy. V. note under 不肖.

王之才不如周公桓公之知不若管仲然成桓受尊命而周管稟卑秩也案古人君希有不學於人臣知博希有不為父師然而人君猶以無能處主位人臣猶以鴻才為庸役故貴賤在命不在智愚貧富在祿不在頑慧 Hoarded silver and stored purple cloth may not imply the talent of a Chi or a Hsieh; piled gold and heaped jade may not imply the knowledge of Chu of T'ao. Sometimes a low-grade moron has a thousand gold pieces or a pig-headed dolt is in charge of a fortified city. Thus in official life those of identical talent can be destined disparate ranks, while in private life those of equal intelligence may be fortunated differing wealth. There are degrees of wealth and poverty granted that intelligence cannot increase or decrease; there are degrees of high and low rank destined that talent cannot promote or demote. The talent of Ch'eng Wang was not equal to that of Tan, Duke of Chou; the intelligence of the Foursquare Marquess was not up to that of Kuan Chung. But Ch'eng and Foursquare had the destiny to be honored while Tan and Kuan were ordained to be of lower rank. Looking at antiquity, few are the cases in which the rulers did not learn from their ministers, few the cases in which those of broad understanding were not tutors and teachers.

Nonetheless, the rulers still with their incompetence occupied the ruling position and the ministers still with their vast talent acted as flunkies. Thus high or low rank depends on destiny, not on whether one is intelligent or stupid; wealth or poverty depends on fortune, not on whether one is frivolous or serious. 衡：世之論事者以才高當為將相能下者宜為農商見智能之士官位不至怪而訾之曰是必毀於行操行操之士亦怪毀之曰是必乏於才知殊不知才知行操雖高官位富祿有命才智之人以吉盛時舉事而福至人謂才智明審凶哀禍來謂愚暗不知吉凶之命盛衰之祿也 People who discuss matters nowadays assume that one with high talent ought to become a general or minister, while one with low ability is suited to be a farmer or merchant. When they see a talented man to whom office and position do not come, they marvel at it and blame him, saying he must be defective in conduct; while in the case of one of distinguished conduct they also marvel and criticise him, saying that he must be lacking in talent. They utterly do not recognize that although one's intelligence and conduct may be high, rank, position and wealth are a matter of destiny. If an intelligent man initiates some affair at an auspicious time of expansion and good fortune comes, people say his intelligence is penetrating and accurate; but if at an inauspicious time of decline and ill-fortune results, they call him stupid. They do not recognize that good and bad luck are due to destiny, that expansion and decline are due to fortune.

史：維[二十→]廿九年皇帝春游覽省遠方 In the 29th year the emperor made a spring journey to inspect distant places.

n̂iəp ɕiəp 1.49 bear burden 207 任

孟：匠人斲而小之則王怒以為不勝其任矣 If the carpenters cut them to be smaller, YM will be angry, assuming that they will no longer support the load.

莊：汝不知夫螳螂乎怒其臂以當車轍不知其不勝任也 Don't you know about mantises? They will raise their arms to block a cart-track, not knowing they cannot accomplish it.

國：任大惡三行將安入 Bearing the burden of three great evils, if you go, where will you get in?

釋：擔任也任力所勝也 tām "carry on shoulder" is n̂iəp "bear burden"; to bear the burden of which one's strength is capable.

草：齟齬以上苟任涉學皆廢倉頡史籀竟以杜崔為楷 Everyone past early childhood who happens to be faced with getting an education ignores Ts'ang Chieh and Chou the scribe and winds up taking Tu and Ts'ui as their model.

石：無任 [phrase found on grave-markers of some corvée laborers]

戰：曰今王之國有柱國令尹司馬典令其任官置吏必曰廉潔勝任 "To answer YM's question, you have a president, a prime minister, a marshal and an attorney general. When they assign an office and appoint an official they must say, 'He is honest and can fulfil its duties.'"

韓：三公者何曰司空司馬司徒也司馬主天司空主土司徒主人故陰陽不和四時不節星辰失度災變異常則責之司馬山陵崩[竭→]腐川谷不流五穀不植草木不茂則責之司空君臣不正人道不和國多盜賊下怨其上則責之司徒故三典其職憂其分舉其辯明其隱此三公之任也 What are the three ducal ministers? They are the minister of works, the minister of war and the minister of manpower. The minister of war is responsible for the sky, the minister of works for the earth and the minister of manpower for the people. Thus if yin and yang are not in harmony, if the four seasons are not in rhythm, if the stars lose their regularities, if disasters and anomalies distort normality then we task the minister of war with that. If mountains collapse, if stream valleys do not flow, if the five grains do not grow nor plants and trees flourish, we task the minister of works with that. If ruler and minister are not aligned, if the way of man is not in harmony, if there are many thieves and robbers in the land and inferiors resent their superiors then we task the minister of manpower with that. Thus the three ducal ministers keep their duties in control, worried about the demarcations, offering their analyses and making clear what had been obscure. These are the responsibilities of the three ducal ministers.

淮：任車 to load a cart [with goods]

衡：任車 a loaded cart

非：夫踶馬也者任前而舉後 Now, the way a kicking horse does it is to put its weight on its forequarters and raise its hindquarters.

後：譚以父任為郎 Tan was appointed to the imperial household on account of his father.

史：燕王專任子之己而讓位 The king of Yen gave complete authority to Tzū-chih and wound up ceding the throne to him.

戰：明日任之於王 The next day he recommended him in service to the king.

民：有點葉天折之患不任作布也 They suffer from loss of leaves and wilting and do not make good cloth. 家：長幼異食強弱異任男女別塗 Elder and younger have different food, strong and weak have different jobs, men and women use different paths. 淮：所任者得其人則國家治上下和群臣親百姓附所任非其人則國家危上下乖群臣怨百姓亂 If he has got the right man for the task he assigns him then the state will be in order, superior and inferior will be in harmony, the civil service friendly and the populace loyal. If he has got the wrong man for the task he assigns him then the state will be parlous, superior and inferior at odds, the civil service resentful and the populace disorderly.

漢：五帝其臣莫能及則自親之三王臣主俱賢則共憂之五伯不及其臣則任使之 None of the five sovereigns' servants could come up to their standard, so they did things themselves. The servants of the three kings were as competent as they, so they all shared the cares of government. The five overlords did not come up to the standards of their servants, so they employed them to bear the burden of government.

淮：釋術數而任耳目其亂必甚矣 If you abandon method and make decisions solely on the immediate evidence of your senses, you are sure to make the disorder much worse.

越：壽夢以巫臣子狐庸為相任以國政 Shou-mêng entrusted the governance of the state to Hui-yung, son of Wu-chên.

淮：曰余[任→]在天下誰敢害吾意者 He said, "I rule the world! Who dares obstruct my will?" [藝文類聚 cites this, replacing 余任 with 予在.]

淮：夫釋大道而任小數無以異於使蟹捕鼠蟾螭捕蚤不足以禁姦塞邪 Now to discard the great Way and depend on petty techniques cannot be distinguished from sending a crab to catch mice or a toad to catch fleas. It is insufficient to prevent treachery or block wrongness.

顏：學為文章先謀親友得其評裁知可施行然後出手慎勿師心自任取笑旁人也 When you study literary composition, first take counsel of your relatives and friends to get their criticism and editing. Only after you know that it is worth doing should you let your hand be generally seen. Be sure not to go it alone, indulging your personal notions, because that will draw ridicule from the public.

b. fig. if

史：如今人方爲刀俎我爲魚肉何辭爲 If at this time other people are acting like knives and cutting-boards, we to be the fish and flesh, what would leave-taking accomplish?

漢：如不置聽於庶事不論材而授位殫天下之財以奉淫侈匱萬姓之力以從耳目近詭諛之人而遠公方信讒賊之臣以誅忠良賢俊失

在巖穴大臣怨於不以雖無變異社稷之憂也

If you do not pay attention to all that there is to do, and confer ranks without considering talents, if you use up the wealth of the world to support profligacy, deplete the strength of the populace to indulge your senses, promote flatterers and keep honest men at a distance, punish the loyal and good on the word of slanderous ministers, the great and the talented having gone away to mountain caverns and high ministers resenting their unemployment, then even though there may be no ominous uncanny events, still the nation is in danger.

h̃jəm h̃jəm 1.9 ^v resemble 122 如

左：如二君故曰克 They were like two rulers, so it says “conquered.”

左：遂爲母子如初 They went on to act as mother and son as they had originally.

戰：譬之如張羅者 Comparing, it's like setting nets. 國：獲如土缶其中有羊焉 found something like an earthen um that had a sheep in it

戰：謁者難得見如鬼 Your ushers are as hard to get to see as ghosts.

戰：與秦城何如不與何如 How will it be if we give Chi in the forts, and how will it be if we don't? 越：敢不如命 Would I dare not do as you order?

2. “X 不如 Y” Y rather than X

左：子般怒使鞭之公曰不如殺之是不可鞭也 Tzû-pan was enraged and had him whipped. The ruler said, “Better to have killed him; this one is not to be whipped.”

左：不如早爲之所無使滋蔓 Better make a place for him soon and not let him get even more unruly.

B. idioms

1. “如何” how to go about it?

衡：韓子欲獨任刑用誅如何 Prof. Hân wants solely to rely on punishment and strict accountability; how?

2. “如 X 何” how to deal with X?

論：不曰如之何如之何者吾未如之何也已矣 Someone who isn't always saying, “How can I deal with it?”—I have no way to deal with him.

孟：一薛居州獨如宋王何 What could a lone Hsüeh Chü Chou do by himself to the king of Sung?

3. “何 X 如之” what X could be more |less so?

左：以與向戌向戌辭曰君若猶辱鎮撫宋國而以偏陽光啟寡君群臣安矣其何如之若專賜臣是臣與諸侯以自封也其何罪大焉敢以死請乃予宋公 [The Marquess] offered it to Hsiang Hsü, who declined in these words: “If YL will continue to condescend to aid and comfort the state of Sung and apply Fu-yang to the aggrandisement and encouragement of my ruler, all his servants will come to feel secure. What gift could equal that? If you present it to me alone, then I will have brought out the barons as means to gain a fief for myself. What crime could be greater than that? I dare request this at the risk of my life.” So it was given to the Duke of Sung.

左：君貺之以大禮何樂如之 What happiness could compare to the great honor YL has done me?

A case of reanalysis: The idiom 何 X 如之 is for some reason unique to the 左傳, where it occurs half a dozen times. (Its equivalent in other texts is typically something like X 孰 Y 焉 “what X could be more Y than that:” which also occurs in the 左傳) In the folg passage from the 禮記, the 左傳 idiom is reanalysed as if it were a paraphrase of 如之何 X “how could I X?” That gives the impression (as does the use of 蓋 for 盍) that the author of this passage, and perhaps the compiler of much of the work, was writing in a self-consciously old-fashioned style of which he had a shaky grasp. The idiom is again used in its 左傳 sense by 潘岳 (ob AD 300).

“It won't do. Our ruler has said that I want to kill him. Is there any state in the world that has no fathers? How could I go?”

左：二年春公會戎于潛 In the spring of his second year, the marquess held a meeting with the Jung in Ch'ien.

左：戎有中國誰之咎也 If barbarians are in possession of Chinese territory, who is to blame for that? 隋：中央三小星曰伐天之都尉也主胡鮮卑戎狄之國故不欲明 The three small stars in the center are called fa. They are sky's colonels. They govern hu, hsien-pei, jung and ti. Thus for them to be bright is undesirable.

國：獻公卜伐驪戎史蘇占之曰勝而不吉 The Exemplary Marquess by scapulimancy divined attacking the Li Jung; the scribe Su interpreted the omen, "Victory, but inauspicious."

史：發教封內而巴人致貢施德諸侯而八戎來服 He taught the whole country, and the Pa sent tribute to him; he made all the barons obliged to him and the eight Jung came to submit.

史：戎王使由余於秦由余其先晉人也亡入戎能晉言聞繆公賢故使由余觀秦 The king of the Jung sent Yu Yü as emissary to Ch'in. Yu Yü's ancestors were Chin people who fled to the Jung and could speak Chin language. He heard that The Splendid Earl was a good ruler, and so sent Yü as emissary to observe Ch'in.

國：挾以骨齒牙為猾戎夏交梓 Caught between jaws/ Teeth and fangs making an ugly mouth/ Barbarian and Chinese fighting each other. 藝：古今藝術圖曰北方山戎寒食日用鞦韆為戲以習輕趨者 The Ancient and Modern Arts Depicted says northern hill tribes play on swings at the day of cold food, to practise being light and agile.

b. hamped together with 狄 (翟) 漢：其視戎狄之侵譬猶蚊虻之螫蠹之而已 Their view of barbarian incursions was to compare them to bites of mosquitoes or flies: just drive them away, that's all.

史：臣聞爭名者於朝爭利者於市今三川周室天下之朝市也而王不爭焉願爭於戎翟去王業遠矣 I have heard that those who compete for reputation do it in the court; those who compete for profit do it in the market. In this case the three rivers and the Chou household are court and market of the whole world, yet YM does not compete there. You turn away and compete among barbarians. That is far indeed from the path to kingship.

𨋖 xiōb 1.10 Confucian, didactic (phon fit w/師 v good; assoc w/"weak" perh punning jibe by inimical schools?) 29 儒

衡：案世間能建塞塞之節成三諫之議令將檢身自敕不敢邪曲者率多儒生 I point out those of our time who are able to establish strict limits and establish the obligation of three remonstrances and not daring to act in divergent or crooked ways; they are by and large Confucians.

史：叔孫通儒服漢王憎之迺變其服短衣楚製漢王喜 Shu-sun T'ung habitually wore Confucian garb, and the Han king disliked that. So he switched to wearing a short upper garment, cut after the fashion of Ch'u, and the Han king was pleased. [儒服 fac-obj]

後：性嗜倡樂簡易不修威儀而意非毀俗儒由是多見排抵 By nature he loved directing music. He was relaxed and easy in manner and did not put up a front, but he enjoyed sharp criticism of those he considered inferior scholars, so he met frequent rebuffs. 衡：卑位固常賢儒之所在也 Low ranks are certainly where capable Confucian scholars are typically found.

史：上念諸儒及方士言封禪人人殊不經難施行 The emperor wondered whether fêng-shên might not be difficult to execute, as the Confucians and the Taoist adepts had each his own opinion of the matter and there was no canon to go by.

非：儒者博乎曰不也...博貴臬梟者必殺梟殺梟者是殺所貴也儒者以為害義 "Do Confucians play pák?" "No...in pák the owl ranks highest, and the winner must kill the owl. That is to kill what one ranks highest, and Confucians take that as harmful to public morals."

非：或問儒者方此時也堯安在其人曰堯為天子然則仲尼之聖堯奈何 Object by asking the Confucian where Yao was at that time. If he says Yao was emperor, then how does he deal with Chung-ni's having considered Yao a sage?

衡：坑殺儒士者言其皆挾經傳文書之人也 Burying Confucian scholars alive means because they all were men who upheld the classics and transmitted literary writings.

史：會竇太后治黃老言不好儒術 At that time the Tou empress was into Huanglao and had no love for Confucian ways.

後：意非毀俗儒 He enjoyed contradicting and deriding scholarly mediocrities.

衡：論賢儒之才既超程矣人怪其仕宦不進官爵卑細以賢才退在俗吏之後信不怪也夫如是而適足以見賢不肖之分睹高下多少之實也 Having established that the intellectual power of an accomplished scholar goes off the scale, our contemporaries are astonished that when appointed to office such scholars do not advance, remaining in low posts, with all their erudition, yet shoved below common ordinary functionaries. This is not really astonishing. It is only because things are this way that we can see the difference between skill and incompetence, and can make out what is really high and really low, really abundant and really sparse.

衡：龜生三百歲大如錢游於蓮葉之上三千歲青邊緣巨尺二寸著生七十歲生一莖七百歲生十莖神靈之物也故生遲留歷歲長久故能明審 A tortoise that has lived for three hundred years is the size of a coin and can wander about on a lotus leaf. At three thousand years it is in the vigor of its youth; the circumference of its shell is a foot and two inches. A milfoil that has lived seventy years puts forth one stalk; after seven hundred years it has put forth ten stalks. These are divinely insightful beings, and so their life-process is slow and lingering. They pass through many, many years and so are able to clearly discriminate the truth.

衡: 實賢儒之在世也猶靈著神龜也計學問之日固已盡年之半矣銳意於道遂無貪仕之心及其仕也純特方正無員銳之操故世人遲取進難也針錐所穿無不暢達使針錐末方穿物無一分之深矣賢儒方節而行無針錐之銳固安能自穿取暢達之功乎 A Confucian scholar is like the tortoise and milfoil in relation to other men of his age. If we count the days of his training and education, they assuredly use up at least half his life. Their concern is focused on the progress of the Way; they have no lust for office. When they are appointed to office they are utterly un-cliquish, square and straight. They have no smooth, sharp practices. To their contemporaries, they are slow to decide and they go forward with difficulty. Whatever a needle or awl pierces, it goes right through. Suppose the end of a needle or awl were flat, its penetration into a thing would not even be a fraction of an inch. Competent Confucians go like a flat-ended bamboo joint, lacking the sharpness of a needle or awl. So how could they force themselves through to penetrate to success?

衡: 且驥一日行千里者無所服也使服任車 [與→]與駕馬同[音→]昔驥曾以引鹽車矣垂頭落汗行不能進伯樂顧之王良御之空身輕馳故有千里之名今賢儒懷古今之學負荷禮義之重內累於胸中之知外劬於禮義之操不敢妄進苟取故有稽留之難無伯樂之友不遭王良之將安得馳於清明之朝立千里之跡乎 Another point is that Chi ran a thousand li in a day because he was not harnessed to anything. If he had been harnessed to a loaded cart he would have the same reputation as an ordinary nag. Chi was once harnessed to a salt wagon; he hung his head and sweated and could go nowhere. Po Lo looked after him and Wang Liang drove him and he galloped lightly all by himself; thus he has the name for going a thousand li. In our case, competent Confucians carry within themselves the learning of past and present and bear the weight of ceremony and right behavior; within they are tied by their cognizance and without they are hooked by their principles. They dare not go forward carelessly or decide heedlessly. Thus they have the difficulty of being held back, and without friends who were like Po Lo, without the luck to get a boss who was like Wang Liang, how would they get to gallop through a career in an uncorrupt court and leave a trail of a thousand li?

*Much effort has been expended in search of a word in a major European language that closely approximates this word's meaning in Chinese.
There is none. Waley's virtù has many virtues but misses the mark in important respects. My "influence" attempts to synthesize and generalize its many aspects, but I would seldom translate tək as "influence" in context.*

*This word is homophonous with 得 "get" with which it is pruned in glosses. It is plausibly relatable to words like 植 tək "sow, plant" and 箬 d'og "bamboo shoots". Its usual graph 德 is also used to write təng "rise, raise," which also means for a harvest to come in amply. Its referent is roughly "the harvest one will reap from the crop one has sown and cultivated," but this basic notion has ramified in so many directions that no one word will do to translate it into English.*

Tək is a quality which all things possess in their *own fashion, like 性 siəng "developmental nature" except that siəng comes from sky and cannot be altered, while tək, like a crop, is partly determined by the nature of the seed but also largely influenced by the cultivator's actions. In politics, it is the ability to influence others' behavior as contrasted to 力, the ability to compel others' behavior. More generally of humans' relation to their society, it is a blend of dogoodery, charisma, political influence, kinship status, reputation, mutual back-scratching, log-rolling and personal character that defies general translation but is seldom difficult to understand in specific context.*

The tək of humans affects not only other humans, but also the universe in general; in addition to humans other creatures, even inanimate objects, have tək that interacts with that of other things in ways that can be described by the mutual influences of the five elements and yin-yang. The workings-out of tək among humans can be understood in psychological terms that apply to humans in all societies, but in the larger sense one can only comprehend what a CC writer means by tək through a complex of culture-specific concepts that go back to the stone age, were developed and ramified in the Chün-chü and Chan-kao eras and further systematized during the Han dynasty.

說: 惠外得於人內得於己也 tək is outward getting from other people, inward getting from oneself.

准: 率性而行謂之道得其天性謂之德性失然 後貴仁道失然後貴義 If one acts in according to natural development, call it The Way; if one gets his Sky-given developmental nature, call it The Power. Only after natural development has slipped from control do we value human sympathy. Only after The Way has slipped from control do we value prescribed conduct.

釋: 德得也得事宜也 tək "influence" is tək "gain".
One knows the best way to react to a situation. [NB This is not a gloss; it is merely a pun. v under 事宜]

a. unspecified as to its nature

語: 天生萬物以地養之聖人成之功德參合而道
術生焉 Sky engenders the myriad things and uses earth to nourish them. Sages complete that process; their efficacy being verified, ways and techniques arise from that.

史: 周道之興自此始故詩人歌樂思其德 The rise of the way of Chou began from this. Thus the poets recalled in song and music what they owed him.

國: 夫目以處義足以踐德口以庇信耳以聽 名者也 Now the eyes are things for dwelling on rightness, the feet things for treading in goodness, the mouth a thing for guarding one's reliability and the ears things for paying attention to words.

史: 驕衍嗜有國者益淫侈不能尚德若大雅 整之於身施及黎庶矣 Tsou Yen observed that those who controlled states got more unbridled and extravagant, no longer able to make their character their highest consideration as in the Greater Elegantae, "Get it right in your own person, then apply it to the multitude." [I don't find this in the Mao Odes.]

漢: 盛德上隆和澤下洽 Your abundant charisma

漢: 何行而可以章先帝之洪業休德上參堯 舜下配三王朕之不敏不能遠德此子大夫之

We have lacked perspicacity and have not been able to extend Our moral influence to distant places—this is something all you gentlemen and officers have heard and seen. [Rivers of blood would flow in the effort to extend that 休德 "beneficent charisma".]

史: 群臣相與誦皇帝功德刻于金石以爲表 經 All the imperial officers recounted to each other the accomplishments and transformative power of the emperor and engraved them into stone and metal to be a sighting-post for going straight.

衡: 魯君無感驕之德 The ruler of Lu had not the attractive power to bestir a unicorn.

國: 吾何德之務而有是臣也 What have I been doing right in order to have such a servant?

史: 孟軻乃述唐虞三代之德是以所如者不
合 Mencius rather taught about the influence of Yao and Shun and the three dynasties, so wherever he went he failed to be appreciated.

b. inanimate

史: 天地剖剖以來五德轉移 Ever since sky and earth first separated, the five influences have rotated in alternation.

易: 陰陽合德而剛柔有體 When Yin and Yang joined forces, soft and hard acquired embodiment.

語: 功棄而德亡腐朽而枯傷 [These trees'] efficacy is wasted and their potential lost; they rot and wither away.

露: 雨布施而均其德 When the rain falls and gets on things, its benefit is uniform.

(1) human-inanimate

衡: 謂天譴告曾謂天德不若淳酒乎 If you say sky gives warnings, would you go so far as to say the influence of sky is less than that of undiluted wine?

准: 無爲爲之而合于道無[爲一]言言之而通
乎德 It contrives things by contriving nothing, so it harmonizes with the Way. It says things by saying nothing, so it penetrates to the Power.

淮: 昔者蒼頡作書而天雨粟鬼夜哭伯益作 井而龍登玄雲神棲昆侖命愈多而德愈薄矣
In ancient times, when Ts'ang Chieh invented writing, it rained grain and ghosts wailed at night. When Po Yi invented wells the dragons flew up to dark clouds and spirits moved away to K'un-lun. The more abilities they acquired the thinner became their intangible influence.

c. political

呂: 用武則以力勝用文則以德勝 Military victory is by force; political victory is by winning minds.

史: 有德則易以王無德則易以亡 If you have good will it is easy to become king by dint of that; if you lack good will it is easy to perish by dint of that.

(1) among peers

左: 君其修德而固宗子何城如之 Let YL strengthen your political position and firmly ensconce the juniors of your clan—how could a wall be stronger than that?

左: 吾乃今知周公之德與周之所以王也 Only now do I recognize the charisma of the Duke of Chou and the reason for Chou's assuming the kingship.

史: 發教封內而巴人致貢施德諸侯而八戎 來服 He taught the whole country, and the Pa sent tribute to him; he made all the barons obliged to him and the eight Jung came to submit.

左：不度德不量力不親親不徵辭不察有罪犯五不避而以伐人其喪師不亦宜乎 He did not estimate good will nor measure strength; he did not treat relatives as family; he did not demand an explanation nor did he inquire who was guilty. Having blundered into these five errors, in that condition he attacked someone else. No wonder his army was destroyed.

國：今趙孟相晉國以主諸侯之盟思長世之德歷遠年之數猶懼不終其身 Now, as premier of Chin, Chao Méng is to preside over the treaties of the barons, plan for increasing of political influence among contemporaries and calculate numbers for distant years, always fearful that he may not live to accomplish that.

國：其君在會步言視聽必皆無謫則可以知德矣 When at the meeting, its ruler's gait, speech, looking and listening must all be done impeccably for others to recognize what is owed to him.

國：夫敬德之格也 Now respectful behavior is the 'molding-frame' of good will.

孟：今天下地醜德齊莫能相尚 Now all nations have roughly equal area and similar status, so none can claim superiority over any other.

人：偏至之材以材自名兼材之人以德為目兼德之人更為美號 To men with limited talents we give the same name as that of their talent; to men of unlimited talent we take an appellation from the particular sort of resonant influence they have; to men of unlimited resonant influence we give an even more laudatory title.

(2) toward subordinates
左：霸王將德是以 Charisma is what a ruler acting as overlord must use as means.

史：禮樂所由起積德百年而後可興也 As to where ritual and music arise from, they can only be brought into action after a regime has built its moral influence for a century.

史：湯出見野張網四面祝曰自天下四方皆入吾網湯曰噫嘻之矣乃去其三面祝曰欲左左欲右不用命乃入吾網諸侯聞之曰湯德至矣及禽獸 Tang went out and saw the setting of nets to all four directions in the wilds. They prayed, "From everywhere in the world, all enter our nets." Tang said, "Hey! That gets all of them!" He then took down three sides and prayed, "If you want to go left, go left. If you want to go right, go right. If you are tired of life, enter our nets." The barons heard of it and said, "Tang's good will is perfect; it extends even to birds and beasts."

史：五殺大夫死秦國男女流涕童子不歌諸春者不相杵此五殺大夫之德也 When the five-ram official died, men and women in Ch'in shed tears, children didn't sing or chant, and people didn't pound with a pestle as if it were a time-beater. This is how he came to be regarded by the folk.

選：周之成康刑措不用德及鳥獸 Under the Completion and Tranquility kings of Chou, punishments were put in abeyance and not used and good will extended to wild creatures.

草：興至德之和睦 Bring about the social harmony of perfect good will.

論：道之以政齊之以刑民免而無恥道之以德齊之以禮有恥且格 If we guide the people by regulations and govern them by mutilating punishments, they will shamelessly weasel out of it. If we guide them by gaining their hearts and govern them by established custom, they will have a sense of shame and will be constrained.

漢：此所以神明不遺而聖賢不廢也故各當其世而立功德焉 This is how their intelligence was not lost nor their supreme competence wasted. Thus each responded to his era by getting things done and getting credit for that.

左：民不見德而唯戮是聞 The folk do not perceive any good will; it is only punishment that they hear of.

莊：非德也而可長久者天下無之 There is no such thing as one who is able to last a long time by any other means than strong popular support.

後：皇太后自在椒房有聰明母儀之德 Since HIM had dwelt in the dower house, she had been a good influence as a model of alert motherhood.

衡：德令 imperial order pardoning prisoner 史：王無重世之德於韓魏而有累世之怨焉 YM has not accumulated generations of good will with Hán and Wèi; rather, you have piled up generations of ill-will.

國：古之明王不失此三德者故能光有天下 The intelligent kings of old did not lose grasp of these three generators of good will; thus they were able to possess the whole world.

漢：雖堯舜禹湯文武象世廣德以為子孫基業無過二三十世者也 Even of those like Yao, Shun, Yü, Tang, Wên and Wu, who concentrated the broad political power of their entire generation so as to found a dynasty for their descendants, none made it last more than twenty or thirty generations.

後：當王莽居攝篡弑之際天下之士莫不競褒稱德美作符命以求容媚譚獨自守默然無言 At the time when Wang Mang, usurper and assassin, had seized control of the world, all of the officer class vied with each other to praise him and proclaim him worthy of their allegiance, inventing omens of destiny so as to ingratiate themselves; only Tan kept to himself, saying nothing. [德美 subj-nuc]

d. reputation
詩：德音孔[膠→]膠 His good reputation is very eminent.

孟：德之流行速於置郵而傳命 Reputation gets around faster than transmitting orders by pony express.

衡：非魚聞武王之德而入其舟鳥知周家當起集於王屋也 It is not because the fish, hearing of The Martial King's reputation, jumped into his boat, nor because the crow, recognizing that the house of Wen Wang was on the rise, roosted on his rooftop.

e. gratitude
淮：今世之為禮者恭敬而伎為義者布施而德 In our time, ritual is contrived by acting pious and deferential but being stubbornly unaccommodating, while propriety is turned into the dispensing of largesse in the expectation of a quid pro quo.

新：施行得理謂之德反德為怨 If there is logic in how one's largesse is carried out it is called deserving of gratitude; to invert deserving gratitude is to cause resentment.

詩：二三其德 He tries to please everyone.

國：以怨報德不仁 To return ill will for good will is inhumane.

論：以德報怨何如 What about returning good will for ill will?

史：遍報諸所嘗見德者 He fully repaid all those from whom he had had generous treatment.

國：是以小怨置大德也 This is to set aside a great debt of gratitude for a petty grievance.

國：王德狄人將以其女為后 The king was grateful to the Ti barbarian people, and was going to make one of their women his queen.

國：王一舉而棄七德 By choosing once YM discards seven kinds of good will.

左：穆公不忘舊德俾我惠公用能奉祀於晉 The Awesome Earl did not forget old debts of gratitude; he caused our Kind Marquess to be able to present the state sacrifices in Chin.

戰：人之有德於我也不可忘也吾有德於人也不可不忘也 When someone has given me cause for gratitude, that should not be forgotten. When I have given someone cause for gratitude, that should not be kept in mind.

國：吾聞事君者從其義不阿其惑感則誤民民誤失德是棄民也民之有君以治義也義以生利以豐民若之何其民之與處而棄之也必立太子 I have heard that one who serves a ruler adheres to what he does right and does not deviate in favor of his errors. If he errs he misleads the folk; if the folk are misled, their good will goes awry. Such is to discard the folk. The reason they have a ruler is to ensure things are done properly. Doing things properly is how to prosper, and prosperity is to enrich the folk. It is the folk among whom we live—how could we discard them? We must establish the heir-apparent.

f. it outranks 義, which outranks 力
淮：五帝貴德三王用義五霸任力 The five sovereigns valued charisma; the three kings used right action; the five overlords relied on force.

史：書曰恃德者昌恃力者亡 It is written that those who rely on good will flourish, and those who rely on force perish.

g. it is not always good

史：桀有亂德鼎遷於殷 Chieh reaped the reward of his unruliness and the cauldrons were transferred to Yin.

漢：漢武帝選將練兵約齋輕糧深入遠戍雖有克獲之功胡輒報之兵連禍結三十餘年中國罷耗匈奴亦創艾而天下稱武是為下策 The Martial Emperor of Han sent hand-picked generals and crack troops, lightly equipped and with slender rations, invading deeply, far beyond the border regions. Although he did accomplish much in the way of winning battles and taking captives, the Hsiung-nu retaliated immediately. War continued and disaster went on for more than thirty years. China was exhausted and impoverished, and the Hsiung-nu also took heavy casualties. Everyone said he was militant. This is an inferior strategy.

史: 董仲舒廣川人也以治春秋景景時為博士 Tung Chung-shu was a man of Kuang-ch'uan. On account of his mastery of the Ch'un-ch'iu he became Doctor of Letters in the reign of Ching Ti (156-140 BC).

衡: 董仲舒揚→揚子雲文之鳥獲也 Tung Chung-shu and Yang Hsiung were the Wu Huo of writing.

Under the Completion and Tranquility kings of Chou, punishments were put in abeyance and not used and good will extended to wild creatures and doctrine pervaded the four quarters. Nations from beyond the wilderness, Hsiao-shên, Pei-fa, Chü-sou and Ti-ch'iang came to submit. The stars did not deviate from their courses, the sun and moon were not eclipsed, mountain slopes never slid, valley streams were never blocked. Unicorns and phoenixes inhabited thickets near the capital; The Ho and the Luo sent forth diagrams and writings. Alas, what shall we do to reach this state? Now it has fallen to Us to uphold the ancestral temples. We rise early and strive; We retire late and ponder. We are as if crossing deep water still unsure of our landing. Is that not daunting? Is that not overwhelming? What is to be done so as to make obvious the grand aims and beneficent charisma of the former emperors and to connect to Yao and Shun in high antiquity and parallel the three kings in recent? That We have lacked perspicacity and have not been able to extend Our moral influence to distant places—this is something all you gentlemen and officers have heard and seen. The most capable are clear-sighted about the entirety of royal affairs ancient and modern. They will receive commissions to make close inquiry, and will all reply in writing, writing on rolls of bamboo strips which We will examine in person." It was then that Tung Chung-shu, Kung-sun

Hung and their associates came to prominence from among them.

The compound walls and public buildings and hostels were decorated with golden valuables, brighter than the three luminaries. The people were all three fathoms tall and wore feather garments. There were nine places like this. When he reached the rearmost place he got hungry. A tall man pointed to a cypress in the courtyard. It was nearly hundred spans around. Below it was a goat. He bade him kneel and grasp the goat's beard. He extracted a pearl, and the tall man took it. He took the second one, too. The last one he held out to him and bade him eat. It cured his hunger. Then he asked to have the names of the nine places pointed out to him, and wanted to visit them. The reply was, "You may not stay. When you return, ask Chang Hua. He should know." So he went back. He emerged in Chiao-chou. When he returned to Loyang he asked Chang Hua. "The immortal at the nine dwelling sites is called the official of the nine hostels. The goat I take to be a magic dragon. When he finally gave him audience, he seated him in the lower part of the hall and gave him servants' rations. After that, he frequently berated him, saying, “With your talent, you have yet brought yourself to this state of distress and disgrace. It doesn't bother me that I can't confer wealth and honor on you just by saying the word, since you are not worthy to receive that.”

史：張儀之來也自以爲故人求益反見辱忿念諸侯莫可事獨秦能苦趙乃遂入秦 When Chang Yi first arrived he considered himself an old comrade and sought to improve his situation from it but was on the contrary insulted. Angered, he considered that, none of the barons being suitable for him to take service with, only Ch'in was capable of making trouble for Chao, and so he went to Ch'in.

史：蘇秦已而告其舍人曰張儀天下賢士吾殆弗如也今吾幸先用而能用秦柄者獨張儀然貧無因以進可耳吾恐其樂小利而不遂故召辱之以激其意子爲我陰奉之 Su Ch'in afterward told the other residents, “Chang Yi is the most capable officer in the world; I fear I am not his equal. Now I have had the luck to be employed first, but as someone able to take Ch'in by the handle, only Chang Yi would do. But he is poor, and lacks support for his advancement. I feared he would be happy with petty gains and would go no further, and so summoned him and humiliated him so as to arouse his ambition. Support him secretly for me.”

史：乃言趙王發金幣車馬使人隨張儀與同宿舍稍稍近就之奉以車馬金錢所欲用爲取給而弗告張儀遂得以見秦惠王惠王以爲客卿與謀伐諸侯 Then he spoke to the king of Chao about supplying gold, cloth, horses and chariots to send someone to follow Chang Yi secretly, lodge in the same hostel as him, gradually approach and get close to him, offering the chariots, horses and money. Whatever he needed he got it supplied but told no one about that. By that means Chang Yi was enabled to proceed to audience with the king of Chao. The Benevolent King made him a visiting minister and plotted against the other barons with him.

史：蘇秦之舍人乃辭去張儀曰賴子得顯方且報德何故去也舍人曰臣非知君知君乃蘇君蘇君憂秦伐趙敗從約以爲非君莫能得秦柄故感怒君使臣陰奉給君資盡蘇君之計謀今君已用請歸報 The man from Su Ch'in's hostelry then took his leave. Chang Yi said, “I have become eminent through reliance on you. Now I am about to repay your kindness. Why are you leaving?” His housemate said, “I was not I who took your true measure. That was Su Ch'in. Su was concerned that Ch'in might attack Chao, breaking up the vertical pact. He assumed no one but you could get a handle on Ch'in. Thus he moved you to anger and had me secretly provide you with funds, so as to keep his plan intact. Now you have got office. I want to return and report.”

蘇君之時儀何敢言且蘇君在儀(甯→)庸渠能乎 Chang Yi said, “Oh, dear! This is the sort of thing I was trained for, yet it escaped me entirely. Now it is obvious that I am not a match for Su. Also, while still new in my post, how would I be able to plot against Chao? What would I dare say when the hour belongs to Su? While Su is alive, what will I be able to do?”

史：張儀既相秦爲文撤告楚相曰始吾從若飲我不盜而璧若答我若善守汝國我顧且盜而城 After Chang Yi became premier of Ch'in, he wrote a message-board warning the premier of Ch'ü: “At first, when I was at a drinking party of yours, I did not steal your jade circlet. You had me beaten. Guard your state well, you! I mean to rob you of your fortresses.”

史：苴蜀相攻擊各來告急於秦秦惠王欲發兵以伐蜀以爲道險狹難至而韓又來侵秦秦惠王欲先伐韓後伐蜀恐不利欲先伐蜀恐韓襲秦之敝猶豫未能決 Pa and Shu attacked each other and both reported their emergency to Ch'in. The Benevolent King of Ch'in wanted to send a force to attack Shu, but believed that it would be hard to reach, the road being narrow and constricted, and also that Hán would come and attack Ch'in. The king feared that if he first attacked Hán it would not work out to his benefit, while if he attacked Shu first, he feared that Hán would take advantage of Ch'in's resources being stretched. He could not resolve his dilemma.

史：司馬錯與張儀爭論於惠王之前司馬錯欲伐蜀張儀曰不如伐韓王曰請聞其說 Szü-ma Ts'o debated Chang Yi in the presence of the Benevolent King of Ch'in. Szü-ma Ts'o wanted to attack Shu. Chang Yi said it would be better to attack Hán. The king said, “Let me hear your proposals.”

史：儀曰親魏善楚下兵三川塞什谷之口當屯留之道魏絕南陽楚臨南鄭秦攻新城宜陽以臨二周之郊誅周王之罪侵楚魏之地周自知不能救九鼎寶器必出據九鼎案圖籍挾天子以令於天下天下莫敢不聽此王業也 Yi said, “Ally with Wei and befriend Ch'ü. Send forces down to the three rivers. Close the entrances to the ?ten valleys. Block the Tunliu road. Wei will cut off Nanyang and Ch'ü will menace Nancheng. Ch'in will attack Hsin-ch'eng and Yi-yang to menace the outskirts of the two Chou. Demand restitution for the transgressions of the Chou king and invade territory of Wei and Ch'ü. When Chou sees that they cannot rescue it [不 r pueat], the cauldrons and treasures will emerge. To lay our hands on the cauldrons, run our fingers down the tax roll maps, seize the emperor and order the whole world about, no one in the world daring to disobey us—this is the path to kingship.

史：今夫蜀西僻之國而戎翟之倫也敝兵勞眾不足以成名得其地不足以爲利臣聞爭名者於朝爭利者於市今三川周室天下之朝市也而王不爭焉顧爭於戎翟去王業遠矣 Now this Shu is a western frontier state of the same type as the Jung and the Ti. If we wear out our weapons and exhaust our people, there's no fame to be had in it; if we get their land, there's no profit to be had in it. I have heard that those who compete for reputation do it in the court; those who compete for profit do it in the market. In this case the three rivers and the Chou household are court and market of the whole world, yet YM does not compete there. You turn away and compete among barbarians. That is far indeed from the path to kingship.

史：司馬錯曰不然臣聞之欲富國者務廣其地欲彊兵者務富其民欲王者務博其德三資者備而王隨之矣今王地小民貧故臣願先從事於易夫蜀西僻之國也而戎翟之長也有桀紂之亂以秦攻之譬如使豺狼逐群羊得其地足以廣國取其財足以富民繕兵不傷眾而彼已服焉拔一國而天下不以爲暴利盡西海而天下不以爲貪是我一舉而名實附也而又有禁暴止亂之名 Szu-ma Ts'o said, "Not so. I have heard that one who wants to enrich his state must enlarge his territory, one who wants to strengthen his arms must enrich his people, and one who would be king must give everyone some reason to support him. If all three resources are present kingship will follow from that. Now YM's territory is small and the people poor, so I would like to apply ourselves first to what is easy. This Shu is a western frontier state, but it is the senior of the Jung and Ti tribes, and it has chaos worthy of Chieh and Ch'ou. For Ch'in to attack it would be like letting wolves at a flock of sheep. Getting their land will suffice to enlarge our state; getting their assets will be enough to enrich our people and refurbish our weapons. They will surrender before we have sustained many casualties. We take an entire nation and no one considers it aggression. We make all the western wilderness pay off for us, and no one considers us greedy. This is for use to acquire both reputation and reality in one undertaking and also to get the reputation of having put down violence and stopped chaos.

史：今攻韓劫天子惡名也而未必利也又有不義之名而攻天下所不欲危矣臣請謁其故周天下之宗室也齊韓之與國也周自知失九鼎韓自知亡三川將二國并力合謀以因乎齊趙而求解乎楚魏以鼎與楚以地與魏王弗能止也此臣之所謂危也不如伐蜀完 "On the other hand attacking H'an and bullying the emperor will get us a bad reputation and yet is not sure to be profitable. We will have the reputation of doing what we shouldn't, and will have attacked a state whom no one in the world wishes to put in danger. Shall I set forth the reasons? Chou is the ruling household of the world and the ally of Ch'i and Han. If Chou realizes of its own accord that it is going to lose the nine cauldrons, and Han realizes of its own accord that it is going to lose Three Rivers, they will take their two separate states and merge their forces and coordinate their plans, and will rely on Ch'i and Chao while begging for rescue from Ch'u and Wei. If they give the cauldrons to Ch'u and land to Wei, YM will not be able to prevent that. That is what I call peril, not like the self-sufficiency of attacking Shu."

史：惠王曰善寡人請聽子卒起兵伐蜀十月取之遂定蜀貶蜀王更號爲侯而使陳莊相蜀蜀既屬秦秦以益彊富厚輕諸侯 The Benevolent King said, "Good. We will follow your advice if We may." Ultimately they mobilized to attack Shu, taking it in the tenth month. They then stabilized it, demoted the king to the rank of marquess, and sent Ch'ên Chuang to be its premier. After Shu had been annexed to Ch'in, Ch'in thereby became stronger and its wealth increased, and they began to take the other barons lightly.

史：秦惠王十年使公子華與張儀圍蒲陽降之儀因言秦復與魏而使公子繇質於魏儀因

說魏王曰秦王之遇魏甚厚魏不可以無禮魏因入上郡少梁謝秦惠王 In the tenth year of the Benevolent King of Ch'in he sent Kung-tzu Hua and Chang Yi to besiege P'u-yang. They reduced it. Yi then suggested returning it to Wei and sending ruler son Yao as hostage to Wei. Yi followed that by explaining to the king of Wei that Ch'in had treated Wei with great generosity. Wei had no reason not to observe protocol. Wei then yielded Shang commandery and Shao-liang to express gratitude to the Benevolent King. 史：惠王乃以張儀爲相更名少梁曰夏陽儀相秦四歲立惠王爲王居一歲爲秦將取陝築上郡塞其後二年使與齊楚之相會齧桑 The Benevolent King then made Chang Yi premier, and changed the name of Shao-liang to Hsia-yang. When Yi had served Ch'in as premier for four years he elevated the title of its ruler to "king". A year later he became general of Ch'in and captured Shan. He built a barrier at Shang commandery. Two years after that he was dispatched to take part in the meeting between Ch'i and Ch'u at Nieh-sang.

史：東還而免相相魏以爲秦欲令魏先事秦而諸侯效之魏王不肯聽儀秦王怒伐取魏之曲沃平周復陰厚[*]張儀益甚 He resigned his premiership when he returned east and acted as premier of Wei on behalf of Ch'in, wanting to get Wei to serve Ch'in first so the other barons would follow suit. The king of Wei was unwilling to heed Yi. The king of Ch'in was angered. He attacked and captured Ch'ü-wo and P'ing-chou from Wei. He continued to support Chang Yi in secret even more lavishly. [Some word meaning "support" or "serve" has dropped out here.]

史：張儀慚無以歸報留魏四歲而魏襄王卒哀王立張儀復說哀王哀王不聽於是張儀陰令秦伐魏魏與秦戰敗明年齊又來敗魏於觀津秦復欲攻魏先敗韓申差軍斬首八萬諸侯震恐 Chang Yi was embarrassed; he had nothing to return and report. When he had stayed in Wei four years, the Prospering King of Wei died and the Lamented King succeeded him. Chang Yi resumed his proposals to the Lamented King; the Lamented King paid him no heed. At that, Chang Yi secretly got Ch'in to attack Wei. Wei fought Ch'in and was defeated. The next year, Ch'i also came and defeated Wei at Kuan-chin. Wanting to defeat Wei again, Ch'in first defeated general Shen Ch'ai of H'an, taking 80,000 heads. All the barons trembled in fear.

史：而張儀復說魏王曰魏地方不至千里卒不過三十萬地四平諸侯四通輻湊無名山大川之限從鄭至梁二百餘里車馳人走不待力而至梁南與楚境西與韓境北與趙境東與齊境卒成四方守亭鄣者不下十萬梁之地勢固戰場也梁南與楚而不與齊則齊攻其東東與齊而不與趙則趙攻其北不合於韓則韓攻其西不親於楚則楚攻其南此所謂四分五裂之道也 Chang Yi then further said to the king of Wei, "The territory of Wei is not even a thousand square li; its manpower does not exceed 300,000. Its land is level on all sides, other fiefs connected to it on all sides, converging like spokes in a wheel. It has no barriers of famous mountains or great rivers. From Ch'êng to Liang is a bit over two hundred li. Chariots galloping, men running, need no exertion to get there. Liang shares a border with Ch'u on the south, with H'an on the west, with Chao on the north and with Ch'i on the east. To guard all four sides would take no fewer than 100,000 soldiers manning guardposts. The terrain of Liang is definitely that of a battleground. If Liang allies itself with Ch'u on the south but not with Ch'i then Ch'i will attack its east. Ally with Ch'i on the east but not with Chao then Chao will attack its north. If it does not get along with H'an then H'an will attack its west. If it does not stay close to Ch'u then Ch'u will attack its south. This is what I call a way that goes four or five directions all at once."

史：且夫諸侯之爲從者將以安社稷尊主彊兵顯名也今從者一天下約爲昆弟[刑→]割白馬以盟涇水之上以相堅也而親昆弟同父母尚有爭錢財而欲恃詐僞反覆蘇秦之餘謀其不可成亦明矣 Add to that that the barons' motive for making a vertical alliance is to secure their states, make their rulers respected, strengthen their arms and magnify their reputations. Now the verticalizers have united the world, binding themselves to be as brothers, making their treaty with the sacrifice of a white horse on the bank of the Huan river, so as to strengthen each other. But blood brothers with the same mother and father may still quarrel over money and goods; they may want to rely on trickery to overturn the remaining plans of Su Ch'in. Clearly they cannot be made to work.

史：大王不事秦秦下兵攻河外據卷衍[燕+]酸棗劫衛取陽晉則趙不南趙不南而梁不北梁不北則從道絕從道絕則大王之國欲毋危不可得也秦[折→]折韓而攻梁韓怯於秦秦韓爲一梁之亡可立而須也此臣之所爲大王患也 If YGM does not give allegiance to Ch'in, Ch'in will send down a force to attack He-wai, taking Ch'üan and Yen and Suan-tso. If Ch'in holds off H'an while attacking Liang then H'an will be intimidated by Ch'in. If Ch'in and H'an can be brought into alignment then the demise of Liang can be expected immediately. This is what troubles me on YGM's behalf.

史：爲大王計莫如事秦事秦則楚韓必不敢動無楚韓之患則大王高枕而臥國必無憂矣 Calculating for YGM's benefit, the best thing would be to give allegiance to Ch'in. If you do that, Ch'u and H'an will not dare to stir. With no worries from Ch'u and H'an YGM will have a high pillow to sleep on and the state will be out of trouble.

史：且夫秦之所欲弱者莫如楚而能弱楚者莫如梁楚雖有富大之名而實空虛其卒雖多然而輕走易北不能堅戰 Add to that that the one Ch'in most wants to weaken is Ch'u, and that the one most able to weaken Ch'u is Wei. Though Ch'u has a reputation for wealth and size, it is actually a hollow one. Its troops may be numerous but they desert as if it meant little and retreat as if it were no big thing. They cannot be resolute in battle.

史：悉梁之兵南面而伐楚勝之必矣割楚而益梁虧楚而適秦[嫁→]假禍安國此善事也大王不聽臣秦下甲士而東伐雖欲事秦不可得矣 Concentrate the force of Wei, point it south to attack Ch'u, and their victory over them will become assured. To diminish Ch'u and enlarge Liang, to damage Ch'u and become the equal of Ch'in, to ride on the calamities of others to the securing of one's own state—this is no mean accomplishment. If YGM ignores my advice, Ch'in will send down armed men to attack eastward; then even if you wanted to submit to them, that could no longer be done.

史：且夫從人多奮辭而少可信說一諸侯而成封侯是故天下之游談士莫不日夜搯腕瞋目切齒以言從之便以說人主人主賢其辯而牽其說豈得無眩哉臣聞之積羽沈舟群輕折軸眾口鑠金積毀銷骨故願大王審定計議且賜骸骨辟魏 Another thing is that the “vertical men” say many exciting things that are not always reliable. They discourse on uniting the barons with the aim of having themselves ennobled. Thus itinerant rhetors the world over all take you by the wrist and glare and grit their teeth, promoting the advantages of vertical alliance to rulers. If a ruler takes their glibness to be real ability and lets himself be led by their persuasion, how could he not be dazzled? I have heard it said that enough feathers can sink a boat, enough light stuff can break an axle, many mouths melt metal and accumulated slander can grind bones. I hope YGM will sort out in precise detail who says what in these policy discussions, so that my bones may not be denied eventual burial in Wei.

史：哀王於是乃倍從約而因儀請成於秦張儀歸復相秦三歲而魏復背秦為從秦攻魏取曲沃明年魏復事秦 The Lamented King thereupon repudiated the treaty of vertical alliance and depended on Yi to seek to make up with Ch'in. Chang Yi returned to Ch'in and resumed the post of premier. Three years later Wei once again turned against Ch'in and made a vertical alliance. Ch'in attacked Wei and took Ch'ü-wo. The next year Wei again gave allegiance to Ch'in.

史：秦欲伐齊齊楚從親於是張儀往相楚楚懷王聞張儀來虛上舍而自館之曰此僻陋之國子何以教之儀說楚王曰大王誠能聽臣閉關絕約於齊臣請獻商於之地六百里使秦女[得]為大王箕帚之妾秦楚娶婦嫁女長為兄弟之國此北弱齊而西益[秦→]楚也計無便此者楚王大說而許之 Ch'in wanted to attack Ch'i. Ch'i and Ch'ü had a vertical alliance. Then Chang Yi went to Ch'ü as minister. When the Remembered King of Ch'ü heard that Chang Yi was to visit, he had the top-grade hostelry emptied and himself took up residence there. He said, “In this poor out-of-the-way state, what would you teach us?” Yi made this proposal to the king of Ch'ü: “If YGM is genuinely able to take my advice to close the borders to Ch'i and break the treaty, I would present six hundred li of land in Shang-Wu and I would send women from Ch'in to be serving-maids to YGM. Ch'in and Ch'ü would marry each other's daughters and would be brother states for a long time. This would weaken Ch'i to the north and aggrandize Ch'ü to the west. No other reckoning would be so beneficial as this.” The king of Ch'ü was very pleased and gave permission.

史：群臣皆賀陳軫獨弔之楚王怒曰寡人不興師發兵得六百里地群臣皆賀子獨弔何也陳軫對曰不然以臣觀之商於之地不可得而齊秦合齊秦合則患必至矣楚王曰有說乎 All the ministers expressed satisfaction; only Ch'en Chên expressed grief. The king of Ch'ü said angrily, “We have gained six hundred li of land without raising a strike force or issuing weapons. All the ministers expressed satisfaction; only you expressed grief. Why is that?” Chên Chên replied, “Not so. From my viewpoint the land of Shang-Wu is unobtainable, but Ch'i and Ch'in will be reconciled, to our inevitable suffering.” The king of Ch'ü said, “Can you explain that?” 史：陳軫對曰夫秦之所以重楚者以其有齊也今閉關絕約於齊則楚孤 Chên Chên said, “The reason Ch'in considers Ch'ü important is the adherence of Ch'i to Ch'ü. Now if you close the borders to Ch'i and break the treaty Ch'ü will be isolated.” 史：秦奚貪夫孤國而與之商於之地六百里張儀至秦必負王是北絕齊交西生患於秦也而兩國之兵必俱至善為王計者陰合而陽絕於齊使人隨張儀苟與吾地絕齊未晚也不與吾地陰合謀計也 What could Ch'in want from an isolated state so much as to give six hundred li of Shang-wu land for it? When Chang Yi gets to Ch'in he will surely double-cross YM; that will mean, we having cut off relations with Ch'i on the north and made trouble for ourselves with Ch'in on the west, that the arms of both states will surely be at us. On YM's behalf a skilful plan would be to ostensibly break with Ch'i while secretly adhering to them. Send someone to follow Chang Yi. Should it turn out that he gives us the land, then would not be too late to break with Ch'i. 史：楚王曰願陳子閉口毋復言以待寡人得地乃以相印授張儀厚賂之於是遂閉關絕約於齊使一將軍隨張儀 The king of Ch'ü said, “I would rather Mr. Chên keep his mouth shut and not speak of it again until We have got the land.” Then he presented Chang Yi with a minister's seal and rewarded him lavishly. With that they went ahead and closed the borders to Ch'i and broke the treaty; he sent one general to follow Chang Yi.

史：張儀至秦詳失綏墮車不朝三月楚王聞之曰儀以寡人絕齊未甚邪乃使勇士至宋借宋之符北罵齊王齊王大怒折節而下秦 When he returned to Ch'in, Chang Yi pretended to have fallen from his carriage when the pull-strap slipped from his grasp. He stayed away from court for three months. The king of Ch'ü heard of it and said, “Does Yi think I haven't broken with Ch'i thoroughly enough?” Then he sent a brave officer to Sung to get temporary credentials from them and then go north and revile the king of Ch'i. The king of Ch'i got very angry and tore up the treaty and subordinated himself to Ch'in.

史：秦齊之交合張儀乃朝謂楚使者曰臣有奉邑六里願以獻大王左右楚使者曰臣受令於王以商於之地六百里不聞六里 With the rapprochement of Ch'in and Ch'i, Chang Yi went to court. He said to the Ch'ü emissary, “I have a tributary town of six li; I wish to present it to the servants of your great king.” The Ch'ü emissary said, “I received my orders from the king in terms of six hundred li of land at Shang-wu. I heard nothing of six li.”

史：還報楚王楚王大怒發兵而攻秦陳軫曰軫可發口言乎攻之不如割地反以賂秦與之并兵而攻齊是我出地於秦取償於齊也王國尚可存 He returned and reported to the king of Ch'ü, who got very angry and issued arms to attack Ch'in. Chên Chên said, “Have I permission to speak now? Better to turn around and cede land as a bribe to Ch'in and combine forces with them in an attack on Ch'i.

That would be for us to lose territory to Ch'in and recoup its equivalent from Ch'i. The kingdom could still be preserved.”

史：楚王不聽卒發兵而使將軍屈匄擊秦秦齊共攻楚斬首八萬殺屈匄遂取丹陽漢中之地楚又復益發兵而襲秦至藍田大戰楚大敗於是楚割兩城以與秦 The king paid no attention. He carried out the mobilization and send general Ch'ü Kai to strike at Ch'in. Ch'in and Ch'i attacked Ch'ü together, cut of 80,000 heads and killed general Ch'ü Kai. They went on to seize territory in Tanyang and Hanchung. Ch'ü sent out even more troops yet again to invade Ch'in. They got as far as Lan-tien and fought a battle. Ch'ü was hugely defeated. Then Ch'ü ceded two cities to make peace with Ch'in.

史：秦要楚欲得黔中地欲以武關外易之楚王曰不願易地願得張儀而獻黔中地秦王欲遣之口弗忍言張儀乃請行惠王曰彼楚王怒子之負以商於之地是且甘心於子 Ch'in made demands of Ch'ü that they wanted to get Ch'ien-chung, exchanging for it what lay beyond the Wu-kuan pass. The king of Ch'ü said, “I don't want to exchange land. I want to get Chang Yi, and I'll give you Ch'ien-chung for him. The king of Ch'in wanted to send him but could not bring himself to utter the words. So Chang Yi asked to be allowed to go. The Benevolent King said, “That king of Ch'ü is angry at your having double-crossed him about the land at Shang-wu. He wants to take out his anger on you.”

史：張儀曰秦彊楚弱臣善斬尚尚得事楚夫人鄭袖所言皆從且臣奉王之節使楚楚何敢加誅假令誅臣而為秦得黔中之地臣之上願[也] Chang Yi said, “Ch'in is strong, Ch'ü weak. I am on good terms with Chin Shang. He can get things done by Chêng Hsiu. The king always follows what she says. Furthermore, I will go as emissary to Ch'ü with YM's accreditation. How would they dare apply punishment? Supposing I can get the territory of Ch'ien-chung for Ch'in, I could wish for nothing more than that even if they did punish me.”

史：遂使楚[楚懷王至則→]至懷王不見因而囚張儀將殺之 He then went as emissary to Ch'ü. When he arrived the king did not give him audience but proceeded to imprison him, intending to kill him. 史：斬尚謂鄭袖曰子亦知子之賤於王乎鄭袖曰何也斬尚曰秦王甚愛張儀而[不→]必欲出之今將以上庸之地六縣賂楚美人聘楚以宮中善歌謳者為媵楚王重地尊秦秦女必貴而夫人斥矣不若為言而出之 Chin Shang said to Chêng Hsiu, “Do you also see that you are of little regard to the king?” Chêng Hsiu said, “What?” Chin Shang said, “The king of Ch'in is extremely solicitous of Chang Yi and will surely want to get him released. To this end, he will bribe Ch'ü with six counties of the territory of Shang-yung and a beautiful woman to wife, with the best singers in the palace to go with her. The king of Ch'ü considers territory very important and respects Ch'in. The women from Ch'in will surely be ranked high and you will be pushed aside as wife. You'd best think of something to say that will get him out.”

毋為秦所魚肉也懷王後悔赦張儀厚禮之如故 Then Chêng Hsiu constantly spoke to the Remembered King, saying, "Every servant acts in the interest of his ruler. In this case, Ch'in sent Chang Yi as envoy before the territory had been transferred. That was how extremely important he considers YM. If you kill Chang Yi never having given him the proper ceremonies, Ch'in will surely attack Ch'ü in a rage. I would like to move, with all my children, to Chiang-nan, so as to prevent our being treated as mere beasts by Ch'in. The Remembered King had second thoughts. He released Chang Yi and accorded him lavish ceremony as before.

史：張儀既出未去聞蘇秦死乃說楚王曰秦地半天下兵敵四國被險帶河四塞以為固虎賁之士百餘萬車千乘騎萬匹積粟如丘山法令既明士卒安難樂死 When Chang Yi had got out but before he left, he heard that Su Ch'in had died. He then made this proposal to the king of Ch'ü: "The territory of Ch'in takes up half the world; its arms are a match for all surrounding nations; it is cloaked with rugged land and girded with the Ho; it is secured by barriers all around. Their shock troops number over a million, their chariots a thousand, cavalry ten thousand, and their stored grain is like hills and mountains. Their laws are entirely clear. Their officers and men are untroubled by difficulty and die happily.

史：主明以嚴將智以武雖無出甲席卷常山之險必折天下之脊天下有後服者先亡 The ruler is clear-sighted and stern; the generals are intelligent and warminded. Even without sending forth armored soldiers, they would roll up the difficult terrain of Ch'angshan like a mat. They would surely break the back of the world, and if some in the world are late to submit, they will be the first to perish.

史：且夫為從者無以異於驅群羊而攻猛虎虎之與羊不格明矣今王不與猛虎而與群羊臣竊以為大王之計過也 Besides that, there is no way to distinguish making a vertical alliance from leading a flock of sheep to attack a fierce tiger. It is clear that tigers overmatch sheep. Now YM does not ally with fierce tigers but with a flock of sheep. YS takes the liberty of considering YM's plan to be mistaken.

史：凡天下疆國非秦而楚非楚而秦兩國交爭其勢不兩立大王不與秦秦下甲據宜陽韓之上地不通下河東取成皋韓必入臣梁則從風而動秦攻楚之西韓梁攻其北社稷安得毋危 The strongest states in the world, if not Ch'in then Ch'ü, or if not Ch'ü then Ch'in, cannot both win in a struggle. If YGM does not join Ch'in, they will send armored soldiers to take Yi-yang; Hân's upper territory will be cut off. They will descend east of the Ho and take Chêng-ko. Hân will surely enter their service. Then Liang will go whichever way the wind blows. If Ch'in attacks the west of Ch'ü and Hân and Liang attack its north, how could the nation avoid danger?

史：且夫從者聚群弱而攻至彊不料敵而輕戰國貧而數舉兵危亡之術也臣聞之兵不如者勿與挑戰粟不如者勿與持久 Furthermore, the verticalizers collect a group of the weak to attack the supremely strong. They don't measure the enemy but think lightly of battle. To mobilize repeatedly when the country is poor is a strategy of peril and doom. I have heard a saying, 'Don't pick fights with those whose military force is stronger; don't vie to outlast those whose stores are more than yours.

史：夫從人飾辯虛辭高主之節言其利不言其害卒有秦禍無及為[已→]矣是故願大王之孰計之 Those vertical men have polished arguments and empty phrases, exalting their ruler's reasoning and speaking only of its benefits, not of its harm. When, at the last, calamity comes to you from Ch'in, desperate measures will do nothing. Thus I would like YGM to make a detailed plan for it.

史：秦西有巴蜀大船積粟起於汶山浮江已下至楚三千餘里舫船載卒一舫載五十人與三月之食下水而浮一日行三百餘里 Ch'in has, in the west, Pa and Shu. If a large boat is loaded with grain and launched from Min Mountain onto the Yangtze, it can float down to Ch'ü, over three thousand li away. If they raft it with another boat to carry troops, each raft would carry fifty men with food for three months. If they float down the river they will cover over three hundred li in a day.

史：里數雖多然而不費牛馬之力不至十日而距干關干關驚則從境以東盡城守矣黔中巫郡非王之有 The mileage may be great, but in less than ten days without depleting the strength of oxen and horses they will come up against the defensive passes. With the defensive passes alerted, all east of the border will go into seige defense. Ch'ien-chung and Wu commandery will be out of YM's control.

史：秦舉甲出武關南面而伐則北地絕秦兵之攻楚也危難在三月之內而楚待諸侯之救在半歲之外此其勢不相及也夫[待→]恃弱國之救忘彊秦之禍此臣所以為大王患也 If Ch'in mobilizes and comes out through the Wu pass and attacks facing south then your northern territories will be cut off. If Ch'in attacks Ch'ü, you will be dangerously pressed within three months, but waiting for help from the other barons will take over half a year. These tactical situations do not match. A reason I am troubled for YGM is that you rely on weak states and forget the strength of Ch'in.

史：大王嘗與吳人戰五戰而三勝陣卒盡矣備守新城存民苦矣臣聞功大者易危而民敵者怨上夫守易危之功而逆彊秦之心臣竊為大王危之 YGM has fought five battles with Wu, winning three. Your formations and troops were utterly depleted. You only managed to hold on to Hsin-ch'êng, and the surviving populace suffered. I have heard that those who have great success are easily imperiled, and that people who are exhausted resent their superiors. To hold to an accomplishment that is easily imperiled while opposing the will of powerful Ch'in—on YGM's behalf I humbly call that dangerous.

史：且夫秦之所以不出兵函谷十五年以攻齊趙者陰謀有合天下之心 Furthermore, the reason that Ch'in has not sent troops out beyond the Han pass to attack Ch'i and Chao for fifteen years is that they have been secretly planning; they have a mind to unite the world.

史：楚嘗與秦構難戰於漢中楚人不勝列侯執珪死者七十餘人遂亡漢中楚王大怒興兵襲秦戰於藍田此所謂兩虎相搏者也夫秦楚相敵而韓魏以全制其後計無危於此者矣願大王孰計之 Ch'ü has gone to war with Ch'in before, at Han-chung. Victory did not go to Ch'ü. More than seventy hereditary nobles and scepter bearers died. The result was losing Han-chung. The king of Ch'ü was enraged. He called up troops and invaded Ch'in, doing battle at Lan-t'ien. This is what I call a pair of tigers attacking each other. For Ch'in and Ch'ü to weaken each other while Hân and Wei remain intact in control of their rear—no plan is more dangerous than that. I would like YGM to plan in complete detail for that.

史：秦下甲攻衛陽晉必大關天下之匈 If Ch'in sends down armored troops to attack Chin-yang in Wei, they will punch a big hole in the chest of the world. 史：大王悉起兵以攻宋不至數月而宋可舉舉宋而東指則泗上十二諸侯盡王之有也 If YGM raises all your forces to attack Sung, it could be taken in less than a few months. If you take Sung and aim north then the twelve barons above the Szü will all belong to YGM.

史：凡天下而以信約從親相堅者蘇秦封武安君相燕即陰與燕王謀伐破齊而分其地乃詳有罪出走入齊齊王因受而相之居二年而覺齊王大怒車裂蘇秦於市夫以一詐僞之蘇秦而欲經營天下混一諸侯其不可成亦明矣 Su Ch'in, who united the world and made them mutually strong by relying on a firm treaty of vertical alliance, was enfeoffed as Lord Military Security. When he became premier to Yen then he secretly plotted with the king of Yen to attack and smash Ch'i and divide that territory. Then he pretended to have committed some offence and fled. He went to Ch'i, whose king received him and made him premier. Two years later the truth came out. The king of Ch'i was enraged and had Su Ch'in pulled apart by wagons in the marketplace. It has now surely become clear that controlling the world and amalgamating the barons by employing the totally false and deceptive Su Ch'in could not have been done.

史：今秦與楚接壤壤界固形親之國也 Reality is that Ch'in and Ch'ü are definitely closely related states, since they share borders and abut boundaries. 史：大王誠能聽臣臣請使秦太子入質於楚楚太子入質於秦請以秦女為大王箕帚之妾效萬室之都以為湯沐之邑長為昆弟之國終身無相攻伐臣以為計無便於此者 If YGM is genuinely able to follow my advice, I want permission to have the heir-apparent of Ch'in come to Ch'ü to act as hostage and the heir-apparent of Ch'ü to go to Ch'in to act as hostage, to send women from Ch'in to be YGM's housemaids, and to turn over a city of ten thousand households to provide sustenance. We will grow into brother-nations and never attack one another. I take it that there is no plan more advantageous than this.

史：於是楚王已得張儀而重出黔中地與秦欲許之屈原曰前大王見欺於張儀張儀至臣以為大王烹之今縱弗忍殺之又聽其邪說不可懷王曰許儀而得黔中美利也後而倍之不可故卒許張儀與秦親 Having got Chang Yi, the king of Ch'ü, thinking it a serious thing to let go Ch'ien-chung as a gift to Ch'in, wanted to assent to his proposal. Ch'ü Yüan said, "In the past YGM has been cheated by Chang Yi. When he got here, I assumed YGM would boil him. Now even assuming you cannot bear to kill him, to listen to his perverted suggestions is just not acceptable." The Remembered King said, "To assent to Yi and get Ch'ien-chung is a good bargain. To repudiate it later would not do." So he wound up accepting Chang Yi's proposal to ally with Ch'in.

史：張儀去楚因遂之韓說韓王曰韓地險惡山居五穀所生非菽而麥民之食大抵[飯菽→]菽飯糞羹一歲[不→]而收收不糶糟糠地不過九百里無二歲之食 When Chang Yi left Ch'u he proceeded to Hán. His proposal to the king of Hán said this: "The land of Hán is hilly and poor; you dwell among mountains. Of the five grains, only beans and barley grow there. In the people's diet, for the most part they feed on beans and broth made of bean leaves. You collect taxes of the entire harvest, and are not satisfied till you have taken even dregs and chaff. Your land does not exceed nine hundred li. You lack the food of two harvests.

史：料大王之卒悉之不過三十萬而廩徒負養在其中矣除守微亭郭塞見卒不過二十萬而已矣 Counting up YGM's troops, the total doesn't exceed three hundred thousand, and that includes service troops and sutlers. Leaving aside the garrisons of frontier guardposts and barriers in passes, I have seen troops to the number of at most two hundred thousand, no more.

史：秦帶甲百餘萬車千乘騎萬匹虎賁之士跼踵科頭貫[頤→]鞬奮戟者至不可勝計 The men in armor of Ch'in are more than a million, their chariots ten thousand, their cavalry forty thousand. Their shock troops who jump with eagerness and raise their spears are too many to calculate.

史：秦馬之良[戎兵之眾↓][探→]控前跌後蹄間三尋騰者不可勝數 Ch'in has innumerable horses so strong their hoofspan from outstretched forelegs to thrusting hind legs is 20 feet.

史：山東之士被甲蒙冑以會戰秦人捐甲徒裊以趨敵左掣人頭右挾生虜 The soldiers east of the mountains don armor and helmet to join battle; The Ch'in remove their armor and rush toward the enemy barechested, slashing a man's head with the left hand, taking a live prisoner with the right.

史：秦卒與山東之卒猶孟賁之與怯夫以重力相鏖猶烏獲之與嬰兒夫戰孟賁烏獲之士以攻不服之弱國無異[垂→]砸千鈞之重於鳥卵之上必無幸矣 The difference between Ch'in troops and the troops from east of the mountains is like that between Méng Pên and a cowardly common fellow. If they pressed each other with heavy force, it would be like Wu Huo compared to a baby. Sending soldiers like Méng Pên and Wu Huo to attack an un-submissive weak state is no different from crushing a bird's egg with a thousand-chün weight. You would be completely out of luck.

史：夫群臣諸侯不料地之寡而聽從人之甘言好辭比周以相飾也皆奮曰聽吾計可以疆霸天下夫不顧社稷之長利而聽須臾之說註誤人主無過此者 Ministers and barons do not measure the meagerness of their land; they listen to the sweet talk and beautiful words of the vertical men. Those collude to praise each other and all get excited and say, "Follow my plan; you can get strong enough to rule the world." [疆霸天下 || 富有天下] Now as to ignoring the long-term benefit of the nation and listening to short-range proposals so as to mislead the ruler with lies, nothing exceeds this.

東取成皋榮陽則鴻臺之宮桑林之苑非王之有也夫塞成皋絕上地則王之國分矣先事秦則安不事秦則危 If YGM does not submit to Ch'in, Ch'in will send down armed men to seize Yi-yang, cut off Hán's upper territory and go east to take Ch'êng-kao. If they block Ch'êng-kao and cut off your upper territory, YGM's state will have been split. If you are the first to submit to Ch'in, you will be safe; if not, you will be in danger.

史：夫造禍而求其福報計淺而怨深逆秦而順楚雖欲毋亡不可得也故為大王計莫如為秦秦之所欲莫如弱楚而能弱楚者[莫]如韓非以韓能疆於楚也其地勢然也今王西面而事秦以攻楚秦王必喜夫攻楚以利其地轉禍而說秦計無便於此者韓王聽儀計 "Now, if you cause misfortune but seek a repayment of good fortune, or let your plans be shallow while their resentment is deep, if you turn against Ch'in and follow Ch'u, though you may not want to perish, that cannot be had. Thus, to plan on YGM's behalf, it is best to side with Ch'in. Ch'in wants nothing more than to weaken Ch'u, but none can weaken Ch'u more than Hán can. It is not that Hán can become stronger than Ch'u; it's that the terrain is so. If now YGM faces west and serves Ch'in by attacking Ch'u the king of Ch'in will surely be pleased. No plan is more beneficial than this, to attack Ch'u and profit from their land while reversing your ill fortune and clearing your name with Ch'in." The king of Hán followed Yi's plan.

史：張儀歸報秦惠王封儀五邑號曰武信君 When Chang Yi returned and reported to Ch'in, the Benevolent King enfeoffed him with five cities and the title Lord Military Reliability.

史：使張儀東說齊湣王曰天下疆國無過齊者大臣父兄殷眾富樂然而為大王計者皆為一時之說不顧百世之利 He sent Chang Yi east to Ch'i as emissary to make this proposal to the Lost King: "Of the strong nations in the world, none exceeds Ch'i. Your great officers and senior male relatives are great and numerous, rich and happy. However, those who plan for YGM all make proposals for a single occasion; none consider the benefit of a hundred generations.

史：從人說大王者必曰齊西有疆趙南有韓與梁齊負海之國也地廣民眾兵彊士勇雖有百秦將無奈齊何大王賢其說而不計其實夫從人朋黨比周莫不以從為可 "The vertical men who address proposals to YGM invariably say that to the west of Ch'i there is strong Chao and to the south there are Hán and Liang. Ch'i is a maritime nation. Its land is broad, its people many, its arms strong, its soldiers brave. Though there were a hundred Ch'in, they could do nothing to Ch'i. YGM finds their proposals clever but you do not calculate their real world aspect. Those vertical men form factions and collude, all of them assuming a vertical alliance is all right.

史：臣聞之齊與魯三戰而魯三勝國以危亡隨其後雖有戰勝之名而有亡國之實是何也齊大而魯小也今秦之與齊也猶齊之與魯也 "I have heard that Ch'i and Lu fought three battles and Lu won all three, with the result that peril and loss of the state followed that. They had the repute of winning those battles but the reality of losing their state. Why was that? Because Ch'i is large and Lu small. Here the comparison between Ch'in and Ch'i is like that between Ch'i and Lu.

史：秦趙戰於河漳之上再戰而趙再勝秦戰於番吾之下再戰又勝秦四戰之後趙之亡卒數十萬邯鄲僅存雖有戰勝之名而國已破矣是何也秦疆而趙弱 "Ch'in and Chao fought near the Yellow River and the Chang and Chao twice defeated Ch'in. They fought again near P'o-wu and Chao again defeated Ch'in. After four battles Chao had lost hundreds of thousands of soldiers and Han-tan barely survived. Although they had the repute of having won those battles, yet their state was already broken. Why was that? Because Ch'in is strong and Chao weak.

史：今秦楚嫁女娶婦為昆弟之國韓獻宜陽梁效河外趙入朝澠池割河間以事秦大王不事秦秦驅韓梁攻齊之南地悉趙兵渡清河指博關臨菑即墨非王之有也國一日見攻雖欲事秦不可得也是故願大王孰計之也 Now Ch'in and Ch'u have married their daughters to each other, becoming brother states. Hán turned over Yi-yang, Liang surrendered Ho-wai, Chao paid court as a vassal and gave up Ho-chien in submission to Ch'in. If YGM does not submit to Ch'in they will urge Hán and Ling to attack your southern territory. All the Chao army will cross the Ch'ing river and the Chih-po barrier, Lin-tzu and Chi-mo will not be YGM's. If some day your state is attacked, though you may wish to submit to Ch'in, that will not be possible. Thus I would like YGM to plan for this completely."

史：齊王曰齊僻陋隱居東海之上未嘗聞社稷之長利也乃許張儀 The king of Ch'i said, "Ch'i is remote and rustic, obscurely located at the shore of the east sea. We have never heard long-range planning for the benefit of the nation." He then gave his assent to Chang Yi.

史：張儀去西說趙王曰敝邑秦王使使臣效愚計於大王大王收率天下以實秦秦兵不敢出函谷關十五年 Chang Yi left and went west to make this proposal to the king of Chao: "Since YGM collected and led the world to contain Ch'in, their arms have not dared to emerge from the Han-ku pass for fifteen years.

史：大王之威行於山東敝邑恐懼伏繕甲厲兵飾車騎習馳射力田積粟守四封之內愁居備處不敢動搖唯大王有意督過之也 "The fearsome reputation of YGM is current east of the mountains. Our poor city fears and lies low in anxiety. We keep our armor in good repair and our weapons sharp. We prepare our chariots and horsemen and practice shooting at the gallop. We put much effort into farming and accumulate grain. We guard all within our four borders. We live in worry and dwell in trembling, not daring to deviate from our course. Let YGM tour and inspect this if you are so inclined.

史：今以[大王→]秦之力舉巴蜀并漢中包兩周遷九鼎守白馬之津秦雖僻遠然而心忿含怒之日久矣今秦有敝甲凋兵軍於澠池願渡河踰漳據番吾會邯鄲之下願以甲子合戰以正殷紂之事敬使使臣先聞左右 Now with the power of Ch'in we have taken Pa and Shu, annexed Han-chung, enveloped the two Chou, moved the nine cauldrons and hold the White Horse ford. Ch'in may be remote but our anger and resentment have grown for a long time. Now Ch'in has worn-out armor and used-up weapons. We are drawn up for battle at Minchih. We mean to cross the Ho, pass the Chang, capture Po-wu and meet near Han-tan. We will join battle on the first of a sixty-day cycle, just as when Chòu of Yin was dealt with. We respectfully sent a messenger to inform those around us.

史：凡大王之所信爲從者恃蘇秦蘇秦焚惑諸侯以是爲非以非爲是欲反齊國而自令車裂於市夫天下之不可一亦明矣 All those who YGM believes can manage a vertical alliance rely on Su Ch'in. Su Ch'in misled the barons, making right into wrong and vice versa. He wanted to return to Ch'i, but had himself torn apart by wagons in the market place. It has now become clear that the world cannot be united his way.

史：今楚與秦爲昆弟之國而韓梁稱爲東藩之臣齊獻魚鹽之地此斷趙之右臂也夫斷右臂而與人鬥失其黨而孤居求欲毋危豈可得乎 Now Ch'u has become a brother state of Ch'in, Hán and Liang call themselves eastern-ally servants of Ch'in, and Ch'i has turned over lands producing salt and fish. This has cut off Chao's right arm. Now if you fight a man having cut off your right arm, if you dwell alone, bereft of your cronies, you may wish to be out of danger but can that be?

史：今秦發三[將]軍其一軍塞午道告齊使興師渡清河軍於邯鄲之東一軍軍成皋驅韓梁軍於河外一軍軍於澠池約四國爲一以攻趙趙服必四分其地 Ch'in will sent out three armies, one to barricade Crossroads, ordering Ch'i to raise a force, cross the Ching-ho river and form up east of Han-tan, one to form up at Ch'eng-kaio to hasten the Hán and Liang armies to Ho-wai, and one to form up at Min-chih. If the four nations cooperate as one in attacking Chao, when Chao surrenders they will surely divide up its territory four ways.

史：是故不敢匿意隱情先以聞於左右臣竊爲大王計莫如與秦王遇於澠池面相見而口相結請案兵無攻願大王之定計 Thus we dare not conceal our intentions nor hide the truth, but give prior notice to all about us. If I may take the liberty to plan for YGM, the best would be to meet the king of Ch'in at Min-chih, have audience face to face and communicate in your own voices, asking him to down weapons and not attack. I wish YGM would make a definite plan.

史：趙王曰先王之時奉陽君專權擅勢蔽欺先王獨擅綰事寡人居屬師傅不與國謀計 The king of Chao said, "In the time of the previous king, Lord Fêng-yang monopolized power, deceiving the previous king and acting on his own in controlling affairs. Our attached staff, teachers and preceptors did not get to participate in making state policy.

史：先王襄群臣寡人年幼奉祀之日新心固竊疑焉以爲一從不事秦非國之長利也乃且願變心易慮割地謝前過以事秦方將約車趨行適聞使者之明詔趙王許張儀張儀乃去 "The previous king dismissed his ministers. We were still young and had only recently assumed the reign. Our mind was privately suspicious, taking it that vertical unity not submitting to Ch'in was not in the long-term interest of Our state. So We had got to the point of being willing to change Our mind and alter our thought, to submit to Ch'in with cession of land to atone for our former faults. I was just about to summon my chariot to hurry there when I heard the clear message of the emissary." The king of Chao gave assent to Chang Yi, who then departed.

史：北之燕說燕昭王曰大王之所親莫如趙昔趙襄子嘗以其姊爲代王妻欲并代約與代王遇於句注之塞乃令人作爲金斗長其尾令可以擊人與代王飲陰告廢人曰卽酒酣樂進熱噉反斗以擊之於是酒酣樂進熱噉廢人進樹因反斗以擊代王殺之王腦塗地其姊聞之因摩笄以自刺故至今有摩笄之山代王之亡天下莫不聞 He went north to Yen and made this proposal to the king of Yen: "There is none to whom YGM feels closer than Chao. Anciently the Prospering Patriarch of Chao married his sister to the king of Tai. Wanting to annex Tai, he agreed to meet the king at the Kou-chu barrier. Then he had an artisan fashion a golden ladle, making its handle long so that it could be used to hit a man. He had drinks with the king of Tai. He had secretly instructed the kitchen man, 'When we have had enough to drink to make us happy, you serve us a snack. Reverse the ladle and hit him with it.' Then when they had drunk enough to make them happy, he served a snack. The kitchen man came forward and ladled it out. Then he reversed the ladle and hit the king of Tai, killing him. The king's brain was smeared on the ground. When his sister heard of it she sharpened a hairpin to stab herself. Thus even today there is a mountain called 'Sharpened Hairpin'. Everyone in the world knows how the king of Tai perished. 史：夫趙王之復矣無親大王之所明見且以趙王爲可親乎趙興兵攻燕再圍燕都而劫大王大王割十城以謝今趙王已入朝澠池效河間以事秦 "The malevolence of the king of Chao allows him no friends, a thing YGM has seen for yourself, and yet you think him befriendable? The king of Chao has twice raised an army and besieged the capital of Yen, driving out YGM; you ceded ten forts to him to buy him off. Now the king of Chao has paid court as a vassal at Min-chih, turning over Ho-chien in submission to Ch'in.

史：今大王不事秦秦下甲雲中九原驅趙而攻燕則易水長城非大王之有也且今時趙之於秦猶郡縣也不敢妄舉師以攻伐今王事秦秦王必喜趙不敢妄動是西有彊秦之援而南無齊趙之患是故願大王孰計之 If now YGM does not submit to Ch'in they will send arms down through Yün-chung and Chiu-yüan and urge Chao to attack Yen. Then the Yi river and the long wall will not be in YGM's possession. Moreover, at the present time Chao is to Ch'in as a province or county; they would not dare raise a force and attack capriciously. If YGM submits to Ch'in, the king of Ch'in will be pleased. Chao will not dare to act capriciously. Then you will have the aid of strong Ch'in on the west and not have to worry about Ch'i and Chao on the south. I would like YGM to plan for that in detail."

史：燕王曰寡人蠻夷僻處雖大男子裁如嬰兒言不足以采正計今上幸客教之請西面而事秦獻恆山之尾五城 The king of Yen said, "We dwell on the outskirts like southern forest tribes. Though We are a grown man, Our mental capacity is like that of a child, not sufficient to choose the correct plan. Now that our honored guest has favored us with instruction, We ask permission to face westward and submit to Ch'in, offering as tribute five forts at the tail of Hêng-shan." 史：燕王聽儀 The king of Yen did as Yi had told him.

史：太史公曰三晉多權變之士夫言從衡彊秦者大抵皆三晉之人也夫張儀之行事甚於蘇秦然世惡蘇秦者以其先死而儀振暴其短以扶其說成其衡道要之此兩人真傾危之士哉 The Grand Historian says, "The three states of former Chin had many pragmatists. Those who spoke of vertical or horizontal alliances and how strong Ch'in was were nearly all men of former Chin. The acts of Chang Yi were more extreme than those of Su Ch'in, but the world hates Su Ch'in because he died first and Chang Yi laid bare his shortcomings and called attention to them to bolster his arguments and consummate his horizontal way. To sum up, these two men were truly among those who lived at the edge!" [Last two refer to Chang Yi, the two before them to Su Ch'in. A bit clumsy, perhaps, but what a devastating double meaning he packed into 衡.]

a. time of day

隋: 晝有朝有禺有中有晡有夕 Daytime consists of morning, forenoon, midday, afternoon and evening.
史: 君之危若朝露 Sir, you will not outlast the morning dew.

左: 君子有四時朝以聽政晝以訪問夕以脩令夜以安身 A courtier has four times. The morning is for attending to government. Midday is for making inquiries. Evening is for polishing decrees. Night is for resting the body.

史: 紆為朝歌北鄙之音...夫朝歌者不時也北者敗也鄙者陋也 Chòu played music of the villages north of Chao-ke...Now, "singing at morning" [pun on pln] is ill-timed, "retreating" [pun on "north"] is defeat and "rustic" [pun on "village"] is vulgar.

莊: 勞神明為一而不知其同也謂之朝三何謂朝三曰狙公賦芋曰朝三而暮四眾狙皆怒曰然則朝四而暮三眾狙皆悅名實未虧而喜怒為用亦因是也 To exhaust one's intellect in maintaining that all is one, not recognizing the sameness—we call that "three-at-morning". What is meant by "three-at-morning"? A keeper of monkeys meant to give them chestnuts; he said, "Three at morning and four at evening." The monkeys were all angered. He said, "Well, then, four at morning and three at evening." The monkeys were all pleased. Neither the name nor the reality was the least bit altered; their emotions were what they went by. That, too, is a good analogy.

b. paired w/夕 or 暮

左: 若晉君朝以入則婢子夕以死夕以入則朝以死 If it is morning when the Lord of Chin enters then it will be evening when your servant and her children will die; if it is evening when he enters, it will be morning when they die.

淮: 禹遭洪水之患陂塘之事故朝死而暮葬 When Yü was hard-pressed with great floods and the breach of dikes, the dead were buried the same day.

tjök 4.1 ^{vn} construct 167 築 築

There is textual evidence, subject to correction by archaeology, of the structure of a substantial building: Its foundation was a stamped earth platform, which formed its floor. Its wooden wall pillars on stone plinths were tied with sturdy lintels which supported a timber-built roof covered with pottery tiles. The spaces between wall pillars were closed with wattle-and-daub, essentially basketwork plastered with potter's clay. There were also free-standing pillars to support the roof at interior points.

春: 秋築臺于秦 In fall they built a tower at Ch'in. 釋: 篤築也築堅實稱也 tök: "staunch" is tök "build." It claims to build firm and solid.

史: 今乃有意西面而事秦稱東藩築帝宮受冠帶祠春秋巨竊為大王恥之 And yet here you want to face west and serve Ch'in, calling yourselves their eastern border, building a palace for an emperor, accepting their court procedures, dating your ceremonies by their calendar—I venture to feel shame for YGM.
後: 乃悉兵數萬人圍略陽斬山築堤激水灌城 He then fully armed empty thousand men and besieged Lüehyang. He removed the top of a mountain and built dikes to divert water into the fortress.

列: 穆王乃為之改築土木之功赫聖之色無遺巧焉五府為虛而臺始成其高千仞臨終南之上號曰中天之臺 The Splendid King thereupon rebuilt just for him. No detail of fineness was omitted in its foundation, timbers or red-ochre plastering. 史：妾一僮而覆酒上存主父下存主母然而不免於咎惡在乎忠信之無罪也 By the one act of falling and upending the wine, the maid saved her master as well as her mistress yet did not escape whipping. Where in this is the guiltlessness of integrity and reliability?

國：唯忠信者能留外寇而不害除闇以應外謂之忠定身以行事謂之信今君施其所惡於人闇不除矣以賄滅親身不定矣夫國非忠不立非信不固 Only with integrity and reliability can we allow the presence of foreign invaders without suffering harm. Eliminating deceit in responding to outsiders, we call that integrity. Having a firm attitude in one's dealings, we call that reliability. Now our ruler is doing to others things he dislikes for himself; deceit is not cleared away. He is destroying relatives for a bribe; his attitude is not firm. A state cannot rest on anything but integrity and cannot be stable by anything but honesty.

左：盟國人於大宮曰所不與崔慶者晏子仰天歎曰嬰所不唯忠於君利社稷者是與有如上帝乃歛 They swore their countrymen to an oath in the great hall, wording it, "...that we will adhere to Ts'ui and Ch'ing." in 晉 (v. 中行) 智伯 知伯

The 知 of this appellation originated as a phr; the 伯 behaves syntactically just like the 伯 of the title "earl" given to Chêng and Chín by the Chou king, but I can find no formal hierarchical significance to it. It was applied to several members of the 知 family beginning 6th C BC. It appears 伯 "uncle" may have been a traditional nickname in the 知 family as 孟 "eldest" was in 趙. A simple reference to 知伯 in a Chan-kiao or later text is to 荀瑤, last bearer of the epithet, killed in the warfare about the breakup of Chin in the 5th C BC.

左: 將門知伯謂趙孟入之對曰主在此知伯曰惡而無勇何以爲子對曰以能忍恥庶無害趙宗乎知伯不悛趙襄子由是甚知伯 When [in 464 BC] they were about to attack the gate, Chih-po said to Chao Méng [the Prospering Patriarch], "Enter it." He replied, "The commander is present." Chih-po said, "Being ugly and cowardly, how did you become head-of-family?" He replied, "On account of my being able to tolerate being insulted, I may be able to keep harm from the lineage of Chao." Chih-po would not take back what he had said. From then on the Prospering Patriarch of Chao loathed Chih-po.

戰: 知伯從韓魏兵以攻趙 Chih-po aligned the forces of Hán and Wei to attack Chao [in 453 BC].

戰: 智伯帥三國之眾以攻趙襄主於晉陽決水灌之三年城且拔矣襄主錯龜數策占兆以視利害何國可降而使張孟談於是潛行而出反智伯之約得兩國之眾以攻智伯之國禽其身以成襄子之功 Chih-po led the massed force of three states to attack the Prospering Patriarch of Chao in Chin-yang. He diverted a river to flood him, and in the third year the city was about to be taken. The Prospering Patriarch bored a tortoise shell and counted yarrow-stalks, interpreting the omens so as to see which of the states could be suborned, and sent Chang Méng-t'an as emissary to sneak out under the water. He broke Chih-po's treaty and got the forces of the two states to attack Chih-po's capital, capture him and complete the Prospering Patriarch's success.

羞豈曰能刺人哉處十[月→]年知伯圍襄子於晉陽襄子疏隊而擊之大敗知伯破其首以爲飲器 Another day, Chih-po was drinking with The Prospering Patriarch when he slapped The PP's head. One of his officers asked permission to kill him. The PP said, "When our late ruler made me his successor, he said I would be able to bear insult on behalf of our altars. Surely you don't suppose he said I would be able to assassinate men!" He waited ten years. Chih-po besieged the PP in Chin-yang. The PP divided forces and attacked him, utterly routing Chih-po, whose head he broke open to make a drinking vessel. 淮: 趙襄子以晉陽之城霸智伯以三晉之地擒 The Prospering Patriarch of Chao became overlord with the city of Chin-yang, while Chih-po, with all the territory of the former state of Chin, was made a captive. 戰: 臣事范中行氏范中行氏以眾人遇臣臣故眾人報之知伯以國士遇臣臣故國士報之 When I served the Fan and the Chung-hang, they treated me as an ordinary chap and I repaid them as an ordinary chap. When I served Chih-po he treated me as an extraordinary man and I repay him as an extraordinary man.

戰: 知伯索地於魏桓子魏桓子弗予任章曰何故弗予桓子曰無故索地故弗予任章曰無故索地鄰國必恐重欲無厭天下必懼君予之地知伯必憍憍而輕敵鄰國懼而相親以相親之兵待輕敵之國知氏之命不長矣周書曰將欲敗之必姑輔之將欲取之必姑與之君不如與之以驕知伯君何釋以天下圖知氏而獨以吾國爲知氏質乎君曰善乃與之萬家之邑一知伯大說因索蔡皋梁於趙趙弗與因圍晉陽韓魏反於外趙氏應之於內知氏遂亡 The Earl of Chih demanded land from Wei Huantzu, who would not give any. Jen Chang asked, "On what grounds do you not give it?" Wei Huantzu replied, "He has no grounds for demanding any, so I won't give it." Jen Chang said, "If he makes groundless demands for land, neighboring states will take alarm. If he multiplies his demands and will not be satisfied, the whole world will become apprehensive. Let YL give him some land; the Earl of Chih is bound to become arrogant. When he is arrogant and despises his neighbors, and they apprehensive and united against him, then we can meet with a united force an arrogant enemy who despises his foe and the Chih family's days will be numbered. The Chou Book says, 'If you want to destroy him/ You must for a while support him/ If you want to take it/ You must first yield it.' YL had better yield it, so as to make the Earl of Chih more arrogant. Why forgo having the whole world on your side in dealing with him, and instead let our state alone become hostage to the Chih clan?" The ruler said, "Good," and yielded one city of ten thousand households. The Earl of Chih was very pleased, and went on to demand Ts'ai, Kao and Liang from Chao. On Chao's refusal, he besieged Chinyang. Hán and Wei turned against him without and the Chao resisted him within and the Chih clan went on to extinction.

The success of this advice depends on the Earl of Chih being stupid. With the cunning of a Bismarck or even the predatory instinct of a dull normal like Hitler, he would have concentrated on further weakening Wei rather than trying to reduce all his enemies at once. A century later, the Benevolent King of Wei would make the same strategic blunder.

衡：員圖易轉 round and easy to roll

衡：今日西轉不復見者非入也 In fact, that the sun rolls west and does not reappear is not because it has gone inside something.

選：狀如天輪膠戾而激轉 [Breaking waves'] shape is like the wheel of the sky held down and spinning furiously.

b. alternate

史：天地剖判以來五德轉移 Ever since sky and earth first separated, the five influences have rotated in alternation.

漢：合從連衡轉相攻伐代為雌雄 They formed vertical and horizontal alliances, attacked each other in turn and alternated being stronger and weaker.

c. transform

衡：世有以生形轉為生類者矣未有以死身化為生象者也 It has happened in the world that living forms have transformed into other types of living thing, but it has never happened that a dead body has transformed into a living image.

方：焮火也楚轉語也齊言焮火也 χɿwər is χwār “fire.” Ch'u dialect pronunciation. It is like χmivər being “fire” in Ch'i dialect.

釋：日生膚入眸子曰浸浸也言侵明也亦言浸淫轉大也 When the eye grows a skin that extends into the pupil it is called tsiəm. tsiəm is ts'iəm “encroach,” that is to say it encroaches the clarity of vision, also to say it tsiəmdliəm “gradually” evolves and enlarges.

史：因禍爲福轉敗爲功 to make good luck starting from bad luck and turn failure into success
絕：轉死爲生以敗爲成 He turned doom into salvation and made success from failure.

史：夫攻楚以利其地轉禍而說秦計無便於此者 No plan is more beneficial than this, to attack Ch'ü and profit from their land while reversing your ill fortune and clearing your name with Ch'in.

史：古之善制事者轉禍爲福因敗爲功 The ancients who were good at managing affairs turned ill luck into good and built success on the basis of failure.
淮：其衣致煖而無文其兵戈銖而無刃其歌樂而無轉其哭哀而無聲 Clothing provided warmth but had no decoration. Weapons killed but lacked sharp edges. Songs were happy but lacked variation. Crying was sad but soundless.

There are heavy and light degrees among punishments. If one of your subordinates errs, it is no crime of yours." Li Li said, "YS is head of the office he occupies. I do not share my position with subordinates. If my salary were raised, I would not split the increase with subordinates. Now to kill a man erroneous judgement and pass on the guilt to subordinates is unheard of. I refuse your clemency." The marquess said, "If you consider yourself guilty, do you then also consider me guilty?" Li Li said, "Magistrates have a law: for mutilation by mistake, one is mutilated; for death by mistake, one dies. YL took YS to be able to notice details and resolve doubts; thus you made me a magistrate. Now through erroneous judgement I have killed a man. My crime deserves death." He persisted in refusing clemency and died by falling on his sword.

It looks as if long before the classical era in China the Shang people had an ancestor deity, 帝, and the ethnically distinct Chou people had a sky deity, perhaps a thunder-god. By classical times the two gods had joined forces and specialized. The name of the ancestor deity meaning nothing else while the name of the sky deity was also the ordinary word for "sky," the Shang deity kept its godlike attributes better than the Chou deity, which came to be seen in a more naturalistic light.

The usual translation "heaven" is freighted with European connotations that can be badly misleading, even when the supernatural entity rather than the celestial canopy is denoted. tiēn is the source of most of the influences on human life: the seasons, "destiny" or "fate," weather, and the energy that animates anything that moves of itself. It is not where we go when we die (that is "brown seepage" –the muddy grave). In order for one to dwell in tiēn, rather than dying, on the contrary one must be an immortal 仙. It is not clear whether the body of a 仙 is so light that it simply wafts upward or the 仙 ascends without the encumbrance of a body, which is left behind. (As always, it's more complicated than that. V. examples under a.2 below and note under 鬼神.)

The graph may be anthropomorphic (assuming it is not a loan-graph, which is never a safe assumption), but the concept itself is not particularly so in our period. Writers of many schools ascribe motives and emotions to it, with other human attributes such as that of playing the role of father to earth's role of mother. But the concept of a humanoid divine providence does not fit what these texts say about tiēn. For example, deities appear in dreams in human or animal form; we do not find tiēn doing that. How to render the name of this quasi-deity or supra-deity is quite a puzzle. I reluctantly settle for "Sky-with-a-capital-S," but I wish I could do better than that. V. 天子

釋：豫司竟冀以舌腹言之天顯也在上高顯也 In Yü, Szü, Yüan and Chi they say it with the belly of the tongue: tiēn sky is xiān eminent, above us, high and eminent. [cf 祿]

It propagates energy-vapor to govern life-force, then applies the five elements. In spring is birth, summer growth, autumn harvest and winter storage. Yang brings forth thunder and lightning, Yin develops snow and frost. It nourishes all living things, which flourish, then perish. It wets us with storms, dries us with sunlight. It warms us by tempering energy-vapor, chills us by sending down frost. It locates us with the many stars, measures us with the Dipper and Balance. It surrounds us with the six directions, enmeshes us with the networks. It corrects us with disaster and anomaly, notifies us with auspicious omens. 2. the residence of 帝 (and other 神)

詩：文王在上於昭于天周雖舊邦其命維新有周不顯帝命不時文王陟降在帝左右 The Cynosure King is above/ Oh! he is manifest in the sky/ Though Chou is a former p'ung/ Its mandate is new/ The rulers of Chou are eminent/ Was not the command of the Ancestor timely?/ The Cynosure King ascends and descends/ He is in the personal entourage of the Ancestor.

It seems 帝 maintained a royal court in the sky. The excerpt from ode 235 above clearly says 文王 went there when he died. But that does not necessarily imply that Tom, Dick and Harry would go there as well. The ode is pre-CC; examples from our period, like the one from 論衡 below, have people visiting this celestial court in a dreamlike trance and returning to life. (V. note under 鬼神.)

衡：趙簡子夢上天見一男子在帝之側 The Perspicacious Patriarch of Chao dreamed of going up to the sky and seeing a certain man at the side of the Ancestor.

左：天禍許國鬼神實不逞於許君 If Sky has sent ill fortune to the state of Hsü, it is the spirits that are dissatisfied with the ruler of Hsü.

衡：豈天怒不喜貪於罰希於賞哉 Surely it could not be that Sky gets angry but not happy, is avid to punish but rarely rewards?

衡：人誤不知天輒殺之不能原誤失而責故天治悖也 If when a man makes an honest mistake in ignorance, sky immediately kills him, unable to forgive his mistaken lapse but demanding restitution, then sky's governance is out of order.

論：王孫賈問曰與其媚於奧寧媚於灶何謂也子曰不然獲罪於天無所禱也 Wang-sun Chia asked, "What do you say about 'Better be on good terms with the kitchen god than with the SW house corner'?" The master replied, "That's not true. The Foursquare marquess looked up at the sky. Kuan Chung said, "When I said sky I didn't mean the blue and distant sky. The ruler of men takes common people to be sky."

衡：論災異者已疑於天用災異譴告人矣更說曰災異之至殆人君以政動天天動氣以應之譬之以[物→]荆擊鼓以椎扣鐘鼓猶天樞猶政鐘鼓聲猶天之應也人主為於下則天氣隨人而至矣曰此又疑也 In discussing disasters and freaks, I have already shown how improbable it is that sky would use disasters and freaks to send messages of remonstrance to men. A variant theory has it that when freaks occur, generally a ruler of men by his governing has moved sky, and sky has moved vapor to respond to him. Compare it to striking a drum with a stick or beating a gong with a mallet. The gong or drum is like sky, the mallet is like the government, and the sound of the gong or drum is like sky's response. If a ruler contrives below then sky's vapor comes following him. I say this is even more improbable.

By that I mean people and things are bound to sky; sky is the master of people and things. Thus it says, Wang-liang whips his horses/ Chariots and horses fill the plains. It doesn't say that chariots and horses fill the plains and only then does Wang-liang whip his horses. The vapor of sky has changed above and people and things have responded to it below. Thus when it is about to rain/ the hsiangyang stands up and dances, to make it rain. Hsiangyang are creatures that can sense impending rain. When it is about to rain, they fold one leg and get up and dance. Similarly when it is about to rain, ants move away, earthworms come out, zither strings sag and rheumatism flares up. These are examples of things that are activated by sky. Thus when wind is about to blow, creatures that live in nests become active; when rain is about to fall, things that live in holes get agitated. The vapor of wind and rain stimulates creatures and things. Thus people are placed between sky and earth like lice and fleas in clothing or ants in cracks and crannies. If lice or ants do things backwards or forwards, sideways or up and down, can they force the vapor in the clothing or the cranny to change the way it acts? Lice and ants cannot, and to say that men alone can do it is to be ignorant of the laws of matter and energy. Now when the wind rises tree branches begin to move. Tree branches cannot raise the wind. That is why when summer ends crickets sing and vilches cry: they feel Yin energy. When thunder stirs partridges are startled; when chrysalids emerge snakes come out: they are galvanized by Yang energy. When the night reaches its midst the heron cries; when dawn-foreteller is about to rise the rooster crows. Although these are not examples of anomalies, they do demonstrate that sky energy moves things and things respond to sky energy. Certainly you may say that heat or cold stimulates the ruler and the ruler then picks up energy and on that account rewards or punishes, but are you going to say that the ruler's rewards and punishments stimulate august sky and sky then produces heat or cold in response to his government?

衡：六情風家言風至為盜賊者感應之而起非盜賊之人精氣感天使風至也風至怪不軌之心而盜賊之操發矣何以驗之盜賊之人見物而取賄敵而殺皆在徙倚漏刻之間未必宿日有其思也而天風已以貪狼陰賊之日至矣以風占貴賤者風從天相鄉來則貴從因死地來則殘夫貴賤、多少斗斛故也風至而糶穀之人貴賤其價天氣動怪人物者也故糶價低昂一貴一賤矣 When the six-ch'ing wind experts say that when the wind rises it causes theft and robbery, they mean they arise in response to being stimulated by it; they don't mean that thieves' and robbers' vital energy stimulates sky to send wind. When the wind comes it agitates unruly hearts and the acts of theft and robbery issue. How can we test that? When thieves and robbers see loot they take it; when they see their enemies they kill them. This is always done on short notice; they don't necessarily need to have planned it for days in advance and then the wind arrives from the sky on that very day of avarice and violence. In using the wind to predict future prices, if the wind blows from the king toward the village the price will rise but if the wind blows from the prison and execution-ground, the price will fall. Now high and low prices depend on how many bushels and pecks there are. Thus the price of grain goes up and down, at times cheap, at times dear.

衡:天官之書以正月朝占四方之風風從南方來者旱從北方來者澁東方來者為疫西方來者為兵太史公實道言以風占水旱兵疫者人物吉凶統於天也使物生者春也物死者冬也春生而冬殺[也天者→]者天也如或欲春殺冬生物終不死生何也物生統於陽物死系於陰也故以口氣吹人人不能寒吁人人不能溫使見吹吁之人涉冬觸夏將有凍之患矣寒溫之氣系於天地而統於陰陽人事國政安能動之 The T'ien Kuan uses the first day of the year to divine from the four wind directions. Wind coming from the south means drought; from the north means flood; coming from the east means plague; from the west means war. The Grand Scribe was expounding the claim that we divine flood, drought, war and plague by the wind because the good and ill fortune of the human object are connected to the sky. What makes things grow is spring; things die on account of winter. Spring makes life, winter death. That is due to sky. Suppose that sky wanted to kill in spring and give life in winter: things would not after all grow and die. Why? The life of things is connected to Yang; their death is tied to Yin. Thus you cannot cool a man by blowing at him, nor can you warm him with your breath. But suppose the man being blown on or breathed on passes through winter and encounters summer, he will suffer from excess cold and heat. Now the warmth or coolness of the weather is connected to sky and earth and tied to Yin and Yang; how can human affairs and the government of states affect it? 衡:且天本而人末也登樹怪其枝不能動其株如伐株萬莖枯矣人事猶樹枝[能→]寒溫猶根株也生於天含天之氣以天為主猶耳目手足系於心矣心有所為耳目視聽手足動作謂天應人是謂心為耳目手足使乎旌旗垂旒旒旒綴於杆杆東則旒隨而西苟謂寒溫隨刑罰而至是以天氣為綴旒也 Moreover, sky is root and men are branches; if you climb a tree and shake the branches, you cannot make the trunk move. If you chop the trunk, all the stems will wither. Human affairs are like tree branches, and warmth and cold are like roots and trunk. We get life from sky, we contain the energy-vapor of sky, we have sky as our master like the ears, eyes, hands and feet in relation to the heart. If the heart wants to do something, the eyes and ears look and listen, the feet and hands take action. To claim that sky responds to people is to claim that the heart is the servant of the eyes, ears, feet and hands. A flag or banner hangs from its pendants, and the pendants are tied to the staff. If the staff goes eastward, then the pendants follow it pointing westward. If you claim that heat and cold come in response to punishments, then that is to take the energy-vapor of sky to be tied pendants.

衡:鉤星在房心之間地且動之占也齊太卜知之謂景公臣能動地景公信之夫謂人君能致寒溫猶齊景公信太卜之能動地夫人不能動地而亦不能動天 When the kou star is between the constellations fang and hsin, that is an omen of imminent earthquakes. The grand diviner of Ch'i knew that, and said to the Glorious Marquess of Ch'i, "YS is able to make the earth move." The marquess believed him. Now, claiming that a ruler is able to cause the weather to become hot or cold is like the marquess believing that his grand diviner could make the earth move. If people cannot make the earth move, neither can they make the sky move.

衡:占大將且入國邑氣寒則將且怒溫則將喜夫喜怒起事而發未入界未見吏民是非未察喜怒未發而寒溫之氣已豫至矣怒喜致寒溫怒喜之後氣乃當至是竟寒溫之氣使人君怒喜也 In divining about the entry of a commanding general into a conquered nation, if the weather is cold then the general will be angry; if it is warm, he will be pleased. Now the expression of anger and pleasure arises from events. Before he has crossed the border, before he has seen the attitude of the people and officials, before he has made any inquiries and sorted things out, the warm or cold weather has already arrived beforehand. If anger and pleasure cause the arrival of warm or cold weather, the weather ought to arrive after the anger or pleasure. This turns out to be a case of the warm or cold weather making the general angry or happy.

衡:或曰未至誠也行事至誠若鄒衍之呼天而霜降杞梁妻器而城崩何天氣之不能動乎夫至誠猶以心意之好惡也有果之物在人之前去口一尺心欲食之口氣吸之不能取也手撥送口然後得之夫以果之細易轉去口不遠至誠欲之不能得也況天去人高遠其氣莽莽無端末乎 One might object that this falls short of perfect single-mindedness. If one does a thing with perfect single-mindedness, like Tsou Yen crying to sky and making frost, or the wife of Ch'i Liang weeping and making the wall crumble, how could it be that sky would not be moved? Now perfect single-mindedness still comes from the likes and dislikes of the heart. Let there be a piece of fruit just ahead of a man, a foot from his mouth. His heart wants to eat it, his breath draws it to his mouth, but he cannot take it. Not until he grasps it with his hand and conveys it to his mouth can he get it. Now if perfect single-mindedness cannot get this piece of fruit it wants so much, small and round and easy to roll though it is, how much the less so the sky, so high and far from men, its vapor so inchoate

衡:盛夏之時當風而立隆冬之月向日而坐其夏欲得寒而冬欲得溫也至誠極矣欲之甚者[至或→]或至當風鼓燭向日燃爐而天終不為冬夏易氣寒暑有節不為人變改也夫正欲得之而猶不能致況自刑賞意思不欲求寒溫乎萬人俱嘆未能動天一鄒衍之口安能降霜 At the height of summer we stand where we catch the wind, while in the depth of winter we sit where we face the sun, because in summer we want to be cooler while in winter we want to be warmer. Now that is as single-minded as one can get; anyone who wanted it more single-mindedly would have to fan himself while standing in the wind or light a stove while sitting in the sun. Yet Sky does not exchange the vapor of winter for that of summer on our account, because cold and heat have seasons that are not to be altered for mankind. Now if one actually wants to get it and still cannot make it come, how much the less in the case of one who is meditating on rewards and punishments rather than wanting to bring heat or cold? Ten thousand men sighing in chorus could not move Sky; how could the voice of a single Tsou Yen bring down frost?

衡:鄒衍之狀孰與屈原見拘之冤孰與沉江離騷楚辭淒愴孰與一嘆屈原死時楚國無霜 And how does the case of Tsou Yen compare with that of Ch'ü Yüan? How does resentment at being arrested compare with drowning in the Yangtze? How do the poignance of the Li Sao and Ch'ü Tz'ü compare with a single sigh? When Ch'ü Yüan died there was no frost in Ch'ü.

衡:此懷襄之世也厲武之時卞和獻玉別其兩足奉玉泣出涕盡瀆之以血夫鄒衍之誠孰與卞和見拘之冤孰與卞和仰天而嘆孰與泣血夫嘆固不如泣拘固不中別刑計冤情衍不如和當時楚地不見霜 That was in the reigns of the Remembered and Prospering kings. In the reigns of the Cruel and Martial kings, Pien Ho presented jade and they cut off both his feet. Holding up the jade and weeping he went away, and when his tears ran out he cried blood. Now how does the sincerity of Tsou Yen compare with that of Pien Ho? How does the resentment of being arrested compare with cutting off feet? How does looking up at the sky and sighing compare with weeping tears of blood? A sigh surely falls short of weeping blood, as being arrested falls short of losing body parts, so in any calculation of bitter feeling Ho should have more than Yen, yet at that time the land of Ch'ü saw no frost.

衡:李斯趙高讒殺太子扶蘇并及蒙恬蒙驩其時皆吐痛苦之言與嘆聲同又禍至死非徒[苟→]拘徙而其死之地寒氣不生秦坑趙卒於長平之下四十萬眾同時俱陷當時啼號非徒嘆也誠雖不及鄒衍四十萬之冤度當一賢臣之痛入坑坎之啼度過拘囚之呼當時長平之下不見隕霜甫刑曰庶宥告無辜於天帝此言蚩尤之民被冤宥告無罪於上天也以眾民之叫不能致霜鄒衍之言殆虛妄也 Li Szü and Chao Kao traduced and murdered the heir-apparent Fu-su, and got to Méng T'ien and Méng Yi as well. At the time they all gave vent to words of suffering that were the equal of the sound of a sigh, and furthermore their disaster went to the extent of dying, not just being arrested or exiled, yet where they died no cold vapor was engendered. Ch'ın buried Chao soldiers alive near Ch'ang-p'ing. With forty thousand men in the same pit at the same time, the outcry was no mere sigh. Though their sincerity may not have been up to that of Tsou Yen, the resentment of forty thousand measures up to the distress of one skilled bureaucrat, and their shrieks on falling into the pit exceed in measure the shout of an arrested prisoner. At that time, the area near Ch'ang-p'ing saw no frost falling. The Fu Hsing says, "The multitudes who suffered from the oppressive terrors, and were in danger of being murdered, declared their innocence to Heaven." This says that Ch'ıh-yu's people, full of resentment, complained of their guiltlessness to Sky. If frost cannot be made to come by the cries of an entire nation, the story about Tsou Yen is probably an idle false tale.

衡：南方至熱煎炒爛石父子同水而浴北方至寒凝冰垢土父子同穴而處燕在北邊鄒衍時周之五月正歲三月也中州內正月二月霜雪時降北邊至寒三月下霜未為變也此殆北邊三月尚寒霜適自降而行適呼與霜逢會 The south is exceedingly hot, boiling sand and red-hot stone. Father and son share the same bath water. The north is extremely cold, freezing ice and cracking earth. Father and son live in the same cave. Yen is on the northern border. In the time of Tsou Yen, the fifth month of the Chou calendar was what is now the third month of the accurate calendar. In the central regions in the first and second months frost and snow fall seasonally. The northern border is extremely cold, so frost falling in the third month would be nothing anomalous. This case was most likely the northern borderland still cold in the third month and frost forming of its own accord, while at the same time Yen shouted, just happening to coincide with the frost.

衡：傳曰燕有寒谷不生五穀鄒衍吹律寒谷復溫則能使氣溫亦能使氣復寒何知衍不令時人知己之冤以天氣表己之誠竊吹律於燕谷獄令氣寒而因呼天乎即不然者霜何故降 The account says that in Yen there is a cold valley in which food crops cannot grow; the cold valley warmed up when Tsou Yen had played a pitchpipe. Thus he would have been able to make vapor warm as well as making it cold again. How do we know that Yen didn't impress his contemporaries with the injustice of his arrest, getting sky to vouch for his sincerity by secretly blowing the pitchpipe in jail in that Yen valley, making the air cold and only then crying aloud to sky? Otherwise, why would frost have fallen?

衡：張儀游於楚楚相掠之被捶流血二子冤屈太史公列記其狀鄒衍見拘雖儀之比也且子長何諱不言案衍列傳不言見拘而使霜降偽書游言猶太子丹使日再中天雨粟也由此言之衍呼而降霜虛矣則杞梁之妻哭而崩城妄也 Fan Hui was falsely accused by Hsü Chia. Wei and Ch'ı punished him so severely that his limbs were broken and his ribs crushed. Chang Yi in the course of his travels went to Ch'ı, where the premier kidnaped him and had him beaten until blood flowed. The two men were badly mistreated; the Grand Recorder set down an account of it. Tsou Yen being arrested would have been on a par with Hui's and Yi's trouble. And what could Tzu-ch'ang be hiding by not mentioning it?

I do not find it mentioned in his biography that Tsou Yen was arrested and made frost fall. This is fiction, idle tales, like Prince Tan rolling the sun back to noon or making grain fall from the sky. Approaching the matter like this, Yen's causing frost to fall by crying aloud is shown to be baseless. Therefore the tale of the wife of Ch'ı Liang causing the wall to collapse by crying is silly.

衡：[頓→]中牟叛趙襄子帥師攻之軍到城下[頓→]中牟之城崩者十余丈襄子擊金而退之夫以杞梁妻哭而城崩襄子之軍有哭者乎秦之將滅都門內崩霍光家且敗第牆自壞誰哭於秦宮泣於霍光家者然而門崩牆壞秦霍敗亡之徵也或時杞國且圯而杞梁之妻適哭城下猶燕國適寒而鄒衍偶呼也 Chung-mou seceded and Chao Hsiang-tzu led an army to attack it. When they got below the city wall, more than eighty feet of the wall of Chung-mou collapsed. Hsiang-tzu ordered withdrawal by beating gongs. On the basis of Ch'ı Liang's wife making a wall collapse by crying, was someone crying in Hsiang-tzu's army? When Ch'ın was about to be destroyed, a gate in the capital wall collapsed inward. When Huo Kuang's house was facing defeat, the wall of his official mansion fell apart of its own accord. Who cried in the Ch'ın palace and Huo Kuang's household? Still, the collapse of the gatehouse and the falling apart of the wall were evidence of the coming eclipse and defeat of Ch'ın and Huo. Or else the state of Ch'ı was on the point of destruction and the wife of Ch'ı Liang just happened to cry at the foot of the city wall at that time, like Tsou Yen fortuitously happening to cry out just as Yen was about to get frost.

Interp of 2nd cl as "son" is late, perh not before Han. I suspect etymologically it is the same as in 舟子 and 君子 "attendant of, man charged with care of" ie vicar of the thunder-god. cf 宰, 天. 呂: 能養天之所生而勿撓之謂天子天子之也動以全天為故者也 It is having the power to nourish what Sky has given life to without damaging it that we mean by "Sky-ist." As to the activities of the "Sky-ist," they are things that take keeping Sky intact as basis. 漢: 往者不可及來者猶可待能明其世者謂之天子 What is gone cannot be regained, but what is to come can be anticipated. ✠ t'âg beat (v. next) 167 土

A note on some pitfalls of cross-comparison: the identical phrases 糞桴 and 土鼓 are found in another chapter of the 禮記 entitled 明堂位.

There they are given as items in a list in a manner that seems to show that the author of that essay took them not as fac-obj as I do in the utterance cited above, but as adj-head. I also find 土鼓 in the 周禮 in a context that makes it adj-head. I have found no other examples of 糞 writing a word meaning "agitate" nor of 土 writing a word meaning "beat". I have comparands for them but I also see these clear counter-examples. Why then do I prefer the comparand-based version?

First, syntax. Take two very common adj-head phrases, say for example 良馬 "good horse" and 小人 "petty man". If I saw *良馬而小人 I would simply not see those two adj-head phrases; I would have to read it as, "He thinks horses are good and deprecates humanity." Traditional Chinese scholars had a superb knowledge of CC—by sinological standards, which after all derive from those of the traditional scholars. And by sinological standards, phonology is worth only casual attention and syntax is worth even less. It is rare to find a scholiast rejecting another's interpretation of a passage on the grounds that it 不成文 "is ungrammatical". Taking 土鼓 as nuc, I can read these characters as "acted like a drum in an earthen manner" or "made a drum into earth" or (sup-pling an elided 於) "acted like earth with regard to a drum". (Note that into; it is the opposite of out of, which is what the scholiasts' claim would require.) None of these makes sense in or out of context. Legge finesses the syntactic difficulty by interpolating two verbs for which he could have seen no counterpart in the Chinese original, "fashioned" and "struck". One aspect of syntax did, I think, play a role in the scholiasts' interpretation. I suggest whoever proposed 由 for 賁 wanted a word semantically parallel to 土 that sounded like 賁 because 賁 and 土 are syntactically parallel in this sentence. So do I, but I want the result to make sense in Chinese.

Second, description of the artifacts. The 禮記 commentator says 土鼓築土為鼓 "dirt drum: make a drum of pounded earth". Pounded earth is a sturdy building material for foundations, walls and the like, but for making drums? The 周禮 commentator says 土鼓以瓦為匡以革為兩面 "dirt drum: make a box of pottery and make a pair of surfaces of leather". But 土 does not mean pottery; it means the clay of which pottery is made. The word for pottery is the word the commentator uses, 瓦. And anyway, such a drum could hardly be the same kind the 禮記 commentator describes because that was supposedly made before pottery had been invented. (V. notes under 禮, 舞.)

Third, no one else ever heard of these things. I don't find the phrase 土鼓 in any early text. According to the 周禮, the 土鼓 played a major role in royal calendrical ceremonies, yet I find no mention of it in 尚書 or 春秋 or 左傳 or 易經 or 山海經 or 論語 or 管子 or 荀子 or 商君書 or 晏子春秋 or 淮南子 or 呂氏春秋 or 戰國策 or 公羊傳 or 穀梁傳 or 竹書紀年 or 史記. The two graphs do occur in 漢書, where they write a ph:

Fourth, consider the sources. The paragraph in the 禮運 chapter of the 禮記 in which 賁 and 土鼓 are connected by 而 is different from the other two contexts. It is clear, grammatical prose in which sentence builds on sentence to progress to a conclusion. That its factual claims may be groundless and its conclusion erroneous has nothing to do with the style of the piece: this is how intelligent adults talk sensibly when trying to persuade others. The 明堂位 might, like the 爾雅, be subtitled "List of words from old books". It was not added to the 禮記 until the 2nd C AD, and has a reputation, I think deserved, as a piece of fluff concocted by some semi-literate idler. The 周禮, except for the thoroughly authentic-seeming 考工記 that forms its last section, is another idle concoction, despite its superficial appearance of being an official manual.

Thus the commentators' justification for their claim that 賁 and 土鼓 in 禮運 are the same words seen in 明堂位 ends up not only not justifying their claim, but impeaching the source of their evidence, by revealing the likelihood that they were uncritically copied from a misconstrued source.

Cross-comparison of vocabulary between texts is not a simple job that can be done by mechanically matching graphs. Reading characters leads away from where we want to go; only by reading language can we understand texts in their own terms.

gadfly, a minor injury with a major irritation. They can be picked out with a needle. They are pure red, like cinnabar. Put one on your fingernail and it will move around. If you don't pick them out, the bugs burrow all the way to the bone, and then go everywhere throughout the body. They are like the marksman beetle in this, that they are invariably fatal. [Note: chiggers do not burrow. In the larval stage of their life cycle they creep into hair follicles, where they suck nourishment from the host's skin tissue, then drop off the host and metamorphose into non-parasitic adult mites. 君臣不正人道不和國多盜賊下怨其上則責之司徒故三典其職憂其分舉其辯明其隱此三公之任也 What are the three ducal ministers? They are the minister of works, the minister of war and the minister of manpower. The minister of war is responsible for the sky, the minister of works for the earth and the minister of manpower for the people. Thus if yin and yang are not in harmony, if the four seasons are not in rhythm, if the stars lose their regularities, if disasters and anomalies distort normality then we task the minister of war with that. If mountains collapse, if stream valleys do not flow, if the five grains do not grow nor plants and trees flourish, we task the minister of works with that. If ruler and minister are not aligned, if the way of man is not in harmony, if there are many thieves and robbers in the land and inferiors resent their superiors then we task the minister of manpower with that. Thus the three ducal ministers keep their duties in control, worried about the demarcations, offering their analyses and making clear what had been obscure. These are the responsibilities of the three ducal ministers.

子大夫之所睹聞也賢良明於古今王事之體受策察問咸以書對著之於篇朕親覽焉於是董仲舒公孫弘等出焉 There was an imperial rescript to the most capable: "Of old in the days of Yao and Shun they painted likenesses and none of the folk transgressed; wherever the sun and moon shone, all were submissively obedient. Under the Completion and Tranquility kings of Chou, punishments were put in abeyance and not used and good will extended to wild creatures and doctrine pervaded the four quarters. Nations from beyond the wilderness, Hsiao-shên, Pei-fa, Chü-sou and Ti-ch'iang came to submit. The stars did not deviate from their courses, the sun and moon were not eclipsed, mountain slopes never slid, valley streams were never blocked. Unicorns and phoenixes inhabited thickets near the capital; The Ho and the Luo sent forth diagrams and writings. Alas, what shall we do to reach this state? Now it has fallen to Us to uphold the ancestral temples. We rise early and strive; We retire late and ponder. We are as if crossing deep water still unsure of our landing. Is that not daunting? Is that not overwhelming? What is to be done so as to make obvious the grand aims and beneficent charisma of the former emperors and to connect to Yao and Shun in high antiquity and parallel the three kings in recent? That We have lacked perspicacity and have not been able to extend Our moral influence to distant places—this is something all you gentlemen and officers have heard and seen. The most capable are clear-sighted about the entirety of royal affairs ancient and modern. They will receive commissions to make close inquiry, and will all reply in writing, writing on rolls of bamboo strips which We will examine in person." But if we assume the scribes and Tsai Chih-chü to have genuinely believed it to be ill-omened, then they were no different from the vulgar of today. Now the four sides of a house are earth all around. If on three sides we do not call it ill-omened, why do we alone say that enlarging the west side is baleful? How does enlarging a house on the west side harm the body of the earth or the spirit of the house? If enlarging it on the west side is ill-omened, do we improve things by taking away some of it on the west? The rulers of those two states were unwilling. Rhinohead said, "Let's ask for fifty thousand men for no longer than five months and Chao will be smashed." T'ien P'an said, "But those who employ their armies for scant reasons find their states easily imperiled, and those who employ their schemes for scant reasons find themselves easily put at a loss. Now, sir, you would speak of Chao being very easy to smash—I fear there might be some retribution afterward." Rhinohead said, "That, sir, is because you are not thinking clearly. Look, the two rulers are surely not willing to do it of their own, and now you moreover talk about how there will be difficulties, thus scaring them—that means Chao will not be smashed and the plans of the two of us will be in trouble. But if you speak only of the easy part, sir, and after the affair has been set in motion, after battle has been joined and the weapons clash, if the Marquis of T'ien and the Lord of Liang then see that it will be dangerous, how would they dare disperse their forces and not let us have them?" T'ien P'an said, "Good." He went ahead and urged the two rulers to accept Rhinohead's idea, and the two officers were given control of troops of Ch'i and Wei. Even before they had crossed the frontier, the two rulers became afraid that they would be defeated when they got there, so they totally mobilized their armies and went after them and greatly smashed Chao.

戰:西門豹為鄴令而辭魏文侯曰子往矣 Hsi-mèn Pao was appointed administrator of Yeh but declined the appointment. The Cynosure Marquess of Wei said, "No, you go after all."

史:魏文侯時西門豹為鄴令豹往到鄴會長老問之民所疾苦長老曰苦為河伯娶婦以故貧豹問其故對曰鄴三老廷掾常歲賦斂百姓收取其錢得數百萬用其二三十萬為河伯娶

婦與祝巫共分其餘錢持歸 In the time of the Cynosure Marquess of Wei, Hsi-mèn Pao was appointed administrator of Yeh. Pao traveled to Yeh and met with the oldest men. He asked them what folk suffered most from. They said, "The worst is we have to marry a woman to the River Boss, so we're all poor." Pao asked to hear the details, and they told him the preceptors and chief clerks of Yeh every year levy an assessment on the citizens, taking in several million cash and using two or three hundred thousand in betrothing a wife to the River Boss, and then divide the rest up with the officiant shamaness to take home.

史:當其時巫行視小家女好者云是當為河伯婦即聘取洗沐之為治新繒綺縠衣間居齋戒為治齋宮河上張緹絳帷女居其中為具牛酒飯食[行↓]十餘日共[粉→]船飾之如嫁女床席令女居其上浮之河中始浮行數十里乃沒 When the time for it came, shamanesses would go about looking at low-ranking families who had pretty daughters and say, "This one should be the River Boss's wife." And so she was betrothed. They bathed and shampooed her, and had clothing specially made for her of satin, silk lace and gossamer. She had nothing to do but follow tabus and restrictions. For that they made a ritual enclosure at the river's edge, putting up red screening-curtains, and she dwelt within, and she stayed there ten days or more. They provided everything in the way of beef and wine and steamed grain and other food. They supplied a boat, decorated it as if it were a nuptial bed, had the woman get on it and floated it out onto the river. It floated for some miles and then sank.

史:其人家有好女者恐大巫祝為河伯取之以故多持女遠逃亡以故城中益空無人又因貧所從來久遠矣民人俗語曰即不為河伯娶婦水來漂沒溺其民云 Local families who had a pretty daughter feared the great shamaness would condemn her to be taken for the River Boss, so many of them took their daughters and fled far away. Thus the city became more and more empty and depopulated, and poorer as well. That had been going on for a long time. The local tradition was that if ever they did not give a bride to the River Boss, the water would rise in waves and drown the people.

史:西門豹曰至為河伯娶婦時願三老巫祝父老送女河上幸來告語之吾亦往送女皆曰諾 Hsi-mèn Pao said, "When the time comes to give the bride to the River Boss, I want the preceptors, the shamanesses and the village elders to send her off at the river bank. You favor us with your presence and your address to her. I also will go there to send her off." They all agreed.

史:至其時西門豹往會之河上三老官屬豪長者里父老皆會以人民往觀之者[三二→]二三千人其巫老女子也已年七十從弟子女十人所皆衣繒單衣立大巫後西門豹曰呼河伯婦來視其好醜 When the time came, Hsi-mèn Pao went to join them. Preceptors, government workers, men of exemplary good character and village elders all attended. Those who observed in the capacity of ordinary citizens were two or three thousand. The shamaness was an old woman, fully seventy. Her acolytes were ten or more women all wearing single-layer fine silk clothing, standing behind the grand shamaness. Hsi-mèn Pao said, "Call forth the bride of the River Boss. I will see how pretty she is.”

史：豹視之顧謂三老[巫祝→]祝巫父老曰是女子不好煩大巫媪為入報河伯得更好女後日送之 Pao looked at her. He looked back and said to the preceptors, the officiant shamaness and the elders, “This woman is not pretty. I will trouble the great shamaness to go into the river because of that and report to the River Boss that we have to look again for a pretty woman, whom we will send in a few days.”

史：即使吏卒共抱大巫媪投之河中有頃曰巫媪何久也弟子趣之復以弟子一人投河中有頃曰弟子何久也復使一人趣之復投一弟子河中凡投三弟子西門豹曰巫媪弟子是女子也不能白事煩三老為入白之復投三老河中 At that he had the sergeant and his squad bind the great shamaness bodily and throw her into the river. After a while he said, “Why is the shamaness taking so long? Let an acolyte hurry her.” He had one of the acolytes thrown into the river in the same manner. After a while he said, “Why is the acolyte taking so long?” He had another acolyte thrown into the river in the same manner. When they had thrown a total of three acolytes, Hsi-mên Pao said, “The shamaness herself and the acolytes are just women; they can’t make a proper report of the matter. I will trouble the preceptors to enter and report it.” And he had them thrown in in the same manner.

史：西門豹簪[筆→]紘折嚮河立待良久長老傍觀者皆驚恐西門豹顧曰巫媪三老不來還奈之何欲復使廷掾與豪長者一人入趣之皆叩頭叩頭且破額流血地色如死灰西門豹曰諾且留待之須臾須臾豹曰廷掾起矣狀河伯留客之久若皆罷去歸矣鄴吏民大驚恐從是以後不敢復言為河伯娶婦 Hsi-mên Pao tucked in his belt-seal and stood leaning over the river, watching, for a long time. The elders and officials and bystanders observing this were all terribly frightened. Hsi-mên Pao looked back and said, “The shamaness herself and the preceptors have not returned. What shall we do about that? I am inclined to send one each of chief clerks and exemplary characters to hurry them.” All kowtowed, knocking their heads on the ground till they were about to break and blood flowed from their foreheads, their faces like ashes. Hsi-mên Pao said, “Very well. We will stay here and wait for them for a while.” In a while Pao said, “You chief clerks get up now. It turns out the River Boss detains his visitors a long time. You are all dismissed. Go home.” The officials and people of Yeh were terribly frightened. From that time on, no one ever again dared mention betrothing a wife to the River Boss. 史：傳曰子產治鄴民不能欺子賤治單父民不忍欺西門豹治鄴民不敢欺 Tradition has it that when Tzū-ch’an governed Chêng people couldn’t deceive him; when Tzū-chien governed Shan-fu people couldn’t bear to deceive him; when Hsi-mên Pao governed Yeh people didn’t dare deceive him.

史:蘇秦之弟曰代代弟蘇厲見兄遂亦皆學及蘇秦死代乃求見燕王欲襲故事 Su Ch'in's younger brother was named Tai, and junior to him was Su Li. When they saw how their elder brother had prospered, they both studied. When Su Ch'in had died, Tai sought audience with the king of Yen, wanting to repeat what had been done before.

史:曰臣東周之鄙人也竊聞大王義甚高鄙人不敏釋鉏耨而干大王至於邯鄲所見者絀於所聞於東周臣竊負其志及至燕廷觀王之群臣下吏王天下之明王也 He said, "I am a hayseed from East Chou. Though it was none of my business, I heard YGM set a very high standard of doing what is right. This bumpkin, dull as he is, ventures to lay aside his hoe and mattock and seek audience with YGM. What I saw when I reached Hantan was overborne by what I had heard in East Chou, so that I considered abandoning my intention. Having reached the court of Yen, I observed YM's ministers and lower officers. YM is the most intelligent king in the world."

史:對曰臣聞明王務聞其過不欲聞其善臣請謁王之過夫齊趙者燕之仇讎也楚魏者燕之援國也今王奉仇讎以伐援國非所以利燕也王自慮之此則計過無以聞者非忠臣也 "I have heard that an intelligent king makes it a point to be told of his errors. He does not wish to hear of what he has done well. Permit me to report your errors. Chi and Chao are Yen's enemies. Ch'u and Wei are states that help Yen. Yet we find YM supporting enemies to attack states that help; that is not how to benefit Yen. YM can figure out for yourself that this is clearly a failure of planning. That you have not heard of it is not because of ministers who are men of integrity." 史:王曰夫齊者固寡人之讎所欲伐也直患國敝力不足也子能以燕伐齊則寡人舉國委子 The king said, "Ch'i is indeed my enemy and is the one I want to attack. All that troubles me is that my state is exhausted and its strength insufficient. If you can get Yen to attack Ch'i, sir, then I place my entire state in your hands."

史:對曰凡天下戰國七燕處弱焉獨戰則不能有所附則無不重南附楚楚重西附秦秦重中附韓魏韓魏重且苟所附之國重此必使王重矣 "There are a total of seven warring states in the world, and Yen stands as weakest among them. If you fight alone you will fail. If you adhere to others, any of them would become more weighty. [無不重 = 無所不重] If you adhere to Ch'u on the south, Ch'u will become weighty. If you adhere to Ch'in on the west, Ch'in will become weighty. If you adhere to Hân and Wei in the center, they will become weighty. Also, if it turns out that the state you adhere to becomes weighty, then that will certainly make YM weighty as well.

史:今夫齊長主而自用也南攻楚五年畜聚竭西困秦三年士卒罷敝北與燕人戰覆三軍得二將然而以其餘兵南面舉五千乘之大宋而包十二諸侯此其君欲得其民力竭惡足取乎且臣聞之數戰則民勞久師則兵敝矣 Now regarding Ch'i, they are skilled at taking charge of things and consider only themselves. In the south they attacked Ch'u for five years, using up their stores. On the west they harassed Ch'in for three years, and their officers and men were exhausted. On the north they did battle with the Yen and routed the whole army and captured two generals. Even so, with their remaining forces they turned south and took the great five-thousand-chariot Sung and enveloped the twelve barons. How would this be a worthy choice, having the ruler's desire achieved but the people's strength used up? I have also heard that if they fight many battles, the folk become weary, and if they are in active service for long, weapons become worn.

史:燕王曰吾聞齊有清濟濁河可以爲固長城鉅防足以爲塞誠有之乎對曰天時不與雖有清濟濁河惡足以爲固民力罷敝雖有長城鉅防惡足以爲塞且異日濟西[不→]而師所以備趙也河北[不→]而師所以備燕也今濟西河北盡已役矣封內敝矣 The king of Yen said, "I have heard that Ch'i has the clear Chi and the muddy Ho to make it secure and territorial walls and giant banks to be its barriers. Is that really true?" He replied, "If natural occasions do not cooperate, even though it has the clear Chi and the muddy Ho, how would they suffice to make it secure? If the people are worn out, even though it has giant banks, how would they suffice to be its barriers? Furthermore, at other times they deployed for attack at Chi-hsi; that was in precaution against Chao. They deployed for attack at Ho-pei; that was against Yen. Now the Chi-hsi and Ho-pei deployments have all been stood down, and the whole country is exhausted.

能無羞從子母弟以爲質寶珠玉帛以事左右彼將有德燕而輕亡宋則齊可亡已 Proud rulers must love gain, and the officers of a doomed state must be greedy for possessions. If YM can wholeheartedly acquiesce in humbly allowing a younger full brother of your son to be a hostage, and give precious stones and valuable cloth to his servants, he will feel obligated to Yen and take lightly the loss of Sung—then Ch'i can be done away with.

史:燕王曰吾終以子受命於天矣 The king of Yen said, "It has turned out that I receive a mandate from Sky through you, sir."

史:燕乃使一子質於齊而蘇厲因燕質子而求見齊王齊王怨蘇秦欲囚蘇厲燕質子爲謝已遂委質[正義質真稟反]爲齊臣 The king of Yen then sent a son as hostage to Ch'i, and Su Li sought audience with the king of Ch'i on that basis. The king of Ch'i still resented Su Ch'in and wanted to imprison Su Li. The Yen king's son who was hostage spoke up for him. After that he was given an official token as minister in Ch'i.

史:燕相子之與蘇代婚而欲得燕權乃使蘇代待質子於齊 The premier of Yen, Tz'u-chih, was related to Su Tai by marriage. He wanted to seize power in Yen, so he sent Su Tai to attend the prince who was hostage in Ch'i.

史:齊使代報燕燕王噲問曰齊王其霸乎曰不能曰何也曰不信其臣 Ch'i sent Tai to report to Yen. King Kuai of Yen asked, "Can it be that the king of Ch'i will become overlord?" "No." "Why not?" "He doesn't trust his ministers."

史:燕王專任子之已而讓位燕大亂齊伐燕殺王噲子之燕立昭王而蘇代蘇厲遂不敢入燕皆終歸齊齊善待之蘇代過魏魏爲燕執代 The king of Yen gave complete authority to Tz'u-chih and wound up ceding the throne to him. Yen became very chaotic. Ch'i attacked Yen and killed King Kuai and Tz'u-chih. After Yen had enthroned the Renowned King, Su Tai and Su Li no longer dared to enter Yen. They wound up going to Ch'i, where they were well treated. When Su Tai was passing through Wei they arrested him on behalf of Yen.

史:齊使人謂魏王曰齊請以宋地封涇陽君秦必不受秦非不利有齊而得宋地也不信齊王與蘇子也今齊魏不和如此其甚則齊不欺秦秦信齊齊秦合涇陽君有宋地非魏之利也王不如東蘇子秦必疑齊而不信蘇子矣齊秦不合天下無變伐齊之形成矣 A Ch'i emissary said to the king of Wei, "Ch'i has asked to be allowed to enfeoff Lord Ching-yang in some of the territory of Sung. Ch'in will never grant that. It is not that Ch'in would not benefit from having Ch'i on their side and gaining land from Sung. It's that they don't trust the king of Ch'i and Mr. Su. The disharmony between Ch'i and Wei being this deep would imply that Ch'i is not deceiving Ch'in. Ch'in accepting the good faith of Ch'i, Ch'i and Ch'in in harmony, and Lord Ching-yang in possession of Sung territory would not be to the advantage of Wei. YM had best let Mr. Su go east. Ch'in will surely become suspicious of Ch'i and no longer trust Mr. Su. If Ch'i and Ch'in are not in accord, and if nothing unpredictable happens elsewhere in the world, then the circumstances for attacking Ch'i will have been accomplished."

史：於是出蘇代之宋宋善待之齊伐宋宋急蘇代乃遣燕昭王書 Then they let Su Tai go. Tai went to Sung, where he was well treated. Ch'i attacked Sung, which was hard pressed. Then Su Tai sent a letter to the Renowned King of Yen. 史：曰夫列在萬乘而寄質於齊名卑而權輕奉萬乘助齊伐宋民勞而實費夫破宋殘楚淮北肥大齊讎疆而國害此三者皆國之大敗也然且王行之者將以取信於齊也齊加不信於王而忌燕愈甚王之計過矣夫以宋加之淮北強萬乘之國也而齊并之是益一齊也北夷方七百里加以魯衛[疆]萬乘之國也而齊并之是益二齊也夫一齊之疆燕猶狼顧而不能支今以三齊臨燕其禍必大矣 It said, "To give hostages to Ch'i and yet be among those of ten thousand chariots dishonors your name and decreases your power. If you offer the assistance of your ten thousand chariots to Ch'i in smashing Sung, your people will be worn out and your substance dissipated. If you smash Sung and cut off Huai-pei from Ch'u to enrich the large state of Ch'i, your enemy will be made stronger and your state harmed. These three would be great defeats for your state. That withal YM will do this is because you intend by it to earn the trust of Ch'i. Should Ch'i become more suspicious of YM and their detestation of Yen increase that would prove that YM's plan was mistaken. Now adding Sung to Huai-pei would make a state of ten thousand chariots. If Ch'i annexes it this would be to add another Ch'i. The North Yi have seven hundred li square. Adding to that Lu and Wei would make a state of ten thousand chariots. If Ch'i annexes it this would be to add two more Ch'i. The strength of a single Ch'i is more than Yen could withstand, enough to make you nervous. If they menace you with three times that, it would surely be a great calamity. 史：雖然智者舉事因禍為福轉敗為功齊紫敗素也而賈十倍越王句踐棲於會稽復殘疆吳而霸天下此皆因禍為福轉敗為功者也 "Nonetheless, when the intelligent undertake some affair, they make good luck starting from bad luck and turn failure into success. The purple dye of Ch'i weakened the cloth, but raised its price tenfold. King Kou Chien of Yüeh moved to Kuei-chi but returned to cut down powerful Wu and become overlord of the world. These are both cases of making good luck starting from bad luck and turning failure into success. 史：今王若欲因禍為福轉敗為功則莫若挑霸齊而尊之使使盟於周室焚秦符曰其大上計破秦其次必長賓之 "Now if YM wants to make good luck starting from bad luck and turn failure into success, the best thing would be to take the lead in making Ch'i the overlord and honoring them. Send an emissary to the house of Chou, burn the tallies of Ch'in, say, 'As to the best plan, smash Ch'in; as to the next-best, we must contain Ch'in for a long time.' 史：秦挾實以待破秦王必患之秦五代伐諸侯今為齊下秦王之志苟得窮齊不憚以國為功 "With Ch'in surrounded and contained, waiting to be smashed, the king of Ch'in will surely be troubled by that. Ch'in has been attacking other barons for five generations, but now they are held down by Ch'i. As to the aims of the king of Ch'in, so long as he can get to exhaust the resources of Ch'i, he will not hesitate to ignore the needs of other states. 史：然則王何不使辯士以此言說秦王曰燕趙破宋肥齊尊之為之下者燕趙非利之也燕趙不利而勢為之者以不信秦王也然則王何不使可信者接收燕趙令涇陽君高陵君先於燕趙秦有變因以為質則燕趙信秦 "So, why doesn't YM send an eloquent officer to persuade the king of Ch'in in these words: 'Yen and Chao are smashing Sung and aggrandizing Ch'i, paying it homage and deferring to it, not because Yen and Chao consider that beneficial. That Yen and Chao are forced to do this by circumstances even though they don't consider it beneficial is because they don't trust Ch'in. If so, then why not send someone they can trust as emissary to draw Yen and Chao into close contact? If Lord Ching-yang and Lord Kao-ling go to Yen and Chao, so they can be made hostages if Ch'in tries some funny business, then Yen and Chao could trust Ch'in. 史：秦為西帝燕為北帝趙為中帝立三帝以令於天下韓魏不聽則秦伐之齊不聽則燕趙伐之天下孰敢不聽天下服聽因驅韓魏以伐齊曰必反宋地歸楚淮北 "Ch'in would become emperor in the west, Yen in the north and Chao in the center; establishment of three emperors would be the means of commanding the world. If H'an and Wei disobey then Ch'in will attack them. If Ch'i disobeys then Yen and Chao will attack it. Who in the world would disobey? With the world submissive and obedient, we can go on to press H'an and Wei to attack Ch'i and say, "You must return the land of Sung and give Huai-pei back to Ch'u." 史：反宋地歸楚淮北燕趙之所利也並立三帝燕趙之所願也夫實得所利尊得所願燕趙棄齊如脫躡矣 "Returning the land of Sung and giving Huai-pei back to Ch'u is something that would benefit Yen and Chao. Jointly establishing three emperors is something that Yen and Chao want. If in tangible things they get what they think valuable, and in terms of prestige they get what they want, Yen and Chao would abandon Ch'i as if removing sandals. 史：今不收燕趙齊霸必成諸侯贊齊而王不從是國伐也諸侯贊齊而王從之是名卑也今收燕趙國安而名尊不收燕趙國危而名卑夫去尊安而取危卑智者不為也 "If you do not now accept Yen and Chao then the overlordship of Ch'i will be accomplished. If the barons assist Ch'i and YM does not go along with them, then your state will be attacked. If the barons assist Ch'i and YM goes along with them, that would be to degrade your reputation. Here if you accept Yen and Chao your state will be secure and your reputation honored. If you do not accept Yen and Chao your state will be endangered and your reputation degraded. Discarding honor and security and choosing danger and degradation—an intelligent person would not do that.' 史：秦王聞若說必若刺心然則王何不使辯士以此[若言]說秦秦必取齊必伐矣夫取秦厚交也伐齊正利也尊厚交務正利聖王之事也 "When the king of Ch'in hears such a proposal, it will be like a stab in the heart. So why doesn't YM send an eloquent officer to make this presentation to Ch'in? Then Ch'in can be won to your side and Ch'i can be attacked. Now, getting Ch'in on your side is a firm connection and attacking Ch'i is properly beneficial. To value firm connections and aim at proper benefit is what a sage king does." 史：燕昭王善其書曰先人嘗有德蘇氏子之亂而蘇氏去燕燕欲報仇於齊非蘇氏莫可乃蘇代復善待之與謀伐齊竟破齊潛王出走 The Renowned King of Yen thought highly of this letter. He said, "Our forebears have incurred a debt to Mr. Su. After the revolt of Tz'ü-chih, Mr. Su left Yen. Yen wants to requite the enmity of Ch'i; with no one but Mr. Su is that possible." He then sent for Su Tai, again treated him well and plotted with him to attack Ch'i. They eventually smashed Ch'i, and the Lost King fled. 史：久之秦召燕王燕王欲往蘇代約燕王曰楚得枳而國亡齊得宋而國亡齊楚不得以有枳宋而事秦者何也則有功者秦之深讎也秦取天下非行義也暴也 After some time, Ch'in summoned the king of Yen. The king wanted to go but Su Tai restrained him. He said, "Ch'u obtained Chih and lost their own state. Ch'i obtained Sung and lost their own state. Why is it that Ch'i and Ch'u could not serve Ch'in while having possession of Chih and Sung? Because anyone who accomplishes things is the profound enemy of Ch'in. If Ch'in controls the world, it won't be by doing right, it will be by violence. 史：秦之行暴正告天下告楚曰蜀地之甲乘船浮於汶乘夏水而下江五日而至郢漢中之甲乘船出於巴乘夏水而下漢四日而至五渚寡人積甲宛東下隨智者不及謀勇士不及怒寡人如射隼矣王乃欲待天下之攻函谷不亦遠乎楚王為是故十七年事秦 "Ch'in's use of violence was an open announcement to the world. They were telling Ch'u, 'Armored troops of the land of Shu would board boats and launch at Min, and, taking advantage of the summertime river flow, would descend the Yangtze and get to Ying in five days. The armored troops of Han-chung would board boats and issue from Pa, descending the Han and reaching Five Islets in four days by taking advantage of the summertime river flow. We would mass armored troops east of Wan and descend to Sui. Your brightest counselors would have no time to plan, nor your bravest warriors to burst into action. It would be as if we shot a falcon. If YM then wanted the rest of the world to assault the Han-ku barrier, it would be far too late.' On that account, the king of Ch'u served Ch'in for seventeen years. 史：秦正告韓曰我起乎少曲一日而斷大行我起乎宜陽而觸平陽二日而莫不盡繇我離兩周而觸鄭五日而國舉韓氏以為然故事秦 "They were openly telling H'an, 'We would start from Shao-ch'ü and be over the Tai-hang in a day. If we start from Yi-yang and punch into Ping-yang, two days later nothing would remain untaken. If we leave the twin Chou and punch into Cheng, in five days the state would be taken.' Taking advantage of the summertime river flow, we would launch light boats, with strong crossbows in front and long spears and hook-lances behind. If we cross the Jung river at its mouth then Wei would not have Ta-liang. If we cross the White Horse at its mouth then Wei would not have Wai-huang and Chi-yang. If we cross the Su-hsi at its mouth then Wei would not have Ch'ü and Tun-ch'iu. If we attack over land we will strike He-nei; if we attack on the river then we will reduce Ta-liang.' The Wei clan took that to be the case, so they submitted to Ch'in.

They said, 'The king of Sung is evil. He made a wooden man to look like Us and shot it in the face. Our land is apart from theirs and our army distant; we cannot attack them. If YM can smash Sung and take possession of it, it will be as if We ourselves got it.' After they had taken An-yi and barricaded Nü-chi, they thereafter blamed Ch'i for smashing Sung.

If Ch'i continues to exist, Ch'in will not; if Ch'in continues to exist, Ch'i will not. We must attack them and destroy them.' After they had got Yi-yang, Shao-ch'ü, Chih-lin and Li-shih, they thereafter blamed the rest of the world for smashing Ch'i.

When he arrived at his home, his wife would not lay out his bedding, his sister-in-law would not cook for him and his parents would not speak to him. Su Ch'in gave a long sigh and said, "My wife doesn't accept me as her husband, my sister-in-law doesn't accept me as her brother-in-law and my parents don't accept me as their son. This is all my own fault." He rummaged several dozen boxes and got a book of schemes, The Secret Tallies of the Grand Master. He bent over them and memorized them, refining them in fine detail to make of them a forged, polished weapon. When, while reading, he felt a desire to sleep he pulled out an awl and stabbed himself in the thigh until the blood flowed down to his foot. He said, "How could it be that I declaim these to rulers and not get gold, jewels, brocade and embroidered cloth and achieve the honor of premier?" They had just punished Shang Yang and were sick and tired of sophists; they didn't hire him. 史：乃東之趙趙肅侯令其弟成爲相號奉陽君奉陽君弗說[之] So he went east to Chao. The Solemn Marquess of Chao made his younger brother Ch'eng prime minister, with the title Lord F'eng-yang. Lord F'eng-yang was displeased with him. 史：去游燕歲餘而後得見說燕文侯曰燕東有朝鮮遼東北有林胡樓煩西有雲中九原南有崤沱易水地方二千餘里帶甲數十萬車六百乘騎六千匹粟支數年南有碣石鴈門之饒北有棗栗之利民雖不佃作而足於棗栗矣此所謂天府者也 He left and traveled to Yen. He got audience only after more than a year. He made this proposal to the Cynosure marquess of Yen: "To the east of Yen are Chi'ahsien and Liaotung; to the north are Linhu and Loufan; to the west are Yünchung and Chiuyüan and to the south are the Hut'o and Yi rivers. The land is over 2000 square li, men at arms several hundred thousand, chariots six hundred, cavalry six thousand and stored grain to support them for several years. In the south there are the abundance of Chieh-shih and Yenmên; in the north there is the benefit of jujubes and chestnuts. Even if the people didn't exert themselves to work the land, there would be a sufficiency of jujubes and chestnuts. This is what I call a natural treasury." [I have translated the first two mini-Baedekers in this biography. I will skip the rest.] 史：夫安樂無事不見覆軍殺將無過燕者大王知其所以然乎夫燕之所以不犯寇被甲兵者以趙之爲蔽其南也秦趙五戰秦再勝而趙三勝秦趙相斃而王以全燕制其後此燕之所以不犯寇也 "For being at peace and ease, untroubled, never having had armies routed and generals slain, Yen is unsurpassed. Does YGM see why that is so? That Yen does not experience incursions nor suffer the weight of arms is because Chao forms a protective screen to your south. Ch'in and Chao did battle five times; Ch'in won twice, Chao three times. Ch'in and Chao would wear each other out and YM would be left in control of their rear with an intact Yen—that is why Yen has not experienced attacks."

千里之外趙之攻燕也戰於百里之內夫不憂百里之患而重千里之外計無過於此者 "Ch'in reckons that even if they gain some cities of Yen, they definitely won't be able to hold them. That Ch'in cannot harm Yen has surely been made obvious. On the other hand, if Chao were to attack Yen, in less than ten days from the proclamation and orders for war an army of several tens of thousands would deploy at Tung-Yüan. Crossing the Hut'o and the Yi, in no more than four or five days they would be drawn up at your capital. Thus I say that for Ch'in to attack Yen is to fight over a thousand li away; for Chao to attack Yen is to fight less than a hundred li away. Now, to be untroubled by danger within a hundred li but to take seriously what is beyond a thousand li—no calculation is more misguided than this."

史：是故願大王與趙從親天下爲一則燕國必無患矣文侯曰子言則可然吾國小西迫疆趙南近齊齊趙強國也子必欲合從以安燕寡人請以國從 "Thus I urge YGM to form a vertical alliance with Chao. When the world has been unified then Yen will surely no longer be endangered." The Cynosure Marquess said, "What you say is all right as far as it goes, but my state is small. On the west we abut powerful Chao; on the south we are close to Ch'i. Ch'i and Chao are strong states. If you genuinely wish to form a vertical alliance that will make Yen safe, We wish to put Our state at your disposal."

史：於是資蘇秦車馬金帛以至趙而奉陽君已死即因說趙肅侯曰天下卿相人臣及布衣之士皆高賢君之行義皆願奉教陳忠於前之日久矣雖然奉陽君始而君不任事是以賓客游士莫敢自盡於前者今奉陽君捐館舍君乃今復與士相親也臣故敢進其愚慮 With that he provided Su Ch'in with carriages, horses, gold and silk to go to Chao, where Lord Fengyang had already died. He then proceeded to make this proposal to the Solemn Marquess of Chao: "For a long time now everyone in the whole world, from the premier down to the poorest knight, has admired YGM's way of doing right, and has wanted to receive instructions and demonstrate their integrity in your presence. However, Lord Fengyang was jealous and YL did not delegate responsibility. That is why none of the guests or itinerant officers dared to express themselves freely in your presence. Now Lord F'engyang has relinquished control of the hostels and dormitories [where visiting rhetors were lodged], YL is now once again in amiable relation with officers and folk. YS thus now dares to present his dull-witted opinions.

史：竊爲君計者莫若安民無事且無庸有事於民也安民之本在於擇交擇交而得則民安擇交而不得則民終身不安請言外患齊秦爲兩敵而民不得安倚秦攻齊而民不得安倚齊攻秦而民不得安 "If I may presume to lay it out for YL, the best thing is to make the population secure so that there are no exigencies; and indeed, there is no necessity for them to experience exigencies. The basis of population security lies in discrimination in foreign relations. If that is done right, the population is secure. If done wrong, the population will never be secure. Let me speak of foreign threats. Whether both Ch'i and Ch'in are your enemies, or you rely on Ch'in in attacking Ch'i or vice versa, the population will not be secure.

史：故夫謀人之主伐人之國常苦出辭斷絕人之交也願君慎勿出於口[...]" "Thus, for example, if one plots against a ruler of others or will attack another's country, one always bitterly regrets having said something that severs relations with foreigners. I would like YL to be scrupulous about letting no such words pass your lips. [garbled] 史：君誠能聽臣燕必致旂裘狗馬之地齊必致魚鹽之海楚必致橘柚之園韓魏中山皆可使致湯沐之奉而貴戚父兄皆可以受封侯 "If YL can genuinely accept my advice, Yen will surely turn over to you lands of felt cloaks, dogs and horses; Ch'i will surely turn over to you seashore of fish and salt; Ch'u will surely turn over to you orchards of oranges and pomelos. Hán, Wei and Chungshan can all be made to submit assigned revenue, from which nobles and members of the royal family can receive enfeoffment.

史：夫割地包利五伯之所以覆軍禽將而求也封侯貴戚湯武之所以放弑而爭也今君高拱而兩有之此臣之所以爲君願也 "Now, annexing land and incorporating its income is what the five overlords sought at the cost of ruined armies and captured generals. To be enfeoffed and ennobled are what T'ang and Wu vied for at the cost of deposition and assassination. For YL to be exalted and have both of those is what I want to make of this on YL's behalf.

史：今大王與秦則秦必弱韓魏與齊則齊必弱楚魏魏弱則割河外韓弱則效宜陽宜陽效則上郡絕河外割則道不通楚弱則無援此三策者不可不孰計也 "Suppose YGM were to ally with Ch'in; then surely Ch'in would weaken Hán and Wei. Ally with Ch'i and Ch'i will surely weaken Ch'u and Wei. If Wei is weakened, they will cede Ho-wai. If Hán is weakened then they will relinquish Yi-yang. If Yi-yang is relinquished then Shang commandery will be isolated. If Ho-wai is ceded then the road will be impassable. If Ch'u is weakened they will be of no help. These three strategies must be fully thought out.

史：秦下軹道則南陽危劫韓包周則趙氏自操兵據衛取卷則齊必入朝秦秦欲已得乎山東則必舉兵而嚮趙矣秦甲渡河踰漳據番吾則兵必戰於邯鄲之下矣此臣之所爲君患也 "If Ch'in comes down the Chih road, Nan-yang will be endangered. If they frighten Hán and envelop Chou, the Chao clan will be fighting by yourselves. If they seize W'ei and take Ch'üan, Ch'i would have to attend court in Ch'in as a subordinate. If Ch'in's aims are attained east of the mountains then they will surely turn their arms toward Chao. If Ch'in armor crosses the Yellow River, passes the Chang and captures P'owu then arms must clash near Hantan. These are things I feel concern for on YL's behalf.

worth scant consideration. Ch'in regards none in the world as more harmful than Chao, but Ch'in does not dare raise a force and attack Chao. Why? They fear that Hán and Wei would take aim at their rear. Hán and Wei are the southern screen of Chao. In the case of Ch'in attacking Hán and Wei, there being no barriers of famous mountains or great rivers, they would nibble away bit by bit, not stopping until they approached the capitals. Hán and Wei cannot hold off Ch'in; they would have to join Ch'in in a subordinate role. If Ch'in hadn't Hán and Wei to circumscribe it, then misfortune would befall Chao. This is what I am troubled by for YL's sake.

史：臣聞堯無三夫之[分一]堯舜無咫尺之地以有天下禹無百人之聚以王諸侯湯武之士不過三千車不過三百乘卒不過三萬立為天子誠得其道也。“I have heard that Yao had not three adherents, and Shun hadn't a foot of territory; with these they possessed the world. Yü had no more than a hundred men; with them he ruled the barons. Tang and Wu's officers amounted to fewer than three thousand, chariots not over three hundred and foot soldiers not over thirty thousand; with these, they were enthroned as emperor. These happened because they had genuinely acquired the Way.

史：是故明主外料其敵之疆弱內度其士卒賢不肖不待兩軍相當而勝敗存亡之機固已形於胸中矣豈掛於眾人之言而以冥冥決事哉。“Thus an intelligent ruler externally finds out how strong his enemies are and internally takes the measure of his own men's aptitude; he need not wait for the two armies to come face to face before knowing whether he will win or lose, survive or perish: the key to them is already well formed within his own mind. Would he make such decisions in blindness, having let himself be hoodwinked by the talk of all sorts of people? Never.

史：臣竊以天下之地圖案之諸侯之地五倍於秦秦度諸侯之卒十倍於秦。“Permit YS to point it out on a map of the world: the territory of the other barons is five times that of Ch'in; the measured troop strength of the other barons is ten times that of Ch'in. 史：六國為一并力西鄉而攻秦秦必破矣今西面而事之見臣於秦夫破人之與破於人也臣人之與臣於人也豈可同日而論哉。“If the six states, having been made unanimous, turn their combined force to the west and attack Ch'in, Ch'in will surely be smashed. On the other hand, if you face west and serve them, you will be made a servant by Ch'in. As to the relation between smashing others and being smashed by others or making servants of others and being made a servant by others, how could they be discussed on the same day?

史：夫衡人者皆欲割諸侯之地以予秦秦成則高臺榭美宮室聽竽瑟之音前有樓閣軒轅後有長姣美人國被秦患而不與其憂是故衡人日夜務以秦權恐懼諸侯以求割地故願大王孰計之也。“Those horizontal men all want the barons to cede territory to Ch'in. If Ch'in is successful then they will make their towers taller and their mansions more beautiful, listen to music of winds and strings, and have multi-story gates and watchtowers at their facades and great beauties and pretty women in their harems. Other states will suffer harm from Ch'in but they will not share in that sorrow. That is why advocates of horizontal alliance focus on constantly brandishing the power of Ch'in to frighten the barons into ceding land. Thus I would like YGM to think this out in full.

史：臣聞明主絕疑去讒屏流言之跡塞朋黨之門故尊主廣地彊兵之計臣得陳忠於前矣。“I have heard than an intelligent ruler cuts off doubters and expels backbiters, covers the traces of rumors and blocks the gateway to the forming of factions. Thus planning officers who will make their ruler honored, broaden his territory and strengthen his arms get the chance to demonstrate their integrity in your presence.

史：故竊為大王計莫如一韓魏齊楚燕趙以從親以畔秦令天下之將相會於涇水之上通質剗白馬而盟。“Thus if I may be permitted to plan on YGM's behalf, the best would be to unite Hán, Wei, Ch'i, Ch'ü and Yen into a vertical alliance, drawing them out of Ch'in's orbit. Get the generals and premiers of the whole world to meet on the banks of the Huan river, exchange hostages, slaughter a white horse and make a pact.

If Ch'in attacks Wei, then Ch'ü will cut the supply routes, Ch'i will send crack troops to their aid, Chao will cross the Yellow River and the Chang and Yen will guard Yün-chung. If Ch'in attacks Ch'i, then Ch'ü will cut off their rear, Hán will guard Ch'eng-kao, Wei will block their road, Chao will cross the Yellow River and the Chang and the Po gate and Yen will send crack troops to their aid. If Ch'in attacks Yen, then Chao will guard Ch'ang-shan, Ch'ü will garrison the Wu gate, Ch'i will cross the Po-hai, and Hán and Wei will both send crack troops to their aid. If Ch'in attacks Chao, then Hán will garrison Yiyang, Ch'ü will garrison the Wu gate, Wei will garrison Hewai, Ch'i will pass Ch'inghe and Yen will send crack troops to their aid.

史：諸侯有不如約者以五國之兵共伐之六國從親以資秦則秦甲必不敢出於函谷以害山東矣如此則霸王之業成矣。“If any of the barons deviate from this agreement, attack them with the forces of the other five states. If the six states greet Ch'in with a vertical alliance then Ch'in will not dare emerge from the Han-ku to the harm of those east of the mountains. If we do it this way then the aim of ruling as senior king will have been accomplished.”

史：趙王曰寡人年少立國日淺未嘗得聞社稷之長計也今上客有意存天下安諸侯寡人敬以國從乃飾車百乘黃金千溢白璧百雙錦繡千純以約諸侯 The king of Chao said, “Our age is young and our experience on the throne is shallow; We have never heard long-range planning for the nation. If now our Honored Visitor intends to preserve the world and keep peace among the barons, We respectfully put Our state at your disposal.” To that end a hundred decorated chariots, a hundred dijèi of yellow gold, a hundred pairs of white jade circlets and a thousand bolts of brocade & embroidery were to be used to draw the barons to agreement.

史：是時周天子致文武之胙於秦惠王惠王使犀首攻魏禽將龍賈取魏之雕陰且欲東兵蘇秦恐秦兵之至趙也乃激怒張儀入之于秦 At that time the Chou emperor transferred the blessing of the Cynosure and Martial Kings to the Benevolent king of Ch'in. The Benevolent King sent Hsi Shou to attack Wei; he captured general Lung Chia and took Tiao Yin from Wei, and was about to send his forces eastward. Su Ch'in feared the Ch'in army would go as far as Chao, so he enraged Chang Yi and sent him to Ch'in.

史：以韓卒之勇被堅甲鏖勁弩帶利劍一人當百不足言也夫以韓之勁與大王之賢乃西面事秦交臂而服羞社稷而為天下笑無大於此者[矣一]已是故願大王孰計之。“It goes without saying that with their bravery, the Hán soldiers, wearing strong armor and drawing powerful crossbows, sharp swords at their sides, can withstand hundred-to-one odds. Now if, with Hán so powerful and YGM so competent you were to face west and serve Ch'in, folding your arms and submitting, there simply would be no worse case of shaming the state altars and looking a fool to the whole world than that. Thus I would like YGM to think this out in full.

史：大王事秦秦必求宜陽成皋今茲效之明年又復求割地與則無地以給之不與則棄前功而受後禍大王之地有盡而秦之求無已以有盡之地而逆無已之求此所謂事怨結禍者也。“If YGM serves Ch'in, they will surely demand Yiyang and Ch'eng-kao. If you turn it over to them this year then next year they will want you to alienate more land in the same way. If you cede then you will have no more land to give them; if you do not cede then you abandon your former success and suffer later calamity. YGM's land has limits but Ch'in's demands have no end. You would be responding to endless demands with limited land. This is what is called serving with resentment and consummating disaster.

“YS has heard a coarse saying, ‘Better be a chicken’s mouth than a cow’s arse.’ In this case, to fold your arms and serve Ch’in as a servant—how is that different from a cow’s arse? With YGM’s ability in control of the strong forces of Hán, to have the reputation of being a cow’s arse—I take the liberty of being embarrassed for YGM.”

史：於是韓王勃然作色攘臂瞋目按劍仰天太息曰寡人雖不肖必不能事秦今主君詔以趙王之教敬奉社稷以從 At that the king of Hán got an angry expression, thrust out his arms, glared, put his hand on his sword, looked up at the sky and sighed loudly. He said, “I may not be very smart, but I simply cannot serve Ch’in. Now you, sir, have conveyed to me the guidance of the king of Chao; with respect, I place my state at your disposal in that endeavor.”

史：又說魏襄王曰大王之地…方千里地名雖小然而田舍廬廡之數曾無所芻牧人民之眾車馬之多日夜行不絕鞴鞣殷殷若有三軍之眾臣竊量大王之國不下楚 He went on to make this proposal to the Prospering King of Wei. “YGM’s land…is a thousand li square. Though the land is reputed small, nonetheless its field dormitories, huts and outbuildings are so numerous there is not even room for pasturage. The people are so numerous and the horses and carts so many that they cease moving neither day nor night; the rumble of traffic and the buzz of voices is like that of an entire nation’s army. YS ventures to evaluate YGM’s state as not inferior to Ch’u.

史：然衡人怵王交彊虎狼之秦以侵天下卒有秦患不顧其禍夫挾彊秦之勢以內劫其主罪無過此者魏天下之彊國也王天下之賢王也今乃有意西面而事秦稱東藩築帝宮受冠帶祠春秋臣竊為大王恥之 Yet the “horizontal men” try to frighten YM into joining powerful, rapacious Ch’in in invading all countries in the world. Later, when Ch’in has turned on you, they will spare no pity for that suffering. To wield the strategic advantage of Ch’in and bully one’s own ruler with it—no crime exceeds that. Wei is the strongest country of the world, and YM is its most competent king. And yet here you want to face west and serve Ch’in, calling yourselves their eastern border, building a palace for an emperor, accepting their court procedures, dating your ceremonies by their calendar—I venture to feel shame for YGM.

史：今竊聞大王之卒武士二十萬蒼頭二十萬奮擊二十萬廝徒十萬車六百乘騎五千匹此其過越王句踐武王遠矣今乃聽於群臣之說而欲臣事秦 In YGM’s case I have heard that YGM’s forces are 200,000 trained soldiers, 200,000 blue berets, 200,000 shock troops, 100,000 service corps, 600

chariots and 50,000 cavalry. This is vastly superior to King Kou Chien of Wu and the Military King, yet you mean to serve Ch’in as their vassal, on the advice of your council of ministers.

史：夫事秦必割地以效實故兵未用而國已虧矣凡群臣之言事秦者皆姦人非忠臣也 Now if you serve Ch’in, you must cede land as proof of bona fides; thus your state will be diminished even before weapons come into play. Whichever of the ministers advocates serving Ch’in is a traitor, not a loyal minister.

史：大王誠能聽臣六國從親專心并力壹意則必無彊秦之患故故邑趙王使臣效愚計奉 [明→]盟約在大王之詔語之 If YGM can take YS’s advice wholeheartedly, and six nations unite in vertical alliance, concentrating their thinking, conjoining their force and unifying their aims, then there will certainly be no trouble from Ch’in. Thus the king of our poor city, Chao, has commissioned YS to communicate our clumsy plan and to present a pact, leaving it to YGM’s rescript to ordain it.

史：魏王曰寡人不肖未嘗得聞明教今主君以趙王之詔語之敬以國從 The king of Wei said, “I’m not very smart. I’ve never had the chance to hear clear teaching. Let you, good sir, now ordain it with the rescript of the king of Chao, and We will have our state follow it with respect.”

史：因東說齊宣王曰齊南有泰山東有琅邪西有清河北有勃海此所謂四塞之國也齊地方二千餘里帶甲數十萬粟如丘山三軍之良五家之兵進如鋒矢戰如雷霆解如風雨 He proceeded to go east and make his proposal to the Peripatetic King of Ch’i. He said, “Ch’i has Mt. Tai on the south, Lang-yeh on the west, the Ch’ing river on the north and the Po-hai on the east. This is what we call a stated defended on all sides. The territory of Ch’i is over two thousand li square, its men in arms number tens of thousands and its stored grain is like hills and mountains. Whether the stalwarts of the whole army or the five soldiers of a squad, they rush forward like spears and arrows, fight like thunder-claps and disperse like wind and rain.

七二十一萬不待發於遠縣而臨菑之卒固已二十一萬矣臨菑甚富而實其民無不吹竽鼓瑟彈琴擊筑鬥雞走狗六博踴鞠者臨菑之塗車擊人肩摩連衽成帷舉袂成幕揮汗成雨家殷人足志高氣揚 “When there happens to be need for military force, they have never left Mt. Tai or crossed the Ch’ing River or the Po-hai. Within Lin-tz’u there are seventy thousand households. If I may venture to estimate, each household has no fewer than three men. Three times seventy thousand is two hundred ten thousand. With no need to wait for anyone to leave distant counties, Lin-tz’u has already secured two hundred ten thousand soldiers. Lin-tz’u is very rich and full. Among its populace are none who do not either play the reed-organ or some type of cithern, or have cockfights or dog races, or play at parcheesi or football. The streets of Lin-tz’u are so crowded with vehicles and people that if they conjoined their lapels they would form a tent wall and if they raised their sleeves they would form a tent roof. If they all flicked away sweat at once it would be like rain. The households are large and the population ample. Hopes are high and spirits good.

史：夫以大王之賢與齊之彊天下莫能當今乃西面而事秦臣竊為大王羞之 “YGM’s talent and the wealth of Ch’i are such that no one in the world could stand against you, yet you would face west and serve Ch’in. I venture to consider that shameful. 史：且夫韓魏之所以重畏秦者為與秦接壤壤界也兵出而相當不出十日而戰勝存亡之機決矣韓魏戰而勝秦則兵半折四境不守戰而不勝則國已危亡隨其後是故韓魏之所以重與秦戰而輕為之臣也 “Furthermore, the reason Hán and Wei so deeply fear Ch’in is because they share borders and abut boundaries. It would be no more than ten days from the time their forces first went forth and clashed that the outcome of victory or defeat, surviving or perishing, would be determined. If Hán and Wei fight Ch’in and win, half their weapons will be broken and all their borders undefended. If they fight and lose, their states will have been put into total danger and their demise will follow upon that. This is surely the cause of Hán and Wei thinking it a grave thing to fight Ch’in but no great thing to serve them.

史：夫不深料秦之無秦齊何而欲西面而事之是群臣之計過也今無臣事秦之名而有彊國之實臣是故願大王少留意計之 “Thus if you don't plumb to its depth the fact that Ch'in can do nothing about Ch'i, but face west and serve them, that is failure of planning by your staff. As of now you haven't the reputation of serving Ch'in as a vassal, and you have the reality of a strong state. Therefore I urge you to pay a bit more attention to making plans concerning it."

史：齊王曰寡人不敏僻遠守海窮道東境之國也未嘗得聞餘教今足下以趙王詔詔之敬以國從 The king of Ch'i said, "I'm not clever. This is a remote state, hugging the seashore at the far eastern end of the road. I had never had the chance to hear any other kind of doctrine. If you would now ordain it with the rescript of the king of Chao, We will have our state follow it with respect."

史：乃西南說楚威王曰楚天下之疆國也王天下之賢王也...地方五千餘里帶甲百萬車千乘騎萬匹粟支十年此霸王之資也夫以楚之疆與王之賢天下莫能當也今乃欲西面而事秦則諸侯莫不西面而朝於章臺之下矣 He then went southwest and addressed the Frightener King of Ch'u thus: "Ch'u is the strongest state in the world. YM is the most competent king in the world. [...] Your land is 1500 li square. You have a million men under arms, a thousand war-chariots and ten thousand cavalry. You have grain reserves for ten years. This is the wherewithal to rule as senior king. But now you want to face west and serve Ch'in. Then all the barons will face west and attend court near the Blazoned Pavilion.

史：秦之所害莫如楚楚疆則秦弱秦疆則楚弱其勢不兩立故為大王計莫如從親以孤秦大王不從秦必起兩軍一軍出武關一軍下黔中則鄢郢動矣 Ch'in regards none as more harmful than Ch'u. If Ch'u is strong, Ch'in will be weak. If Ch'in is strong, Ch'u will be weak. By the nature of the situation they cannot co-exist. Thus to plan for YGM's benefit, the best would be to join a vertical alliance to isolate Ch'in. If YGM does not follow it, Ch'in will surely raise two armies, one to emerge from Wu-kuan and one to descend from Ch'ien-chung. Then Yen and Ying will be stirred up.

史：臣聞治之其未亂也為之其未有也患至而後憂之則無及[已一]矣故願大王蚤孰計之 YS has heard it said, "Order things before they go awry, take of charge of matters before they come about." If you don't worry about trouble until it is actually here, you will no longer have the time to act. [無及=無所於及] Thus I wish YGM would make thorough plans for it soon.

史：大王誠能聽臣請令山東之國奉四時之獻以承大王之明詔委社稷奉宗廟練士厲兵在大王之所用之 If YGM can wholeheartedly accept my direction, I beg leave to get the states east of the mountains to send quarterly tribute missions to receive YGM's unambiguous orders and to entrust their state altars and family temples and their crack troops' sharp weapons to be put to any use YGM sees fit. 史：大王誠能用臣之愚計則韓魏齊燕趙衛之妙音美人必充後宮燕代蒙駝良馬必實外廄 If YGM can wholeheartedly use my my clumsy plan, then your private apartments will be filled with enchanting music and beautiful women of Hán, Wei, Ch'i, Yen, Chao and Wèi and your outer stables will be replete with camels and fine horses of Yen and Tai.

史：故從合則楚王衡成則秦帝今釋霸王之業而有事人之名臣竊為大王不取也 Thus if the vertical alliance coheres then Ch'u will rule as king; if the horizontal alliance is formed then Ch'in will rule as emperor. In these circumstances I would venture to reject on YGM's behalf the abandonment of the project of ruling the world and instead getting the reputation of one who is subservient to others.

史：夫秦虎狼之國也有吞天下之心秦天下之仇讎也衡人皆欲割諸侯之地以事秦此所謂養仇而奉讎者也 Ch'in is a nation of tigers and wolves. They mean to swallow the whole world. Ch'in is the enemy of the world. The horizontal men all want to cede some of the barons' land to Ch'in. This is what is called nourishing your enemy and supplying your foe.

史：為人臣割其主之地以外交彊虎狼之秦以侵天下卒有秦患不顧其禍夫外挾彊秦之威以內劫其主以求割地大逆不忠無過此者 They are other men's servants yet they cede land of their masters' to get them to join powerful, rapacious Ch'in in invading all countries in the world. Later, when Ch'in does harm, they will spare no pity for that suffering. To wield the foreign power of Ch'in and bully one's own ruler with it, seeking to cede land—no sort of treason is worse.

史：故從親則諸侯割地以事楚衡合則楚割地以事秦此兩策者相去遠矣二者大王何居焉故敝邑趙王使臣效愚計奉[明一]盟約在大王詔之 Thus if the vertical alliance is joined the barons will cede land to Ch'u. If the horizontal alliance is concluded they Ch'u will cede land to Ch'in. These two strategies could not contrast more starkly. Which of the two will YGM choose? Thus the king of our poor state of Chao has sent YS to deliver my clumsy plan and present a treaty of alliance which it is up to YGM to promulgate.

史：楚王曰寡人之國西與秦接境秦有舉巴蜀并漢中之心秦虎狼之國不可親也而韓魏迫於秦患不可與深謀與深謀恐反人入於秦故謀未發而國已危矣 The king of Ch'u said, "My nation abuts Ch'in on the west. Ch'in means to take Pa and Shu and annex Han-chung. Ch'in are wolves and tigers; they cannot be made friendly, but Hán and Wei are under pressure from Ch'in and cannot be admitted to deep planning for fear that they might turn against one and give it away to Ch'in. Thus the nation is in peril before a plan has begun.

史：寡人自料以楚當秦不見勝也內與群臣謀不足恃也寡人臥不安席食不甘味心搖搖然如縣旌而無所終薄今主君欲一天下收諸侯存危國寡人謹奉社稷以從於是六國從合而并力焉蘇秦為從約長并相六國 "My own estimate is that if Ch'u were to oppose Ch'in they would not be defeated. If I were to take counsel of my ministers they could not be relied on. I cannot sleep in comfort nor enjoy my food. My mind waves back and forth like a flag in a breeze and never comes to rest anywhere. Now you, sir, would unite the world, gather the barons, and keep endangered nations in existence. I respectfully follow you with my whole national polity." At that the six nations joined vertically and combined their forces with regard to that. Su Ch'in became joint premier to all six.

史：北報趙王乃行過雒陽車騎輜重諸侯各發使送之甚眾疑於王[一]周顯王聞之恐懼除道使人郊勞蘇秦之昆弟妻嫂側目不敢仰視俯伏侍取食蘇秦笑謂其嫂曰何前倨而後恭也嫂委蛇蒲服以面掩地而謝曰見季子位高金多也蘇秦喟然歎曰此一人之身富貴則親戚畏懼之貧賤則輕易之況眾人乎且使我有雒陽負郭田二頃吾豈能佩六國相印乎於是散千金以賜宗族朋友 When he went north to report to the king of Chao he passed through Loyang. The chariots and mounted men and sleeping carts and heavy wagons, the envoys sent by each of the barons to escort him, were so many as to excite suspicion in the king. [Comparison with the 戰國策 version shows the 史記 text is defective here.] The Eminent King of Chou was alarmed by that news. He had the road cleared and sent people to acclaim him at the verge of the city. Su Ch'in's wife and brothers and their wives averted their eyes and did not dare look up. They bowed low to serve him food. [取 makes no sense here. 趣 would be slightly less implausible, but not enough so to justify emendation.] Su Ch'in said to his elder brother's wife with a laugh, "Why so arrogant before and so deferential now?" She crawled like a snake, face to the ground, and apologized, "Your rank is high and you are rich." Su Ch'in heaved a loud sigh and said, "Within this one man's lifetime, when I was rich and high-ranking my relatives feared me, while when I was poor and lowly they though little of me. How much more would that apply to ordinary folk. Moreover, suppose I had two hundred mou of land [twice the holding of a typical farmer acc to 漢書] near the outer wall of Loyang, how could I have ever worn the minister's seals of six states at my sash?" He then distributed a thousand ducats in donations to his relatives and friends.

史：初蘇秦之燕貸人百錢為資乃得富貴以百金償之遍報諸所常見德者其從者有一人獨未得報乃前自言蘇秦曰我非忘子子之與我至燕再三欲去我易水之上方是時我困故望子深是以後子子亦得矣 When Su Ch'in first went to Yen he begged a hundred cash from someone for expenses. When he got rich he rewarded him with a hundred ducats. He fully repaid all those from whom he had had generous treatment. There was one man among his followers who had not yet got recompense. He came forward and spoke for himself. Su Ch'in said, "It's not that I've forgotten you. When you went to Yen with me, more than once you wanted to leave me on the banks of the Yi. At that time I was in straits and so was depending on you heavily. That is why I left you to last. Now you too will get something." 史：蘇秦既約六國從親歸趙肅侯封為武安君乃投從約書於秦秦兵不敢闕函谷關十五年 When Su Ch'in had cemented the six states into a firm vertical alliance, he returned to Chao. The Solemn Marquess of Chao enfeoffed him as Lord Military Security, and sent the treaty of vertical alliance to Ch'in. Ch'in did not dare poke its nose through the Han-ku barrier for fifteen years.

史：其後秦使犀首欺齊魏與共伐趙欲敗從約齊魏伐趙王讓蘇秦蘇秦恐請使燕必報齊蘇秦去趙而從約皆解 Later Ch'in sent Hsi Shou as emissary to trick Ch'i and Wei into joining an attack on Chao, wanting to break the treaty of vertical alliance. Ch'i and Wei attacked Chao. The king of Chao berated Su Ch'in. Su Ch'in was afraid and asked to be sent as emissary to Yen to repay Ch'i. When he left Chao the vertical treaty came entirely undone. 史：秦惠王以其女為燕太子婦是歲文侯卒太子立是為燕易王 The Benevolent King of Ch'in got his daughter married to the heir-apparent of Yen. In this year the Cynosure Marquess passed away and his heir-apparent succeeded him. This was the one who [ten years later] became the Alterative King. 史：易王初立齊宣王因燕喪伐燕取十城易王謂蘇秦曰往日先生至燕而先王資先生見趙遂約六國從今齊先伐趙次至燕以先生之故為天下笑先生能為燕得侵地乎蘇秦大慚曰請為王取之 When the Alterative King was first installed, the Perspicuous King of Ch'i took advantage of their mourning to attack Yen, seizing ten cities. The Alterative King said to Su Ch'in, "Some time ago, sir, you came to Yen and our late king supplied you to go to Chao and unite the six nations into a vertical alliance. Now Ch'i has first attacked Chao and then Yen. We are a laughingstock to the world on account of you, sir. Can you retrieve for Yen the territory they took?" Su Ch'in, embarrassed, said, "Allow me to get it for YM."

史：蘇秦見齊王再拜俯而慶仰而弔齊王曰是為慶弔相隨之速也蘇秦曰臣聞飢人所以飢而不食鳥喙者為其愈充腹而與餓死同患也今燕雖弱小即秦王之少婿也大王利其十城而長與彊秦為仇今使弱燕為鴈行而彊秦敵其後以招天下之精兵是食鳥喙之類也 When Su Ch'in had audience with the King of Ch'i, he bowed twice, looked down and congratulated him, looked up and condoled. The king said, "Why this condolence immediately after congratulation?" Su Ch'in said, "I have heard the reason starving people don't eat aconite is that as they fill their bellies with more of it, the suffering becomes the same as starving to death. In this case, although Yen may be small and weak, they happen to be the young son-in-law of the king of Ch'in. YGM feels the ten cities to be to your benefit, but you are fomenting the enmity of powerful Ch'in. Now if Yen, weak as it is, were to make a wildgoose formation and Ch'in, strong as it is, were to cover their rear, drawing the highly-trained troops of the world—that would be the same kind of thing as eating aconite.

史：齊王愀然變色曰然則奈何蘇秦曰臣聞古之善制事者轉禍為福因敗為功大王誠能聽臣計即歸燕之十城燕無故而得十城必喜秦王知以己之故而歸燕之十城亦必喜此所謂棄仇讎而得石交者也夫燕秦俱事齊則大王號令天下莫敢不聽是王以虛辭附秦以十城取天下此霸王之業也王曰善於是乃歸燕之十城 The king of Ch'i suddenly looked worried and said, "In that case, what can be done about it?" Su Ch'in said, "I have heard the ancients who were good at managing affairs turned ill luck into good and built success on the basis of failure. If YGM can wholeheartedly accept my plan, just return the ten cities of Yen. Yen will be pleased to gain ten cities through no effort of their own and Ch'in will be pleased to be the cause of the return of ten cities to Yen. This is what I would call setting aside enmity and gaining a rock-solid connection. If Yen and Ch'in are both at the service of Ch'i then when YGM gives orders, no one in the world would be disobey. Just so will YM attach Ch'in to yourself with empty words and win the world at the cost of ten cities. This is the way to become king of kings." The king approved. He then returned the ten cities of Yen.

史：人有毀蘇秦者曰左右賣國反覆之臣也將作亂蘇秦恐得罪歸而燕王不復官也蘇秦見燕王曰臣東周之鄙人也無有分寸之功而王親拜之於廟而禮之於廷今臣為王卻齊之兵而[攻→]功得十城宜以益親 Someone dispraised Su Ch'in, "As minister he switches allegiance; he sells countries right and left. He means to incite a rebellion." Su Ch'in feared that he had done something wrong because when he returned the king of Yen did not restore him to his former office. Su Ch'in got audience with the king of Yen and said, "When I was a hayseed from East Chou without even a bit of success, YM saluted me in person in the temple and treated me with courtesy in court. Now I have repulsed the military force of Ch'i on YM's behalf, succeeding in obtaining ten cities. I should be even more in your favor for that.

史：今來而王不官臣者人必有以不信傷臣於王者臣之不信王之福也臣聞忠信者所以自為也進取者所以為人也且臣之說齊王曾非欺之也臣棄老母於東周固去自為而行進取也 "Someone must recently have been injuring my reputation for reliability to YM, and that would be why I was not reappointed when I got back. If I am unreliable, that is YM's good fortune. I have heard that integrity and reliability are for one's own sake, while unstinted effort is for the sake of others. Furthermore, YS's persuasion of the king of Ch'i was not deceptive in the slightest way. My abandoning an aged mother in East Chou is surely proof of my choosing zeal in place of self-dealing.

史：今有孝如曾參廉如伯夷信如尾生得此三人者以事大王何若 "Take for example filiality like that of Tsêng Shên, self-denial like that of Po-yi and reliability like that of Wei Shêng. How would it be if those three could be taken into YGM's service?"

史：王曰足矣 The king said, "That would suffice."

史：蘇秦曰孝如曾參義不離其親一宿於外王又安能使之步行千里而事弱燕之危王哉 Su Ch'in said, "As to filiality like that of Tsêng Shên, he thought it proper not to spend even a single night apart from his parents. How could YM get him to combine that with walking a thousand li to serve the endangered king of weak Yen?"

史：廉如伯夷義不為孤竹君之嗣不肯為武王臣不受封侯而餓死首陽山下有廉如此王又安能使之步行千里而行進取於齊哉 "As to self-denial like that of Po-yi, he thought it proper not to become the successor of the ruler of Ku-chu, was unwilling to be a minister to the Martial King, and refused ennoblement, dying of starvation near Shouyang mountain. How could YM get him to combine self-denial like that with walking a thousand li to exert extraordinary diligence in Ch'i?"

行千里卻齊之彊兵哉 "As to reliability like that of Wei Shêng, he made a date to meet a girl under a bridge. When she didn't show up and the water began to rise, he didn't leave but clung to a pillar and died. How could YM get him to combine reliability like that with walking a thousand li to stave off the mighty forces of Ch'i?"

史：臣所謂以忠信得罪於上者也燕王曰若不忠信耳豈有以忠信而得罪者乎 "It is what I call being blamed for integrity and reliability." The king of Yen said, "You lack integrity and reliability and that's all there is to it. How could it happen that one is blamed for integrity and reliability?"

史：蘇秦曰不然臣聞客有遠為吏而其妻私於人者其夫將來其私者憂之妻曰勿憂吾已作藥酒待之矣居三日其夫果至妻使妾舉藥酒進之妾欲言酒之有藥則恐其逐主母也欲勿言乎則恐其殺主父也於是乎詳僵而棄酒 Su Ch'in said, "It's not like that. I heard of a man sent on a distant mission whose wife had an affair. When her husband was about to return, her paramour worried about it. She said, 'Don't worry. I've already prepared poison wine in anticipation of that.' Three days later, the husband showed up. The wife had the maid offer the poisoned wine to him. Though she wanted to tell him the wine was poisoned, she feared he would drive out her mistress. Though she wanted not to tell him of it, she feared it would kill here master. So she feigned tripping and spilled the wine.

史：主父大怒笞之五十妾一僵而覆酒上存主父下存主母然而不免於笞惡在乎忠信之無罪也夫臣之過不幸而類是乎 "Her master was enraged and give her fifty lashes. By the one act of falling and upending the wine, the maid saved her master as well as her mistress yet did not escape whipping. Where in this is the guiltlessness of integrity and reliability? Isn't my fault that I have the misfortune being analogous to this?"

燕王曰先生復就故官益厚遇之 The king said, "Return to your former office, sir." He treated him even more generously.

史：易王母文侯夫人也與蘇秦私通燕王知之而事之加厚蘇秦恐誅乃說燕王曰臣居燕不能使燕重而在齊則燕必重燕王曰唯先生之所為 The mother of the Alterative King was wife to the Cynosure Marquess; she had an affair with Su Ch'in. The king found out about it and treated him even more generously. Su Ch'in feared retribution, so he made this proposal to the king of Yen: "Living in Yen I cannot make Yen important, but if I were in Ch'i then Yen would surely become important." The king of Yen said, "Whatever you do, sir."

史：於是蘇秦詳為得罪於燕而亡走齊齊宣王以為客卿齊宣王卒潛王即位說潛王厚葬以明孝高宮室大苑囿以明得意欲破敵齊而為燕 Then Su Ch'in pretended that he had committed an offense in Yen and fled to Ch'i. The Perspicuous King of Ch'i made him visiting minister. When the Perspicuous King of Ch'i died, the Lost King succeeded him. He persuaded the Lost King to give a lavish funeral to demonstrate his filiality and to make palaces and chambers high and gardens and orchards big to demonstrate his success; he wanted to break and impoverish Ch'i on behalf of Yen.

史：燕易王卒燕噲立為王其後齊大夫多與蘇秦爭寵者使人刺蘇秦不死殊而走齊王使人求賊不得蘇秦且死乃謂齊王曰臣即死車裂臣以徇於市曰蘇秦為燕作亂於齊如此則臣之賊必得矣於是如其言而殺蘇秦者果自出齊王因而誅之燕聞之曰甚矣齊之為蘇生報仇也 When the Alterative King of Yen died, Kuai acceded to the throne. Later the high officers of Ch'i competed for favor with Su Ch'in. They sent a man to stab Su Ch'in, but he wasn't killed; he escaped. The Ch'i searched for the assassin but didn't find him. When Su Ch'in was about to die he said to the king of Ch'i, "As soon as I am dead, have me torn apart by wagons and send round the marketplace and say that Su Ch'in fomented rebellion in Ch'i on behalf of Yen. That his how my assassin will be caught." They did as he had said, and the killer of Su Ch'in revealed himself; the king of Ch'i proceeded to punish him. When they heard of it in Yen they said the reprisal of Ch'i for Su [Ch'in] was excessive.

史：蘇秦既死其事大泄齊後聞之乃恨怒燕燕甚恐 After Su Ch'in had died most of his activities came to light. Ch'i heard of them later and bitterly resented Yen. Yen was very afraid.

Read the rest of the story at the entry for 蘇代.

史：太史公曰蘇秦兄弟三人皆游說諸侯以顯名其術長於權變而蘇秦被反間以死天下共笑之諱學其術然世言蘇秦多[異]異時事有類之者皆附之蘇秦夫蘇秦起問閭連六國從親此其智有過人者吾故列其行事次其時序毋令獨蒙惡聲焉 The Grand Historian says that Su Ch'in and his brothers all got famous by going from baron to baron, delivering their proposals. Their arts were superior with regard to adapting to changes. But Su Ch'in died having been traduced, and the whole world mocked him and shunned the study of his arts. Yet many have spoken of Su Ch'in through the ages; events that resembled these happened in distinct eras and all got attributed to Su Ch'in. Su Ch'in arose from an ordinary neighborhood to assemble a vertical alliance of six states, so his intelligence was beyond that of other men in some respects. I thus set out his deeds and put his chronology in order so as to prevent there being nothing but evil spoken of him.

When a steppe pony has strayed from its herd/ With questing heart it constantly calls to them. How much the more so a pair of flying dragons/ Whose wings take them near where they must part. Fortunately there exist songs for strings and voice/ That can be used to show one's inner feelings.

Let me compose a threnody for you who will travel/ Plink plink—how utterly mournful! Strings and woodwinds make sharp clear sounds/ To dejection and dismay they add further grief. Throughout my singing I am unfaidly loud and vigorous/ Within my heart is crushed and broken. I want to develop the tune in Pure Shang mode/ But I keep worrying that you may not be able to return. I rock back and forth in agony of mind/ My tears descend, not to be brushed away. I want us to be a pair of swans/ I'd fly along with you for a long way. [I wonder if this is a later composition falsely attributed to 蘇武.]

逸：凡民生而有好好惡小得其所好則喜大得其所好則樂小遭其所惡則憂大遭其所惡則哀 It is universal human nature to have likes and dislikes. If we get a bit of what we like we are happy. If we get a lot of what we like we are delighted. If we get a bit of what we dislike we are troubled. If we get a lot of what we dislike we are grieved.

荀：堯禹者非生而具者也夫起於變故成乎修為待盡而後備者也 Yao and Yü were not perfect of their own nature. They began by altering precedents, developed by improving their conduct and only after that was finished were they complete.

魏：生而英叡 He had a naturally brilliant mind.

b. also of things

衡：楓桐之樹生而速長故其皮肌不能堅剛 Trees like sweet-gum and wu-t'ung grow fast all their lives, so their bark and wood cannot be hard and strong.

c. also of non-living things

sēng 1.40 ^{vs} live; living; unworked (iron), unfired (clay), raw (food) 313 生

非：假人於越而救溺子越人雖善遊子必不生矣 If you got a man from Yüeh to save your drowning son, even if the Yüeh man was a good swimmer your son would no longer be alive.

墨：然則天欲其生而惡其死 If so, then Sky wants them to live and hates their dying.

史：今其生者皆死秦之孤也 Those living there now are all orphans of those who died at the hands of Ch'in.

衡：諸生息之物氣絕則死 All things that live and breathe die if their air is cut off.

衡：示不負死以觀生也 to show that they do not turn away from the dead, as an example to the living

史：左掣人頭右挾生虜 Slashing a man's head with the left hand, taking a live prisoner with the right

晉：斬五百餘級獲生口千餘降者六百餘人 They took over five hundred heads, got over a thousand live prisoners and more than six hundred surrendered.

衡：使生人不飲食而徒以口歆肴食之氣不過三日則餓死矣 Suppose a living person were to leave off eating and drinking and only use his mouth to savor the steam of the sacrificial meals, he would have starved to death in no more than three days.

楚：萬民之生各有所錯兮 In their lives, each of the myriad people has his own place.

衡：人生能行死則僵仆 While people are alive they can walk; when they die they fall down.

荀：人希見生象 People rarely see a living elephant.

衡：世有以生形轉為生類者矣未有以死身化為生象者也 It has happened in the world that living forms have transformed into other types of living thing, but it has never happened that a dead body has transformed into a living image.

衡：屈原生時文無不作 When Chü Yüan was alive, there was no kind of literature he did not create.

衡：豬馬以氣呼之而生之 Pigs and horses breathed on him and kept him alive.

淮：能反其所生若未有形謂之真人 If one can return to whence he took life, as he was before he had form, we call him "true man."

非：宰人上食而羹中有生肝焉 The steward served the meal and there was raw liver in the soup.

衡：師曠能鼓清角必有所受非質性生出之也 If Shih Kuang was able to play Pure Chiao he must have got it from somewhere; he didn't invent it out of his own native ability.

淮：是猶王孫綽之欲倍偏枯之藥而以生殊死之人 This is like Wang-sun Chó wanting to revive a corpse by giving it double the dose of medicine for hemiplegia.

sēng 1.40 life (= siēng lav 性?) 313 生

呂：所謂迫生者六欲莫得其宜也皆獲其所甚惡者 In what I call an oppressed life, none of the six desires gets what suits it; each gets what it loathes.

左：苟利社稷死生以之 Should [a measure] benefit the state, whether I live or die, I will use it.

國：亡人得生又何不來為 If a fugitive can retrieve his life, what could he do by not coming?

管：地者萬物之本原諸生之根苑也 Earth: the fountainhead of the myriad things and the taproot-garden of all that is living.

莊：吾生也有涯而知也無涯 Our lives have limits

but cognition has no limit.

國：將死於齊而已矣曰民生安樂誰知其他 He wanted to live out his life in Ch'i and that was all; he said, "Civilian life is safe and happy and who cares for the rest?"

衡：誄生時所行為之謚 In eulogizing what he did during his lifetime they devise a posthumous title for him.

衡：孔子生於周之末世 Confucius lived in the final era of the Chou.

呂：子胥見說於闔廬而惡乎夫差比干生而惡於商死而見說乎周 Tzü Hsü was liked by Ho-lü but hated by Fu-ch'ái; Pi-kan while alive was hated by Shang but dead was loved by Chou.

呂：今世俗之惑主多官而反以害生 The misguided vulgar rulers of our time multiply bureaus and thereby contrarily harm life.

國：危事不可以為安死事不可以為生則無為貴智矣 If a precarious situation could not be made secure nor a deadly one made survivable then we would have no grounds for valuing intelligence.

非：使人樂生於為是愛身於為非 make people enjoy life when doing right and fear mutilation when doing wrong

史：地勢饑食無飢饉之患以故皆贏倫生無積聚而多貧 The land is so abundantly fruitful they have no worry of famine or shortage, and therefore they live carefree, hand to mouth, with no accumulated store and many are poor.

史：間行以去止于陶以[為此→]此為天下之中交易有無之路通為生可以致富矣於是自謂陶朱公 He left, traveling at his leisure, and wound up at T'ao. He decided that place was a crossroads of the world. All the roads for exchange between surplus and need connected there. For earning a living, it was a place to get rich. Then he called himself Old Man Chu of T'ao.

楚：長太息以掩涕兮哀民生之多艱 I sigh long and loud and hide my tears, ah! I lament the many troubles in the lives of the folk.

選：品物類生何有何無 Sort things by type and divide life into categories: what is there, what isn't there?

後：若皇太后不得配食桓帝吾不生還矣 If the empress dowager is not made temple-partner of the Foursquare Emperor, I will in that case not come home alive.

中：今夫山一卷石之多及其廣大草木生[之→]焉禽獸居之寶藏興焉 Consider mountains in the quantity of a handful of stones; when they come to be wide and big, foliage and trees live among them, birds and animals occupy them and troves of valuables arise from them.

呂：始生之者天也養成之者人也能養天之所生而勿撻之謂天子天子之動也以全天為故者也此官之所自立也立官者以全生也今世之惑主多官而反以害生則失所為立之矣譬之若修兵者以備寇也今修兵而反以自攻則亦失所為修之矣 What first engenders is Sky; what nourishes to completion is man. It is the ability to nourish what Sky has engendered without harming it that is referred to by the term "emperor." When the emperor stirs from quiescence it is for the purpose of keeping Sky intact. This is the source of the establishment of offices. Establishing offices was to keep life complete. The misguided rulers of the present time multiply offices and thereby contrarily harm life; therefore they have lost grasp of the reason for establishing them. Compare it to sharpening weapons to ward off an enemy; in this case, they sharpen the weapon and contrarily attack themselves with it; they must have lost grasp of the reason why they sharpened it.

呂：夫水之性清土者扣之故不得清人之性壽物者扣之故不得壽物也者所以養性也非所以性養也今世之人惑者多以性養物則不知輕重也不知輕重則重者為輕輕者為重矣若此則每動無不敗以此為君悖以此為臣亂以此為子狂三者國有一焉無幸必亡 Now water naturally tends to be clear, but dirt muddies it so it does not get to be clear. People naturally tend to live a long time, but things muddy them so they do not get to live a long time. Things means what are used to nourish life, not what life is used to nourish. Misguided people of the present time mostly use their lives to nourish things; therefore they do not recognize relative importance. If one does not recognize relative importance then what is important is taken to be unimportant and vice versa. If you do things this way you will surely fail in everything you initiate. Rulers like this are confused; servants like this are disorderly; sons like this are mad. Of these three, if a state has even one it needs good luck to avoid perishing.

呂：今有聲於此耳聽之必嫌已聽之則使人聾必弗聽有色於此目視之必嫌已視之則使人盲必弗視有味於此口食之必嫌已食之則使人癖必弗食是故聖人之於聲色滋味也利於性則取之害於性則舍之此全性之道也世之貴富者其於聲色滋味也多惑者日夜求幸而得之則遁焉遁焉性惡得不傷 Consider a sound that pleased the ear to hear it but made one deaf afterward; one would never listen to it. Or a sight that pleased the eye to see it but made one blind afterward; one would never look at it. Or a taste that pleased the mouth to eat it but made one dumb afterward; one would never eat it. Thus the sage takes this attitude to sounds, sights and flavorings: those that further life, he chooses; those that harm life he rejects. This is the way to keep life complete. But the high and rich nowadays, in their relation to sounds, sights and flavorings, are mostly confused. All day and all night they seek, and if by chance they find it they abandon themselves to it. And having abandoned themselves to it, how could their lives not be harmed?

No part of the target would not be hit. tiüung
Ten thousand things advertise themselves tiang
To the harm of one life

Nothing about the life would not be harmed. siang
To benefit one life

Nothing about the life would not be longer. d'iang
呂：故聖人之制萬物也以全其天也天全則神和矣目明矣耳聽矣鼻臭矣口敏矣三百六十節皆通利矣若此人者不言而信不謀而當不慮而得精通乎天地神覆乎宇宙其於物無不受也無不裹也若天地然上為天子而不驕下為匹夫而不悖此之謂全德之人 Thus the sage's governance of all things is to keep their Sky-

ness complete. If one's Sky-ness is kept complete then one's spirit is harmonious, one's eyes clear, one's ears acute, one's nose sensitive, one's mouth responsive and one's three hundred sixty joints all richly nourished. A man like that is implicitly reliable, artlessly accurate and carelessly successful. His essence penetrates sky and earth; his spirit covers space and time. His relation to things is that there is nothing he does not accept, nothing he does not contain. At the highest he can be the emperor without arrogance and at the lowest he can be a common peon with resentment. This is what is called the man of perfect deservingness.

呂：貴富而不知道適足以為患不如貧賤貧賤之致物也難雖欲過之奚由出則以車入則以輦務以自佚命之曰招蹙之機肥肉厚酒務以自彊命之曰爛腸之食靡曼皓齒鄭、衛之音務以自樂命之曰伐性之斧三患者貴富之所致也 To be high and rich without recognizing the way is just what is needed to make one miserable. Better to be low and poor. Poverty and low rank, so far as aggrandizement is concerned, find it hard; even if one wished to indulge in excess, where would it come from? Having a carriage outside one's family compound and a sedan chair within it is known as the mechanism that summons lameness. Fat meat and heavy wine as means to strengthen oneself are what are known as the foods that rot the guts. Languid posture, white teeth, music of Chêng and Wei are what is known as the ax that chops life. These three miseries are what high rank and wealth bring about.

呂：故古之人有不肯貴富者矣由重生故也非夸以名也為其實也則此論之不可不察也 Thus there were those in ancient times who were unwilling to be high and rich, on account of the value they placed on life. They were not showing off to gain reputation, but rather on account of the reality. Therefore it is this doctrine that is the one that must be carefully looked into.

sêng 1.40 sacrificial animal 151 牲

禮：君牽牲既入廟門麗于碑 The ruler leads the tethered sacrificial animal; when they have entered the door of the ancestral temple it is tied to a pillar.
史：駢剛之牲 the sacrifice of a red bull
國：余不愛衣食於民不愛牲玉於神 I don't begrudge clothing and food to the people, nor do I begrudge sacrificial animals and jades to the spirits.
禮：牲不及肥 It is not crucial for the sacrificial animals to be fat.

衡：剪其髮麗其手自以為牲 He had his hair cut off and his hands tied and treated himself as a sacrificial animal.

隋：婁三星為天獄主苑牧犧牲供給郊祀亦為興兵聚眾 The three stars of Mound act as courtroom to the sky. It governs gardens, herding and sacrificial animals, and providing for the suburb sacrifices. It also controls mobilizing arms and people.
列：穆王敬之若神事之若君推路寢以居之引三牲以進之選女樂以娛之化人以為王之宮室卑陋而不可處王之廚饌腥臊而不可饗王之嬪御醜惡而不可親 The Splendid King esteemed him as a spirit and served him as a master. He extended the Grand Chamber to accommodate him, had sacrificial animals brought to offer him and selected dancing girls to please him. The magician thought the king's palaces too crude and vulgar to live in, the products of his kitchen too putrid and maggoty to feast on and his hours and serving-wenches so smelly and ugly he couldn't bear to get near them.

This Shu may be a wretched petty kingdom, the leader only of some barbaric tribesmen, but their turbulence reaches the level of that of Chieh and Ch'ou. Attacking them with the forces of Ch'in would be like setting wolves to chase a flock of sheep. Taking their territory will serve to enlarge our own, and getting their goods will serve to enrich our people and renew our weapons. They will surrender before our armies have suffered any harm.
 戰: 故拔一國而天下不以爲暴利盡西海諸侯不以爲貪是我一舉而名實兩附而又有禁暴正亂之名 "Thus we take a whole nation without the world regarding us as violent, and we get all the profits of the western wilderness without the feudal lords regarding us as greedy.  “Chou is the ruling household of the world. Ch'i and Han are states allied to it. If Chou realizes of its own accord that it is going to lose the nine cauldrons, and Han realizes of its own accord that it is going to lose Three Rivers, they will take their two separate states and merge their forces and co-ordinate their plans, and will rely on Ch'i and Chao while begging for rescue from Ch'u and Wei. If they give the cauldrons to Ch'u and land to Wei, YM will not be able to prevent that. That is what I call peril, not like the self-sufficiency of attacking Shu.”

Ears, eyes, noses and mouths are servants of life. The ear may want music, the eye beauty, the nose fragrant smells and the mouth savory tastes, but if harmful to life they stop them at the sensory organs. If those desire what does not benefit life, they do not do it. Ears, eyes, noses and mouths do not get to act on their own; they must be controlled by something. Comparing, they are like the duties of offices. They do not get to act on their own; they must be controlled by something.

The Level Marquess approved and went ahead with the appointment, and the citizens all said good things of him. After a while, the marquess again asked Ch'i Huang-yang, "The capital needs a garrison commander. Who could do the job?" "Wu could." "Isn't Wu your son?" "YL asked who could do the job, not who is my son." The Level Marquess approved and went ahead with the appointment, and the citizens all said good things of him. Confucius heard of it and said, "Very skilful, how Ch'i Huang-yang analyzed that." In avoiding neither his enemy for an external appointment nor his son for an internal appointment, Ch'i Huang-yang can be said to have been entirely impartial.

His son killed a man, and the Benevolent King of Chin said to him, "You are old, sir, and it is not as if you had other sons. I have given orders that he not be punished. I want you to listen to me in this." Fu-t'un said, "The Mohists have laws: who kills a man dies, who wounds a man is mutilated. They are the means of preventing killing and wounding. Now preventing the killing and wounding of people is the highest principle in the world. Even though Your Majesty has made it a gift to me that he not be punished, I cannot accept not carrying out the laws of Mo-tzu." He refused the Benevolent King's offer and had his own son killed. A son is what anyone would be partial to, but in placing the implementation of high principle above his son's life, the Chief Mohist can be called impartial indeed.

The Prospering Duke of Sung fought a battle with the Completion King of Ch'u at Wêng. Before the Ch'u had yet crossed, Mu-yi said, "They are many and we are few. Let's attack them while they have not yet crossed." The duke ignored him. When they had finished crossing but had not yet got into formation, he again said, "They can be attacked." The duke said, "Wait until they have all got into formation." When their formation was complete, the Sung attacked them. The Sung force was hugely defeated, and the Prospering Duke was wounded in the thigh. His countrymen all resented the ruler. The ruler said, "A gentleman does not harass others in narrow places, nor beat the war drums against incomplete ranks." Tzu-yü said, "In war, victory is what counts. What else is there to be said about it? If it must be done as YL has said, then we should cravenly submit to them, else what's the point of doing battle?"

抱：山中夜見火光者皆久枯木所作勿怪也 When you see firelight at night in the mountains, it is all from old rotten wood; don't be alarmed by it.

b. invent

呂：奚仲作車蒼頡作書后稷作稼皋陶作刑昆吾作陶夏鯨作城此六人者所作當突然而非主道者故曰作者憂因者平 Hsi Chung invented carts, Ts'ang Chieh invented writing, Hou Chi invented agriculture, Kao Yao invented punishment, K'un-wu invented pottery and Kun of the Hsia invented city walls. What these six invented was just what was needed, but it was not the Way of the ruler. Thus it is said, "For pioneering, the way is troubled; for following, the way is smooth."

國：曰非故也公曰君作故 "It's not according to precedent." The marquess replied, "Rulers make precedents." 史：自伏羲作八卦周文王演三百八十四爻而天下治 After Fu Hsi invented the eight diagrams and Wên Wang extended them into 384 changes, the whole world became orderly.

考：鑠金以為刃凝土以為器作車以行陸作舟以行水此皆聖人之所作也 Melting metal to make blades, firing clay to make pots, making carts to travel on land, making boats to travel on water—these are all of the devising of sages.

淮: 爲智者務於巧詐爲勇者務於鬪爭 Those whose metier is cleverness will focus on sly deceptions; those whose metier is valor will focus on belligerence. 史: 秦以不蚤定扶蘇令趙高得以詐立胡亥自使滅祀此陛下所親見 By not firmly establishing Fu-su early on, the Ch'in allowed Chao Kao to install Hu-hê by trickery, themselves bringing about the termination of their sovereignty, a thing YIM saw for yourself.

非: 晉文公將與楚人戰召舅犯問之曰吾將與楚人戰彼眾我寡爲之奈何舅犯曰臣聞之繁禮君子不厭忠信戰陣之間不厭詐僞君其詐之而已矣 The Cynosure Marquess of Chin was about to do battle with Ch'u. He summoned Chiu Fan and asked about it, "We are about to do battle with Ch'u. They are many and we are few. What can we do about that?" Chiu Fan said, "I have heard that in elaborate ceremony a courtier can never have too much integrity and reliability, but in maneuvering for position in battle, he can never have too much deceit and falsehood. Let YL deceive them, that's all there is to it." 非: 今日之死不及安暇待萬世之利待萬世之利在今日之勝今日之勝在詐於敵詐敵萬世之利而已故曰雍季之對不當文公之問 If the chance of dying today were not a pressing matter, how would he have the leisure to wait for the eternal benefit of posterity? Waiting for the eternal benefit of posterity depends on today's victory, which depends on deceiving the enemy. Deceit is nothing other than the eternal benefit of posterity. Therefore I say Yung Chi's reply was not appropriate to the Cynosure Marquess's question.

漢: 陵夷至於戰國貴詐力而賤仁誼先富有而後禮讓 Things went downhill from there until in the era of Warring States they valued trickery and force and deprecated kindness and right conduct, put wealth and possession first and ritual and deference last.

史: 王謀爲反具畏太子妃知而內泄事乃與太子謀令詐弗愛三月不同席 When the king's plans for a coup d'état were complete, he feared that the prince's wife might learn of it and spill the beans, so he made an arrangement with the prince, ordering him to pretend not to favor her; for three months he did not sleep with her.

新: 夫長於變者不可窮以詐通於道者不可驚以怪審於辭者不可惑以言達於義者不可動以利 Now, those expert at anomalies cannot be thwarted by trickery; those conversant with the Way cannot be frightened by monsters; those deeply versed in language cannot be misled by mere talk; those accomplished in right-doing cannot be stirred by profit.

ax. High officials will lose their heads, for desire to kill.
史: 不告殺者腰斬告殺者與斬敵首同賞匿 殺者與降敵同罰 Those not reporting violations were to be cut in half at the waist. Reporting violations brought the same reward as cutting off enemy heads, while concealing violations brought the same punishment as surrendering to the enemy.

隋: 鉞一星附井之前主伺淫奢而斬之 The Ax government is against the people and your conduct disobedient to the spirits. You enlarge your palace, overcutting timber thus pinching the hills and woods.

You enlavis your food and drink, overhunting and overfishing thus pinching the streams and marshes.
史: 故先言斬將塞旗之士 Thus I first speak of the men who beheaded generals and seized banners.
晉: 斬五百餘級獲生口千餘降者六百餘人
They took over five hundred heads, got over a thou-self shot three arrows at it before he dismounted. He struck it with a light sword and cut off Chòu's head with the brown ax and hoisted it to the large white flag.

That done, he went to where Chòu's two favorite concubines were; both had killed themselves in anticipation.
The Martial King shot three more arrows, struck them with a sword, cut off their heads with the black ax and hoisted their heads to the small white flag.

君臣不正人道不和國多盜賊下怨其上則責 之司徒故三公典其職憂其分舉其辯明其隱
此三公之任也 What are the three ducal ministers?
They are the minister of works, the minister of war and the minister of manpower. The minister of war is responsible for the sky, the minister of works for the earth and the minister of manpower for the people. Thus if yin and yang are not in harmony, if the four seasons are not in rhythm, if the stars lose their regularities, if disasters and anomalies distort normality then we task the minister of war with that. If mountains collapse, if stream valleys do not flow, if the five grains do not grow nor plants and trees flourish, we task the minister of works with that. If ruler and minister are not aligned, if the way of man is not in harmony, if there are many thieves and robbers in the land and inferiors resent their superiors then we task the minister of manpower with that. Thus the three ducal ministers keep their duties in control, worried about the demarcations, offering their analyses and making clear what had been obscure. These are the responsibilities of the three

tsjag tsjəb 2.6 hierarchical leader 78 子

禮：王者之制祿爵公侯伯子男凡五等 How those who rule as kings order stipends and ranks: they make five grades altogether, duke, marquess, earl, viscount, baron.

There was said to be a five-grade system of noble rank under the Chou, consisting of 公 kung "duke," 侯 g'u "marquess," 伯 p'ak "earl," 子 tsjag "viscount," and 男 nam "baron." (The translated titles are from the English system, not the slightly differing French one.) Textual evidence tends to support the first three as titles bestowed by the Chou king, at least through the early Ch'in-ch'iu period. The last term, 男 (possibly not of Chou origin) seems to denote a mere tribal chieftain. The remaining one, 子, occasions confusion which sinologists fixated on "the meaning of the character" have not dispelled. George Kennedy's identification of it with the noun-suffix that later became so common was a laudable effort to break free of that constricting viewpoint, but it does not accord with the evidence. This is a free word, not a bound form:

史：范中行氏反伐公公擊之范中行敗走丁未二子奔朝歌 The Fan and Chung-hang clans rebelled and attacked the ruler, who struck at them. Fan and Chung-hang were defeated and fled. On ting-wei the two family heads fled to Chao-ke.

左：夫子爲王子圉 That gentleman is the king's son Wei.

左：此子爲穿封成 This gentleman is Ch'uan-feng Hsiü. 論：子不言神力怪亂 The Master did not speak of spooks, feats of strength, prodigies or rebellions.

Briefly (and crudely) it is the same as the 子 of 天子, 舟子, and 君子, related to 宰 tsag (tsəd ← tsəb?) "foreman" (qv). Perh also rel to 左, 宰 means a major-domo, a man appointed to control the operations of a household on behalf of its owner. The word written in d'z'əg (d'z'əd ← d'z'əb?) in the folg passage is suggestive. (V. more ex at sub-entry d under 在.)

呂：堯以天下讓於子州支父子州支父對曰以我爲天子猶可也雖然我適有幽憂之病方將治之未暇在天下也 Yao offered the world to Master Chou-chih-fu, who replied, "To make me Emperor would be all right, I suppose; but I have a private concern troubling me which I am just about to deal with. I'm not ready to govern the world."

Parallels between 公 (qv) and 子 are extensive. Both words mean the head of a hierarchical group, 公 of a feudal state, 子 of a great family (later also of other groups such as schools). Both impute high status, 公 through its prior meaning "senior man," 子 by connoting one who wields the authority of the ancestors as proxy. Both are used as third-person-for-second-person honorifics like Italian lei. Both function as head to a prep as adjunct. Thus 范宣子 "The Perspicuous Patriarch of the Fan" is syntactically and semantically exactly parallel to 魯宣公 "The Perspicuous Marquess of Lu." We also see 主 liu "master" in this idiom.

戰：智伯帥三國之眾以攻趙襄主於晉陽...反智伯之約得兩國之眾以攻智伯之國禽其身以成襄子之功 Chih-po led the massed force of three states to attack the Prospering Patriarch of Chao in Chin-yang. [...] He broke Chih-po's treaty and got the forces of the two states to attack Chih-po's capital, capture him and complete the Prospering Patriarch's success.

Note also the office of 柱國 in 楚, perh to be understood as "he who takes charge of the state".

The anc r of 柱 could have come from arch d'i'əb.

There was a reading of 子 that would have rimed in Ancient Chinese final /-au/ or /-au/.

非：謳乎其已乎苞乎其往歸田成子乎 Oh, dear. Will it end or get thicker? Should we turn our

We also find 之 in what seems to be a parallel usage.

左:晉侯賞從亡者介之推不言祿祿亦弗及
When the Marquess of Chin was rewarding those who followed him into exile, Chieh Chih Ch'ui made no mention of a stipend and accordingly no stipend went

Cynosure Marquess of Chin returned to his state, Chieh Tzû Ch'ui was unwilling to accept a reward.

If one ignores the philologically interesting parallel with 主 and focuses on that with 公, fixating, as sinologists would later do, on its acceptation as "duke," an expression like 吳子 might tempt one to see a parallel with 宋公

左:吳公子慶忌驟諫吳子 Rulerson Ch'ing-chi of Wu vigorously rebuked the chief of Wu [who we know called himself something translated into CC as 王 "king"].
Among those who succumbed to this temptation was the relentless systematizer who wrote the 周禮.

鄭. At the death of its ruler in 698 BC, the powerful chief minister chose one of the dead ruler's sons, whose personal name was 忽, for the succession.

史:生太子忽...立之是為昭公 She gave birth to the heir-apparent Hu...he installed him. He became the Renowned earl. [I.e. Renowned was made his p'hep.]

A half-brother whose personal name was 突 and who became known later as 鄭厲公 had the backing of a powerful faction, who forced the chief minister to install him in place of the heir-apparent.
史:祭仲...以突歸...突至鄭立是為厲公 Chai Chung...brought T'u back...when T'u reached Ch'êng, he assumed the rule. He became the Cruel Earl.

|name of state + 厲|p'hep + 公|"dead ruler"
+ 突|personal name. The title of both of these half-brothers while ruling Ch'êng was the same as their father's had been, 鄭伯 "Earl of Ch'êng", the same as was held by all rulers of 鄭.

A conspiracy led to 突 fleeing the capital and to the re-installation of his half-brother, who was assassinated a year later. The Renowned earl's younger full brother was next:

左:弑昭公而立公子躋 They assassinated the Renowned earl and installed rulerson Wei.

史:是為子躋也無謚號 This was 子躋; he never received a p'hep. [leave 子躋 untranslated for the nonce]

This 躋 ruled Ch'êng less than a year:

史:子躋元年...鄭子躋往會...齊侯怒遂伏甲 而殺子躋 In the first year of 子躋...鄭子躋 went to the meeting...The Marquess of Ch'i got angry, went ahead and donned his armor and killed 子躋.

How we translate 鄭子躋 in the utterance just cited will depend in part on how we parse it. So far we have seen 鄭 and 子躋 as isolatable elements; but we have also seen 躋 as an isolatable element.

We also find 鄭子 as an isolatable element:

史:召子躋弟公子嬰於陳而立之是為鄭子
They summoned 子躋's younger brother rulerson
Ying from Ch'ên and installed him. He became 鄭子.

Just how Szu-ma Ch'ien interpreted the phrase 鄭子 is a question worth pursuing elsewhere, but I would resist any suggestion that he supposed that this new ruler had been demoted from earl to viscount. Legge clearly did not read it that way; he translates this passage:

左:祭仲逆鄭子于陳而立之 Chai Chung met
as "Chai Chung sent to Ch'ên for another son of duke Chuang, met him, and made him earl of Ch'êng." He translates this passage:

左:六月甲子傅瑕殺鄭子及其二子而納厲公
In the sixth month on the day chia-tzû, Fu Hsia killed 鄭子 and his two sons and brought in the Cruel Earl.
as, "In the sixth month, on K'eh-tsze, H'ea killed the actual earl [the text simply is 鄭子, 'a son of
Such are the contortions into which one can be forced by rigid adherence to the "meaning of the character" as "son".

Ch'êng before the installation of his successor:
左:祭仲專鄭伯患之 Chai Chung concentrated power in himself, which did not sit well with the Earl of Ch'êng.

and after his re-installation:
左:鄭伯自櫟入緩告于楚 When the Earl of Ch'êng entered from Le, he delayed giving notice to Ch'u.
but between those two dates the term 鄭伯 referred to the 躋 mentioned above, the one met and installed by Chai Chung and later murdered by Fu Hsia (the same one who was called 鄭子 in the account of those two events cited above):

左:將會鄭伯謀紀故也鄭伯辭以難 He intended to meet with the Earl of Ch'êng; the purpose was to make plans about Chi. The Earl of Ch'êng declined, citing unrest [doubtless meaning the threat from his half-brother 突].

春:夏齊侯陳侯鄭伯遇于垂 In summer, the Marquess of Ch'i, the Marquess of Ch'ên and the Earl of Ch'êng met at Ch'ui.

The man 嬰 who was called 鄭伯 in the two passages just cited was considered to be the legiti-mate ruler by officials of Ch'êng:

左:先君桓公命我先人典司宗祏社稷有主 而外其心其何貳如之苟主社稷國內之民其 誰不為臣臣無二心天之制也子儀在位十四 年矣而謀召君者庸非二乎莊公之子猶有八人 若皆以官爵行賂勸貳而可以濟事君其若之何
Our former ruler the Foursquare Earl ordered my ancestor to oversee the arrangement of the tablet-cases in the ancestral temple. What disloyalty could be compared to turning one's mind to one who is outside the state when there is present a master of the altars of land and grain?
Whoever happens to be master of the altars, surely no subject within the state would refuse to serve him. And it is the rule of Sky that such service is to be whole-hearted. In the fourteen years that 子儀 has been in the rulership, have not those who plotted to summon YL been disloyal? Of the sons of the Stern Earl, eight men still remain. If all of them were to use rank as bribes to encourage disloyalty and could accomplish their aims by that means, what could YL do about it?

The high official who made that acknowledgement was to commit suicide by 突, who seems to have justified his p'hep "Cruel". (The man here called 子儀 must be the same one 史記 called 嬰. Such a discrepancy between 史記 and 左傳 is by no means unique; a study of such names might yield information about sources.)

Why is the same man now called 鄭伯, now 鄭 子? A detailed answer could take up a whole book, but its core is simple: the old saw that it is the winners who write the histories. The passages in which he is called 鄭子 stem from traditions within the state of 鄭, where the vengeful malevolence of 突 ensured that his own descendants, not those of his half-brothers, would inherit the earldom. P'hep may have been denied to 躋 and 嬰 partly of mere spite but mostly to deny legitimacy to any possible claim to the earldom from any of their descendants, which is why when 嬰 is mentioned in accounts from this source he is referred to not as a legitimate ruler but as 鄭子 "the vicar of Ch'êng". But in accounts stemming from sources in 魯, who had no dog in that fight, he is given the title he legitimately held, 鄭伯 "Earl of Ch'êng".

If, as Kennedy argued, 孔, 莊 and 墨 are epithets, not surnames, then those we now know as 孔丘, 莊周 and 墨翟 may not have been called that until after they died. Then the 子 of 孔子, 莊子 and 墨子 may be etymologically the 子 of 宣子 in an extended sense. None of these was head of a great land-owning family, but each could be called head of a group of followers. For that matter, it could be said, not entirely facetiously, that Speedy Hound led the pack:

戰:韓子廬者天下之疾犬也 Speedy Hound was the fastest dog in the world.

Later we find 荀子 and 韓子, in which 荀 and 韓 are surnames. (The 非 of 韓非子 is his given name, as his own writing shows.) These were government officials, not heads of groups, and neither was head of a great family. There was a prince of 淮南, but his title in that role was 淮南王; 淮南 子 does not refer to him but to the book he commissioned, as 韓子 is a man while 韓非子 is a book. Still, all these semantic developments are of a sort known in other languages, as is the extension of 男子 namsiag "man-child" to mean "man".

There is no suggestion of a leadership role for the woman Mencius called 西子 and Kennedy called "a simple little Gvot laandress," and no clear semantic connection to 子 "leader." There are earlier examples of women's names ending in 子:

左:惠公元妃孟子 The Benevolent Earl took Méng-tzu ["eldest child"?) as his prime consort.

左:仲子生而有文在其手 When Chung-tzu ["middle child"?) was born she had marks on her hand.

If the 子 of 西子 was homophonous with the 子 of 荀子 then regardless of whether their origins were distinct or not, the probability of reanalysis, blending or conflation would have been high. The connection of any of these 子 with the 子 of 眸子 (qu)

remains unclear, but I doubt that a detailed tracing of their history would show a simply-branching etymological tree.

天子⇒天

It seems the only difference between 子 preposed to a name as app (ie this word) and 子 as head folg a name as adj (ie prec word) may be that the first usage applies to nicknames and personal appellations, while the second applies to surnames and epithets. It is noteworthy that both may be used in the same phrase, as in 子范子. Many, perhaps most, nouns denoting a social position or status can be used as preposed appositives in this manner. Examples that spring readily to mind are 帝, 王, 后, 妃, 師 and 盜.

[The author seems to have collated his source in 史記 (the story of 趙簡子 dreaming he ascended to the sky) with the critique of it in 論衡, to the detriment of both. These four two-syllable phrases are all clearly meant in this passage as names of celestial palaces. The first, 清都, is not attested elsewhere but is vaguely reminiscent of a Buddhist name for paradise, 淨土, coined in the 4th C AD. The third is found in the chapter on astronomy in 史記. The second and fourth are garbled. The phrase 廣樂 “music of all sorts” in 史記 is rendered 靡樂 in 論衡. Perhaps that 靡, a scribal error for 廣, underlies the 微 in this passage, while the phrase 廣樂 is resurrected from 史記 and made to serve as a palace name. There may also be a confused echo of 太微, or perhaps the two graphs 宮太 were omitted between 紫 and 微 by a copyist.]

隋: 若夫法紫微以居中擬明堂而布政依分野而命國體眾星而效官動必順時教不違物故能成變化之道合陰陽之妙 If you imitate the Purple Palace in remaining in the center, hold to the Bright Hall in dispensing governance, give orders to states on the basis of the Assigned Fields, distribute offices by collating the many stars, always meet the occasion when you act, never depart from symbols in your teaching, then you will be able to accomplish the Way of vicissitude and accord with the mysteries of Yin and Yang. The essay on 天文 in 隋書 openly acknowledges 列子 as one of its sources. The same essay later gives 紫微 as the name of a star:

隋: 紫宮垣十五星其西蕃七東蕃八在北斗北一曰紫微太帝之坐也天子之常居也主命主度也 The wall of the Purple Palace has 15 stars. Its western screen has seven and its eastern screen eight. It is to the north of the north ladle. One is called Purple Mystery. It is the headquarters of the grand ancestor. It is the normal residence of the emperor. It governs fate. It governs measurement.

莊: 且夫水之積也不厚則其負大舟也無力 Moreover, if the accumulation of a body of water is not deep, it will lack the power to support a big boat. 衡: 氣結閉積聚為癰潰為疔創 When the vapor congeals and is obstructed, it accumulates to form pustules, then leaks out to form ulcers and carbuncles. 漢: 孝文欲作一臺度用百金重民之財廢而不為其積土甚至今猶存 The Cynosure Emperor wanted to build one tower. The expense would have been a hundred ducats. He thought it more important for the folk to have resources. It was abandoned, never built. The foundation of piled dirt exists to this day. 史: 寡人積甲宛東下隨智者不及謀勇士不及怒寡人如射隼矣 We would mass armored troops east of Wan and descend to Sui. Your brightest counselors would have no time to plan, nor your bravest warriors to burst into action. It would be as if We shot a falcon.

史: 秦西有巴蜀大船積粟起於汶山浮江已下至楚三千餘里 Ch'in has, in the west, Pa and Shu. If large boats are laden with grain and launched from Min Mountain onto the Yangtze, they can float down to Ch'ü, over three thousand li away.

史: 公劉雖在戎狄之閒復脩后稷之業務耕種行地宜自涿涿度渭取材用行者有資居者有畜積民賴其慶 Although Kung-liu was among barbarians, he revived the project of Hou Chi, concentrating on plowing and planting. He moved where the land was suitable, from the Ch'ü and Ch'ü across the Wei to get supplies. Those who traveled had sustenance and those who stayed behind built up stores. The folk relied on his good fortune.

隋：今日西轉不復見是火滅之類也日月不圓也望視之所以圓者去人遠也夫日火之精也月水之精也水火在地不圓在天何故圓 In fact, how the sun rolls westward and is no longer seen is exactly analogous to a fire going out. It is not true that the sun and moon are round. That they appear round when we look at them is because they are so far away from us. The sun is the essence of fire, the moon that of water. Water and fire are not round on the ground; why should they be round in the sky?

呂：道也者至精也不可爲形不可爲名彊爲之謂之太一 What The Way is ultimate essence; it cannot be given form, it cannot be given a name, but if forced to do so we call it big blob. [In both instances 可 erog ind obj 爲.]

漢：軍旅之後必有凶年言民之各以其愁苦之氣薄陰陽之和感天地之精而災氣爲之生也 After a military expedition the harvest will surely fail. That says each of the folk attenuates the harmony of Yin and Yang by the energy-vapor of his sorrow and bitterness, resonating with the germinative power of sky and earth, and destructive energy-vapor arises on account of that.

山：捕魚水中兩手各操一魚 When they grab fish from the river each hand of the pair takes one.

史：五穀大夫之相秦也勞不坐乘暑不張蓋行於國中不從車乘不操干戈功名藏於府庫德行施於後世 When the five-ram official was premier of Ch'in, he didn't sit to ride when tired, nor did he open a parasol when it was hot. He traveled throughout the country, never accompanied by chariots nor carrying weapons. His reputation for accomplishment was preserved in the treasuries and his beneficent deeds came down to later generations.

史：君之出也後車十數從車載甲多力而駢脅者為驂乘持矛而操闔戟者旁車而趨 When you go out, you have over ten following chariots, your accompanying chariots have armored men, men of great strength and doubled ribs are in your chariot, and chariots with men holding all sorts of spears go at your side, all at a gallop.

b. ply (weap), play (instr)

非：羿執鞅持扞操弓闔機 Yi takes up the breast-piece and cuffs, takes up the bow and cocks the action.

漢：富貴者人主之操柄也令民為之是與人主共操柄不可長也 Riches and honor are a ruler's control-handle. If he allows the folk to manipulate it, that is to allow them to share the control-handle—that can't be made to last.

淮：柯之盟掄三尺之刃造桓公之胸三戰所亡一朝而反之勇聞于天下功立於魯國 At the treaty of Ko he drew a sword and pointed it at the chest of the Foursquare Marquess. What he had lost in three battles he retrieved in one morning, his reputation for courage went throughout the world and his merit for accomplishment was established in the state of Lu.

呂：辨而不當論信而不當理勇而不當義[法→]

決而不當務惑而乘驥也狂而操吳干將也 To speak persuasively but miss the point of the discussion, to be factually correct but for the wrong reasons, to be courageous but act wrongly, or to act decisively but not do what you set out to do is to drive Chi in the wrong direction. It is to wield Kan Chiang of Wu in madness.

2. choose, take

左：樂操土風 For music he chose airs of his locality.

呂：師操不化不聽之術而以彊教之欲道之行身之尊也不亦遠乎 If a teacher takes a skill that will be without effect and will be ignored, and teaches it by force, and wants his way to be put in practice and his person to be honored, he would be a long way from it indeed.

3. take as payment; requisition

管：委施於民之所不足操事於民之所有餘 issue stores of what the folk haven't enough of and requisition what the folk have too much of 管：人君御穀物之秩相勝而操事於其不平之間 The ruler of others steers the relative prices of grain and goods to dominate alternately and takes payment from the gap of their inequality.

釋：山無草草木曰童 If a mountain lacks trees and plants it is called “uncapped youth.”

呂：冬與夏不能兩[刑→]形草與稼不能兩成新穀熟而陳穀虧 Winter and summer cannot both take form at once; weeds and crops cannot both grow in the same place; when the new grain ripens the old grain deteriorates.

衡：醴泉朱草和氣所生然則鳳皇騏驎亦和氣所生也 If sweet springs and pearl bushes are produced by harmonious vapor then phoenixes and unicorns are also produced by harmonious vapor.

語：民人食肉飲衣皮毛至於神農以為行蟲走獸難以養民乃求可食之物嘗百草之實察酸苦之味教人食五穀 Common people ate meat and drank blood, wore untanned skins and furs. When Shên Nung came along, his opinion was that critters that crawled and ran were not an easy source of nutrition for the folk, so he sought edible things. He tasted the fruit of all sorts of plants, discriminating their sour or bitter tastes, and taught people to eat the five grains.

三：乃取蒙衝門艦數十艘實以薪草膏油灌其中裹以帷幕上建牙旗先書報曹公欺以欲降 They then chose several dozen warships and filled them with firewood and weeds; they poured fat and oil into them and covered them with tarpaulins. They hoisted the ensign, having beforehand sent Lord Ts'ao a letter falsely reporting their willingness to surrender.
史：廣出獵見草中石以為虎而射之中石沒鏃視之石也因復更射之終不能復入石矣 Kuang went out hunting and, seeing a stone in the weeds, thought it was a tiger and shot it. His shot buried the arrowhead in the stone. When he saw it was a stone, he then tried shooting it again, but was never again able to penetrate the stone.

ts'ögtsio ts'abšjag cursive writing 529 草書

晉：漢興而有草書不知作者姓名 With the rise of Han came cursive writing; no one knows the name of the inventor.

草：余郡上有梁孔達姜孟穎者皆當世之彥哲也然慕張生之草書過於希孔顏焉孔達寫書以示孟穎皆口誦其文手楷其[篇→]偏無怠倦焉 Among the worthies of my province are Liang Kung-ta and Chiang Mêng-ying, both ornaments to the intelligentsia of our age, but they admire the grass writing of Academician Chang more than they look to Confucius or Yen Hui. Whenever Mêng-ying was shown a piece of writing by K'ung-ta he would recite it aloud and then copy it out side by side imitating the calligraphy, nor did he ever tire of doing this.

草：於是後學之徒競慕二賢守令作[篇→]偏人撰一卷以為秘玩余懼其背經而趨俗此非所以弘道興世也 Their younger followers vied with each other in admiration for their competence. They would hold back a decree until they could make a copy, and when any of them had filled a scroll he would keep it as a closely-held curio. It troubles me that they turn their backs on the classics and embrace the current vogue. This is not how to show the greatness of the Way or to bring prosperity to our time.

草：又想羅趙之所見唯[沮→]詎故為說草書本末以慰羅趙息梁姜焉 I also thought of the ridicule and derision to which Lo and Chao were subjected. Thus I am explaining grass writing in its entirety for them, so as to show sympathy for Lo and Chao and put Liang and Chiang out of business.

草：竊覽有道張君所與朱使君書稱正氣可以消邪人無其畔妖不自作誠可謂信道抱真知命樂天者也 I have respectfully examined the letter Yu-tao—the Honorable Mr. Chang—sent His Excellency Mr. Chu. It claims that right energy-vapor can be used to wipe out wrong, that when people lack the divisiveness of that then omens do not arise of themselves, and that may genuinely be called trusting the way, holding to the authentic, recognizing fate and delighting in what is ordained.

草：若夫褒杜崔[沮→]詎羅趙忻忻有自臧之意者無乃近於矜伎賤彼貴我哉 As to praising Tu and Ts'ui while deriding Lo and Chao, he smugly intends to applaud himself; isn't that tantamount to boasting of one's own ability, deprecating others and vaunting oneself?

草：夫草書之興也其於近古乎上非天象所垂下非河洛所吐中非聖人所造蓋秦之末刑峻網密官書煩冗戰攻並作軍書交馳羽檄紛飛故為隸草趨急速耳示簡易之指非聖人之業也但貴剛難省煩損復為單務取易為易知非常儀也故其贊曰臨事從宜 As to when grass writing arose, it must have been in the recent past. It is incongruent to that sent down by sky images above, brought forth by the Ho and Lo below and activated by the sages between. It seems that at the end of the Ch'in dynasty punishment was exalted and the legal net fine-meshed, official documents multiplied troublesomely, was erupted everywhere at once, military documents sped back and forth, and urgent dispatches flew around in chaos. So they devised li-shu grass writing. It was only to speed things to their utmost pace and convey simple, easily-understood meanings. It was no project of the sages. They only valued eliminating difficulty and minimizing trouble; they reduced double forms to single; they made it a point to choose what was easy to make and easy to recognize. That was not meant as a permanent standard. Thus their slogan was “Do what the job needs.”

草：而今之學草書者不思其簡易之旨直以為杜崔之法龜龍所見也其攢扶拄控[詰→]結屈爰[乙→]中不可失也齷齪以上苟任涉學皆廢倉頡史籀竟以杜崔為楷 But those who learn grass writing nowadays never think of those simple, easily-understood messages. They just assume that it is according to the pattern of Tu and Ts'ui and is what was shown to them by turtles and dragons, and that their pullings and pushings, pokings and proddings, compressings and expandings cannot go wrong. Everyone past early childhood who happens to be faced with getting an education ignores Ts'ang Chieh and Chou the scribe and winds up taking Tu and Ts'ui as their model.

草：私書相與之際每書云適迫遽故不及草草本易而速今反難而遲失指多矣 When letters are exchanged among private individuals, they always say that because time is so pressing they haven't been able to use grass writing. Grass writing was originally easy and fast; now it is difficult and slow. That misses the point in so many ways.

草：凡人各殊氣血異筋骨心有疏密手有巧拙 Everyone has different vitality and constitution.

There are vague minds and precise ones; there are clever hands and clumsy ones.

草：書之好醜可為強哉若人顏有美惡豈可學以相若耶昔西施心疹捧胸而顰眾愚效之只增其醜趙女善舞行步嫵媚學者弗獲失節匍匐 Can the beauty of calligraphy be artificially forced? Just as some human faces are beautiful and others not, how could they be made like each other by imitation? Hsi Shih once got heartburn; she clutched her chest with both hands, her face contorted in pain. A lot of dolts imitated her and only made themselves more ugly. The women of Chao are good dancers; they walk with a very alluring gait. One who tried to imitate them didn't master it, got tanglefooted and crawled. [失節 lit “mismanaged the tempo”.]

草：夫杜崔張子皆有超俗絕世之才博學餘暇游手於斯後世慕焉 Now, Tu, Ts'ui and Chang all have talent far beyond the ordinary, surpassing all their contemporaries. In what time they spare from their broad studies, they dabble in such calligraphy, and younger men give their admiration to it.

草：專用為務鑽堅仰高忘其疲勞夕惕不息仄不暇食 They make it their sole concern, work as if drilling adamant, aiming high, forgetting fatigue, lying fretfully awake at night, not pausing to eat at dinnertime. [The phrase 仰高 strikes me as a trifle anomalous in this context; perhaps it is a copyist's error, but for what I could not say.]

草：十日一筆月數丸墨領袖如皂唇齒常黑雖處眾座不違談戲展指畫地以草劇壁[臂→]壁穿皮刮指爪摧折見[鯁→]颯出血猶不休轍 They use up a writing brush every ten days, and several tablets of inkstuff per month. Their collars and sleeves look as if they need laundering; their lips and teeth are always blackened. In places of public resort they don't relax or chat or joke. They extend a finger and draw on the ground, or scratch a wall with a weed stalk. When the wall is deeply gouged or their skin abraded, the nail split and broken, and they see that the torn skin is bleeding, even then they do not cease. 草:然其爲字無益於工[拙亦→]亦拙如效顰者之增醜學步者之失節也 But the way they make characters adds nothing to calligraphic quality, it is still as clumsy as those who clenched their faces in imitation making themselves uglier, or those who tried to learn the Hantan walk bungling the tempo. 草:且草書之人蓋伎藝之細者耳鄉邑不以此較能朝廷不以此科吏博士不以此講試四科不以此求備徵聘不問此意考績不課此字善既不達於政而拙無損於治推斯言之豈不細哉 Moreover, those who write the grass hand are after all the least significant of artists. No one uses this either to compare ability in town or to rank officials at court. Professors do not develop arguments in terms of this, nor do the four facets of conduct require it for their completion. When appointments are made, this is not a topic of inquiry; when achievements are assessed, this hand is not tested. Becoming good at it gives one no insight into government; being clumsy at it detracts nothing from good order. When we discuss it in these terms, isn't it pathetic?

草:夫務內者必關外志小者必忽大俯而捫蝨不暇見天地至大而不見者方銳精於蠶蝨乃不暇焉 Those who focus on internals ignore externals; those intent on the small neglect the great. Bent over scratching lice, one has no time to look at the sky. They do not see sky and earth, immense as they are; they dissipate their perceptive essence on nuts and lice and have no time for anything else. [nr]

草:第以此[篇→]偏研[思↓]銳精豈若用之於彼聖經稽歷協律推步期程 If we were to give a comparative rank to this lopsidedly polishing the mind, how could it measure up to using it in studying the classic books of the sages? Or to working through all the musical keys and tunings? Or to calculating the predetermined celestial paths step by step? [nr]

草:探蹟[鉤→]釣深幽贊神明覽天地之心推聖人之情析疑論之中理俗儒之爭[依→]倚正道於邪說儕雅樂於鄭聲興至德之和陸宏太倫之玄清 Pry into mysteries, fish in deep waters; drill into the dark places of the mind. Observe the inwardness of sky and earth; estimate what the sages were really like; break into the inside of dubious doctrines; put in order the disputations of ordinary scholars. Get true wisdom installed among silly opinions. Put classical music on an even footing with popular. Bring about the social harmony of perfect good will. Expand the scope of what is dark or clear in the highest logic. [nr]

草:窮可以守身遺名達可以尊主致平以茲命世永鑑後生不亦淵乎 If straitened it can be means of preserving oneself and leaving behind a reputation; if affluent it can be means of making one's ruler honored and ensuring tranquility. 史：夫取秦厚交也伐齊正利也厚厚交務正利聖王之事也 Now, getting Ch'in on your side is a firm connection and attacking Ch'i is properly beneficial. To value firm connections and aim at proper benefit is what a sage king does.

孟：齊人伐燕勝之宣王問曰或謂寡人勿取或謂寡人取之以萬乘之國伐萬乘之國五旬而舉之人力不至於此不取必有天殃取之何如 The Ch'i attacked Yen and defeated them. The Per-spicious King asked, "Some advised Us not to annex it. Some advised Us to annex it. For a state of 10,000 chariots to attack another such state and take it in fifty days—this is not within human power. Not annexing it would draw punishment from Sky. What would happen if we annex it?"

b. choose to do

淮：肆一人之邪而長海內之禍此大倫之所不取也 To give free rein to the perversity of the one man and bring burgeoning evil to all of civilization is a thing the highest logic does not allow.

6. X 也者 in definition or identification, what X is 呂：命也者不知所以然而然者也 Fate is defined as what is so although we do not know how it comes to be so.

國：君也者將牧民而正其邪者也 By ruler we mean one who is supposed to shepherd the folk and correct their transgressions.

b. (dist 者也)

B. Nuc sent embedded within framework of app sent makes rhetorical affirmation it is that, it is true that.

fp may be the only sign of such embedding.

This an ordinary app sent in which both A-term and B-term have the internal structure of a nucleus. In examples like there is ambiguity, in that 此 or is might be considered either the subject of an embedded nuc sent or the A-term of an app sent in which the B-term has the internal structure of a compound nucleus. My translations show which analysis I prefer.)

1. w/obj l-shifted, referred to by -z, embedded nuc sent easy to confuse w/app sent

多：此之謂也 This is what it refers to. [embedded nuc sent: 謂 is fac, 此 is l-shifted obj, 之 deictically refers to obj, 也 shows embedding]

呂：嗜肉者非腐鼠之謂也 It isn't rat carcasses that “liking meat” refers to. [embedded nuc]

2. two embedded nuc may share fp

淮：古之用兵者非利土壤之廣而貪金玉之略將以存亡繼絕平天下之亂而除萬民之害也 When the ancients resorted to arms, it was not that they sought the benefit of broadening their holdings of good land, nor that they were greedy for the loot of bronzes and jades; it was that they intended by it to restore lost houses and resume broken lineages, put down the rebellious anywhere in the world and do away with the sufferings of all people.

3. app sent & embedded nuc may share fp

史：燕固弱國不足畏也 Yen is certainly a weak state and is worth scant consideration.

4. underlying nuc sent negated by -不

5. surface app sent negated by 非

呂：稼非有欲也 It is not that the grain has any preference.

戰：否非若是也 No. It is not true that it's like that. 非：子非失相也 It's not that you have misjudged.

呂：君問可非問臣之讎也 YL asked about acceptability, not about YS's enemies.

呂：先生之年長矣非有它子也 Your years are quite advanced, elder sir, and it is not as if you had other sons.

非：黍者非飯之也以雪桃也 The point of the millet is not that you are to eat it; it's that you are to use it to wipe the fuzz off the peach.

6. When both negatives occur, order is 非不; occurrences of 不非 are all of vst 非 “be alien to”.

淮：割瘻疽非不痛也 It's not that cutting off infected carbuncles doesn't hurt.

C. In choice q. in some dial, var of 邪 qv

衡：且所謂怒者誰也天神邪蒼蒼之天也 And who is the one who is said to be angered? Is it the sky spirit or the cerulean sky?

衡：自然成腹中乎母爲之也 Did they develop of themselves in the belly or did the mother contrive them?

D. When not sent-final, 也 has effect of shifting all preceding it leftward, simplest form of l-shifting for emph, which may be slight enough not to be worth translating. A similar use of preposed 唯 dīwər in Western Chou Chinese should be noted.

史：夫破人之與破於人也臣人之與臣於人也豈可同日而論哉 As to the relation between smashing others and being smashed by others or making servants of others and being made a servant by others, how could they be discussed on the same day?

呂：凡聖人之動作也必察其所以之與其所以爲 Whenever a sage stirs from quiescence, initiating some action, he necessarily scrutinizes where, by means of it, he will go and what, by means of it, he will contrive.

晏：古者先君之干福也政必合乎民行必順乎神 In ancient times when the first rulers sought good fortune, they thought it necessary to make their government acceptable to the people and their conduct obedient to the spirits.

管：取人以人者其去人也亦用人 Those who hire men on account of other men, when they come to fire them will also do it on account of other men.

國：毒之酋腊者其殺之也茲速 As poison is progressively increased, its lethality becomes speedier.

Tzū-kung was named Yü, nicknamed Tzū-wo. 莊：其視下也亦若是則已矣 When it looks down, it's also like that and that's all there is.

國：以晉國之克也爲己實謀之曰微我晉不戰矣 You assume the victory of the state of Chin to be that it was you who planned it, saying, “If not for me, Chin would not have fought.”

論：子路曰子行三軍則誰與子曰暴虎馮河死而無悔者吾不與也必也臨事而懼好謀而成者也 Tzū-lu said, “If you went as supreme commander, who would you take with you?” The master said, “Ones who would go at a tiger barehanded or cross the Ho with no boat, who would die without regret—I would not take them. I would insist, mind you, on ones who feel anxiety when put in charge of something and who succeed by their love of forethought.”

E. follows proper names in quoted speech

國：地也可 Ti would do.

詩：無使虜也吠 Don't make Shaggy bark.

左：黯也進不見惡退無謗言 An, when he came forward, aroused no dislike, and when he withdrew, was not the subj of critical remarks.

The word 也 is a puzzle for many students of CC. In a coarse superficial sense (which is all we can get by reading characters instead of language) the presence or absence of 也 seems, like tra-la or hey-nonny-no, to make no difference to the meaning. (Advocates of that view would seem to be contradicting claims about terseness and concision of CC.) In the view of the people in whose language the word was used it did have significance contrasting with that of other final particles (see the citation from 淮南子 immediately following the head of this entry).

A competing view labels 也 a copula (some consider it a full word instead of a particle). The Japanese reading nai reflects this view. Whether to call it a copula or not is in some sense a mere quibble, but whatever label you assign it should take into account that its freedom of occurrence is much more limited than that of words like 牛, 哥 or even 於.

My view is that 也 is a particle that conveys its meaning by modifying the structure of a phrase or sentence in which it occurs. That view requires explanation of how some get the impression that the presence or absence of 也 in appositional sentences is optional. My answer lies in a realm of language that can override syntax, namely style and level of discourse. A fine example in English is a railway timetable. Consider these two sentences:

"This train is scheduled to arrive at Ayton at 2: 11."

"This train is scheduled to arrive at Beeton at 2: 21."

A timetable conveys identical information in this fashion:

Ayton 2:11

Beeton 2:21

To write out a timetable in complete sentences would be absurd. But for such concision to be intelligible requires context. One ignorant of timetables would need explanation (mostly couched in sentences) before becoming able to understand a timetable's mode of communicating. Thus the 爾雅 lists synonyms and the 月令 lists seasonals without using 也 by establishing a pattern of repetition. A scholiast glossing a single word A in a text as another word B is more likely to write AB 也 than to emulate the omission of 也 in the 爾雅. V. note on putative causatives under 寧.

ren's song that said, "Mulberry bow and bamboo quiver—these will bring ruin to the state of Chou."

The version of this tale in 史記 says the bow was made of 檿. These two words are total homophones except for the initial. The knackclat initial relates as comparand to velars, not apicals. If these two mulberry words were the sole example of such contact we could write it off as coincidence, but other examples come to mind, e.g. 澹 diam "suffice" and 饜 iam "satisfiate." The words šiwən and χiwən "hibiscus" show a similar, but not identical, contrast, as do 穢 iwəd and 祟 šiwəd "ill omen". Tiny clues like this may be what we wind up having to rely on in sorting out the phoneme inventories of whatever dialects we can postulate and accounting for anomalous medleys of velar, alveolar and apical initials in some phonetic series eg 197 衍 or 496 出. It does not help that the 國語 version of the tale appears to be mildly garbled. (v. 檿)

GSR only allows Anc. /-u from Arch. -j or -u. Comparands indicate a number of words (qrv) in same rime group as 鷺 as prob ex Arch. -r, viz 天矯眇. Anc. /iäu is a regular reflex of Arch. diwar. If 佳 is phon in 雌 diür/iäu- then 鷺 would not be the only Anc. /-u word in series 575. 淮: 今夫調弦者叩宮宮應鼓角角動 Consider, for example, one who is tuning strings; he strikes the kung-note and kung responds, plucks the chiao-note and chiao is stirred.

後: 理國譬若琴瑟其不調者則解而更張 Ordering a state can be compared to tuning a lute: a string that won't tune is removed and replaced. 呂: 師曠曰後世有知音者將知鐘之不調也臣竊爲君恥之至於師涓而果知鐘之不調也是師曠欲善調鐘以爲後世之知音者也 Shih Kuang said, "In the future there will be someone who can discriminate pitch who will recognize that these bells are out of tune. I venture to feel shame on YL's behalf." When it came to the time of Shih Chüan he did in fact recognize that the bells were out of tune. This was a case of Shih Kuang wanting to tune the bells properly on behalf of someone in the future who could discriminate pitch.

His student Chao Shêng came to Ling to receive doctrine. Ling tested him on seven things. For the seventh test, Ling and all his students climbed Cloud Tower Mountain. Above a vertical cliff was a single peach tree. It grew sideways out of a stone wall. Looking down one could not make out the ground. Three or four chang out there were large ripe peaches. Ling said to his students, "The one who gets these peaches will become eligible for me to tell him the core of the Way." The students all broke out in sweat. None of them dared to look. Shêng said, "What danger can there be for one protected by a man with supernatural power?" He thereupon threw himself from the top, landing exactly on the peach tree. He picked enough peaches to fill his shirt front, but the stone wall was so steep that he could not return. So he threw two hundred and two peaches up from the tree. Ling divided the peaches among all the students. Two were left over. Ling himself ate one, reserving the other to await Shêng. Ling then stretched out his hand and pulled Shêng, who who came back up in a trice. Ling then gave the remaining peach to Shêng.

Going up along a glen he suddenly came upon a forest of peach blossom lining both banks for several hundred paces with no other trees intermixed. The fragrant flowers were a fofless cloud and fallen leaves cluttered the ground. The fisherman thought it odd and proceeded to the end of the forest. Where it ended he saw a hill having a small opening. He could make out a dim light, so he left his boat and walked in. At first it was extremely narrow but after he had gone forty or fifty paces it cavernously opened up and became brighter. Houses in a town stood wall to wall; chickens and dogs could hear each other. Men and women wore their hair loose. They amiably shared their plenitude. When the saw the fisherman they were amazed and asked where he had come from. When he insisted on returning, they provided drink and food for him. They said a previous generation had brought their families here fleeing the turmoil of the Ch'in dynasty. After that they had sealed themselves off from the outside world. They had not heard of Han, not to mention Wei and Chin. After he emerged he reported to the grand administrator who sent people to follow him and find it. But they got lost and could not find the road again.

If nothing is done at that time to prevent it, the poison will spread throughout the body.

Among plants there are croton beans and jessamine, which, if eaten, discharge the bowels, and if taken to excess, are deadly. What vapor have such things inherited from sky? Everything inherits primary vapor at its genesis. Is venom one kind of primary vapor? 衡:曰夫毒太陽之熱氣也中人人毒人食湊適者其不堪任也不堪任則謂之毒矣太陽火氣常為毒螫氣熱也太陽之地人促急促急之人口舌為毒故楚越之人促急捷疾與人談言口唾射人則人唇胎腫而為創南郡極熱之地其人祝樹樹枯唾鳥鳥墜巫咸能以祝延人之疾愈人之禍者生於江南含烈氣也 I say poison is the hot vapor of extreme Yang. The fact that people are poisoned when struck, or diarrhetic when they ingest it is because they cannot endure it. Only when it is unendurable is it called poison. The fire vapor of extreme Yang always causes poisoning, because the vapor is hot. In places with extreme Yang, people are pushy and impetuous; the speech organs of such people cause poisoning. Thus the pushy, impetuous people of Ch'u and Yüeh speak directly and forcefully and their spittle sprays other people, whose lips then swell and develop boils. In the very hot regions of the southern commanderies, if they curse a tree it withers; if they spit at a bird, it falls. Witch doctors who can always lengthen an illness or alleviate misfortune with their spells are born south of the Yangtze. It is because they contain ardent vapor. 衡:夫毒陽氣也故其中人若火灼人或為蠟所中割肉置地焦沸火氣之驗也 Poison is Yang vapor. Thus the way it attacks someone is like being burned by fire. If someone is stung by an adder, and the flesh is cut off and thrown on the ground, it scorches and bubbles: that is evidence of fire vapor. 衡:四方極皆為維邊唯東南隅有溫烈氣溫烈氣發常以春夏春夏陽起東南隅陽位也他物之氣入人鼻目不能疾痛火煙入鼻鼻疾入目目痛火氣有烈也物為靡屑者多唯一火最烈火氣所燥也食甘旨之食無傷於人食蜜少多則令人毒蜜為蜂液蜂則陽物也 In all directions at the utmost distance there are borders and corners, but only the southeast corner has hot ardent vapor. Hot ardent vapor always issues forth in spring and summer. In spring and summer Yang rises, and the southeast corner is the position of Yang. When the vapor of anything else enters human noses and eyes it cannot cause suffering and pain, but the nose suffers and the eyes are pained when smoke from fire enters them, because the vapor of fire has ardency. Many kinds of things take the form of extremely fine subtle particles, but of these fire is uniquely the most ardent. Of things cooked by fire, eating foods that are temperately seasoned does no harm, but eating rather too much honey induces poisoning. Honey constitutes the exudate of bees, and bees are therefore Yang creatures. 衡:人行無所觸犯體無故痛痛處若杖之跡人腓腓謂鬼毆之鬼者太陽之妖也微者疾謂之邊其治用蜜與丹蜜丹陽物以類治之也夫治風用風治熱用熱治邊用蜜丹則知邊者陽氣所為流毒所加也天地之間毒氣流行人當其衝則面腫疾世人謂之火流所刺也 People who have not been struck or attacked by anything while going about still get pains for no reason. The painful place looks like the weal left by a whip, and the people are debilitated. That is ascribed to their having been scourged by a demon. Demons are ominous manifestations of extreme Yang. When a skin ulcer is very bad we call it suppurating. The cure employs honey and cinnabar. Honey and cinnabar, Yang substances, cure it by similitude. As when we cure wind by wind and cure heat by heat, so when we cure suppurating by honey and cinnabar then we know that suppurating is caused by Yang vapor where a flowing poison hit. Poison vapors flow about in the atmosphere and when people get in their way they get face-swelling sickness. The common saying is that they were punctured by the flow of fire.

衡:人見鬼者言其色赤太陽妖氣自如其色也鬼為烈毒犯人輒死故杜伯射周宣立崩鬼所齋物陽火之類杜伯弓矢其色皆亦南道名毒曰短狐杜伯之象執弓而射陽氣因而激激而射故其中人象弓矢之形 Those who have seen ghosts say that their color is red. Ominous manifestations of extreme Yang would naturally have the appropriate color. When ghosts make ardent poison and attack people, death is immediate. Thus when Tu Po shot, The Foursquare King of Chou died right away. The accoutrements of ghosts are of the nature of Yang fire, so the bow and arrow of Tu Po were both red in color. In the southern provinces a famous poison is called "short fox." In the image of Tu Po, it holds up a bow and shoots; Yang vapor is constricted and spurts. When it spurts it shoots out, so when it hits a man it looks like an arrow from a bow.

2. method, procedure

One of the basic tropes of Chinese technical, political and philosophical discourse is a path known to nan from A to B. Besides 道, there are 術, 塗, 軌 and perhaps 數. Other such images are a heap of things of the same kind set apart from things of different kind (eg 類, 醜, 品), a tool to measure and mark a workpiece (eg 規, 矩), a tool for aligning things (eg 義, 準), a pattern, mold or frame for making standard products (eg 制, 形, 法) and a tool to fix things in place (eg 定, 格). That is to say, the more ethereal realms of abstract Chinese philosophy are discussed in terms of images drawn from transport, industry and heavy construction.

後：琴道 The Way of the Cithern (book title)

史：此所謂四分五裂之道也 This is what I call a way that goes four or five directions all at once.

呂：詐偽之道雖今倫可後將無復非長術也 The way of deceit and pretense, though it may fit a momentary opportunity, will later be unrepeatable. It is not a long-term strategy.

非：安術有七危道有六 Of techniques for security, there are seven; of ways to danger, there are six.

呂：師操不化不聽之術而以彊教之欲道之行身之尊也不亦遠乎 If a teacher takes a skill that will be without effect and will be ignored, and teaches it by force, and wants his way to be put in practice and his person to be honored, he would be a long way from it indeed.

淮：師望之謂之曰吾非愛道於子也恐子不可予也 His teacher stared at him and said, “It’s not that I withheld the technique from you. It’s that I feared you could not be given it.”

非：因可勢求易道 He relies on getting the advantage; he seeks the easy way.

史：吾說公以帝道其志不開悟[矣→]已 I propounded the imperial way to the earl, only his interest wasn’t awakened.

草：[依→]倚正道於邪說 Get true wisdom installed among silly opinions.

晉：既興利而除害亦威眾以立權所謂神道設教率由於此 Given that they cause benefit and do away with harm, they also overawe the multitude, letting power be firmly held. The saying, “The way of the spirits establishes doctrine” likely comes from this.

史：大直若誦道固委蛇 The greatest straightness appears crooked; the Way is definitely winding.

2. a way of life, as practised or taught
荀：垂事養民拊循之呢嘔之冬日則爲之饘粥夏日則爲之瓜菹以偷取少頃之譽焉是偷道也 To condescend to feed the populace, coddle them and cosset them, making them porridge on winter days and sorbet on summer days, getting the windfall of their fleeting praise—such is a feckless way of life.

衡：孔子栖栖周流應聘身不得容道不得行 Confucius bustled thither and thither, going anywhere they invited him. He himself never found a place, nor did his doctrines find acceptance. [nr]

晉：佛外國之神非諸華所應祠奉漢代初傳其道 Buddha is a foreign deity, not one that ought to be worshipped by Chinese. His teaching was first propagated in the Han dynasty.

後：此道清虛貴尚無爲好生惡殺省慾去奢 In these doctrines simplicity and emptiness are valued; they exalt non-contriving, love to spare life and hate to kill, restrict desire and shun lavishness.

露：號爲天子者宜視天如父事天以孝道也 One called “son of sky” ought to attend to Sky as his father and serve Sky in the way of filiality.

史：墨者亦尚堯舜道言其德行曰堂高三尺土階三等茅茨不蔚采椽不刮食土簋啜土刑糲梁之食藜藿之羹 The Mohists also praise the way of Yao and Shun and speak of their ethical deportment, they say, “Their halls were 27” high and had three tiers of stair steps. The cogon thatch was not trimmed nor the oak rafters planed. They ate from daub stew bowls and drank from daub beakers. Coarse grain was what they ate and chenopod was what they used for soup.”

3. the way of the world, how all things go

淮：故聖人所由曰道所爲曰事道猶金石一調不更事猶琴瑟每絃改調 Thus what the sage follows is called the Way, while what he does is called business. The Way is like bells and chimes, tuned once for all and never altered; business affairs are like stringed instruments; each string gets retuned.

藝：得此桃者當告以道要 The one who gets these peaches will become eligible for me to tell him the core of the Way.

呂：天道圓地道方 The way of sky is round; the way of earth is square.

淮：道始於虛霽 The Way originated in utter emptiness.

淮：幽冥者所以喻道而非道也 “Darkness” is used as an analogy to the Way but it is not the Way.

呂：故曰道之真以持身其緒餘以爲國家其土苴以治天下 Thus it is said, “The real part of the Way is used to maintain the self. Its leftovers are used to govern realm and domain. Its dust and dregs are used to govern the world.” [nr]

淮：無爲爲之而合于道無[爲一]言言之而通乎德 It contrives things by contriving nothing, so it harmonizes with the Way. It says things by saying nothing, so it penetrates to the Power.

淮：子之知道亦有數乎 Sir, is there a method to your knowing the Way?

史：公孫龍善爲堅白之辯及鄒衍過趙言至道乃絀公孫龍 Kung-sun Lung was skilful at arguing the subtleties of hardness and whiteness, but when Tsou Yen passed through Chao and spoke of the ultimate Way, Kung-sun Lung was dismissed.

b. restricted sense the way things ought to go

淮：夫釋大道而任小數無以異於使蟹捕鼠蟾蜍捕蚤不足以禁姦塞邪 Now to discard the great Way and depend on petty techniques cannot be distinguished from sending a crab to catch mice or a toad to catch fleas. It is insufficient to prevent treachery or block wrongness.

衡：盜賊莊躑橫行天下聚黨數千攻奪人物斷斬人身無道甚矣宜遇其禍乃以壽終 Bandit Chih was stern and arrogant, went all over the world, assembled a band of several thousand and attacked people and stole their things, chopped people to pieces, and did extremely bad things. He ought to have met the evil consequences of that—but he died in old age.

戰：釋趙養民以諸侯之變撫其恐懼伐其懦慢誅滅無道以令諸侯天下可定 “If we let Chao alone, provide for our people, utilize the occasions of emergencies in other states to calm their fears, attack the insolent and destroy evildoers, the world can be stabilized.

Tuan Kuei said to the king of Hân, "When we divide the land we must be sure to get Chêng-kao." The king said, "Chêng-kao is barren land. There is no way We could make use of it." Tuan Kuei said, "Not so. Your servant has heard that a thing only one li across that will wield the leverage of a thousand li is advantageous terrain. And the thing that will let even ten thousand men conquer an entire national army is failure to anticipate. Let YM adopt YS's proposal and Hân will surely take Chêng." The king approved; he went ahead and accepted Chêng-kao. When it came time that Hân took Chêng, they did set about it from Chêng-kao. 史：大王之威行於山東敵邑恐懼備伏鑿甲厲兵飾車騎習馳射力田積粟守四封之內愁居懾處不敢動搖唯大王有意督過之也 The fearsome reputation of YGM is current east of the mountains. Our poor city fears and lies low in anxiety. We keep our armor in good repair and our weapons sharp. We prepare our chariots and horsemen and practice shooting at the gallop. We put much effort into farming and accumulate grain. We guard all within our four borders. We live in worry and dwell in trembling, not daring to deviate from our course. Let YGM tour and inspect this if you are so inclined.
